91st YEAR, No. 96 ★★ VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 2, 1974 15 CENTS DAILY, 30 CENTS SATURDAY

SUPER-PRIZE TO KAMLOOPS

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Julia Nelson has won $460,000 and her 72-year-old husband Bernard probably has trimmed his last putting green.

Julie, 66, winner of the Irish hospitals sweepstakes superprize draw, said in a telephone interview today her husband will be able to retire as assistant superintendent at a local golf club.

And the retired cook said she probably will buy a larger home.

The Nelsons have a son in Victoria, Kenneth, president of Nelson's Music Ltd.

Winning after buying sweepstakes tickets for 45 years was "such a shock I really don't know what to do with the money."

"I always felt someone had to win and that it might be me but I never thought I'd win."

Mrs. Nelson, who used the nom-de-plume Daisy May, was celebrating at 3 a.m.

The ticket, number JCE 89157, was first out of the drum at the draw on the Cambridgeshire Saturday at Newmarket.

The first ticket is the only one not tied to the horses in the race in which the sweep is based.

In the past the big prize has gone nine times to Canada, three times to the United States, twice to England and once to an Irish ticket-holder.

Over-Runs Everywhere —Barrett

Premier Barrett said today there will be over-expenditures in every government department this year but he is not aware of any unusual over-run in agriculture.

"Naturally there are over-expenditrures as there have been every year through warrants in all departments," said Barrett. "But there is nothing extraordinary in any department to my knowledge."

Langley Social Credit MLA Bob McClelland predicted Tuesday the agriculture department would over-spend its budget by $40 million this year.

"There was only $12 million allotted for the income supplement program in the agriculture department and that already has been over-spent by over $20 million," McClelland told a Vancouver South Social Credit Association meeting.

The charge comes in the wake of a disclosure the human resources department will over-run its $284 million budget by $103 million.

"There are a lot of stories flying back and forth," said Barrett. " . . . Some reporters are spreading them because it is their duty and others are picking it up from the wire and everything."

The premier said he did not plan to respond to those stories by opening the government's books for an interim financial statement on each department's budget to date.

"Public accounts will be available in the spring. There's no need to respond to stories that are going about."

Special warrants — cabinet orders which allow departments to spend money not already approved within the budget — have been used by every government, said Barrett, and there is nothing unusual about the NDP government use of them.

McClelland charged the NDP is on "the wildest spending spree the province has ever seen."

"Barrett's a disaster as finance minister and when the other bills come in for his pie-in-the-sky programs we're going to find ourselves in deep trouble," he said.

OIL PUTTING WORLD ON SKIDS

Turner Fears Recession

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada said today there may be a recession if steps are not taken soon to resolve the problem of oil debts by consuming countries.

His comments at a news conference after a speech to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) were more sombre than recent statements about economic prospects.

In his speech to the 126-member world organization, Turner advocated giving the IMF political power to discipline its members.

He told reporters that there is an awareness among other delegations that the balance-of-payments problems of oil-importing countries can be solved only by co-operation.

Earlier the finance ministers of Britain, France and West Germany voiced fears of an economic crisis paralleling the 1930s. And they urged the U.S. to abandon its fight for lower oil prices as fruitless, and join instead in finding some means of financing the higher costs.

Estimates of the combined oil debt for this year of countries which must import oil run as high as $80 billion.

Turner said this problem "if not resolved properly within six months to a year, could provoke a recession."

He endorsed establishment of a fund which the IMF would operate to lend money to both rich and poor countries with oil debts. There have been several proposals to expand an existing fund set up by the IMF to provide loans at concessionary rates to under-developed countries. The expanded fund, under these proposals, would lend at commercial rates to the rich countries as well.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon told a press conference, meanwhile, that although there is no immediate need to act, "careful study" of so-called recycling schemes would be appropriate.

"Recycling" is a euphemism for persuading the oil-producing countries to lend out their surplus funds.

European officials claimed privately that Simon's statement is a beginning of a new U.S. approach that will "recognize the facts of life" — the main one being that the oil cartel countries will not lower oil prices.

Of major figures at today's meetings, Simon was by far the most optimistic on world economic prospects. "I do not believe the world is in intimate danger of a drift into cumulative recession — although we must be alert and ready to act quickly should the situation change unexpectedly," he said.

The most dismal appraisal of all came from the Italians, the industrial country most heavily impacted by the four-fold increase in the price of oil.

"Without collective action by all the governments concerned," warned Italian Minister of the Treasury Emilio Colombo, "there is a danger of a drift into beggar-my-neighbor policies of the sort that led to the trade wars of the 1930s."

Colombo said flatly that without an oil price reduction, the international financial system would suffer a breakdown. He noted that for the first time in a generation, governments may not be able to satisfy people's expectations for a continuing improvement in living standards, with the risk of serious effects on the social and economic stability of many countries.

WHILE SUMMER has a slightly-soggy last fling in Victoria, the icy fingers of winter are already closing tightly on the rest of Canada. Schoolchildren in Sudbury this morning (above) bundled up in the wake of a four-inch plus snowfall and on the Prairies the mercury dipped to record low temperatures last night in many communities including North Battleford, Swift Current and La Ronge.

Joint Team For Civic Bargaining?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria area municipalities and school boards expect to form a single negotiating team Thursday to bargain with all their employees except school teachers, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

He said Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have already given approval in principle to the plan and the Thursday meeting will set up some mechanism to bring it about.

The single negotiating team would bargain contracts for all police, firemen, office staff and outside workers in the four municipalities.

Custodians and office staff of University of Victoria and schools in Greater Victoria, Sooke and Saanich would also be included. Teachers would continue to negotiate separately with school boards.

The only area reported to be cool on the proposal is the municipality of Saanich.

Mayor Ed Lum said Saanich has expressed an interest in the plan but it has not yet been approved by the full council.

He said he personally favors some sort of joint approach this year but on a modified basis to cover wages only and not fringe benefits.

Lum said he hoped a joint bargaining process would not disrupt what he called "our good negotiating relationship" with Saanich employees.

Saanich had the least to gain by joint bargaining but was in a mood to co-operate, he said.

Mayor Pollen agreed the

Border Probe Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada has asked U.S. officials to report on an incident last Sunday in which a Canadian was allegedly taken from the Canadian side of the border by the U.S. border patrol and made to pay a fine in the United States.

"God damn it, we are not going to be treated like a banana republic. It is embarrassing and totally unnecessary," Saskatchewan MP Les Benjamin said after he raised the matter in the Commons.

Benjamin said the incident occured as Ed Gross, a farmer from Glen Bain, Sask., and his passenger, Ira Heebner, landed in their private aircraft on a grass strip airport about 10 miles south of Estevan, Sask.

"A U.S. border patrol officer, in his cruiser, crossed the border to Canada, turned down a lane and came 100 to 150 feet into Canada and then the border patrol officer yelled 'who gave you permission to land on this strip'?" Benjamin told the Commons.

Benjamin said Gross was escorted to the U.S. customs depot and, threatened with confiscation of his aircraft, had to leave a $25 deposit on an alleged $1,000 fine.

TALKING BOMBS URGE CONVICT UPRISING

ROME (Reuter) — Sophisticated "talking bombs," which urged prisoners to rebel against their guards, exploded outside jails in Rome, Milan and Naples during the night, police said.

The devices, which caused no injuries, were wired to tape recorders and loudspeakers, they said.

Before one blast, loudspeakers urged prisoners to "rebel and seek freedom."

"A bomb will explode shortly," the voice said. The explosion then shattered a few windows in the jail.

Venezuelan Oil Tax Hike Nets $440M

CARACAS (AP) — The Venezuelan government is raising the tax it collects on exported oil, and a spokesman says the increase will add $440 million to its oil earnings this year.

Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentin Hernandez announced Tuesday that the tax on oil produced in Venezuela, mostly by American companies, is being increased 4.7 per cent, or 41 cents a barrel — from $8.65 to $9.06 — retroactive to last Jan. 1. Monday, it was announced the tax would rise about 3.5 per cent.

The companies include Shell, Gulf, Mobil, Texaco, Sun Oil and Exxon's Creole Petroleum.

Earlier Tuesday, Kuwait took a series of moves that will mean a net increase of 75 cents a barrel in the average cost of oil produced in the Persian Gulf sheikdom in the last quarter of this year by Gulf and British Petroleum, a Gulf spokesman announced in New York.

NEWS BRIEFS

First-Day Recall

DETROIT (AP) — One day after 1975 models officially went on sale, Chrysler Corp. said today its dealers are being notified of a potential accelerator-pedal problem with some of 55,862 early-production cars because of a bulge in the carpet or rubber mat. The cars affected are Plymouth Valiants and Dodge Darts.

Athens Protests

ATHENS (CP) — Greek students led by extremist Communist elements surged through Athens Tuesday night protesting the fate of Cyprus and denouncing United States policies for that embattled island republic in defiance of a government ban.

More Work Stoppages

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost due to work stoppages in July continued the record pace being set this year with an estimated 1,092,570 man-days lost, the federal labor department said Tuesday. The total brings the amount of time lost so far this year to 6.3 million man-days.

Immigrant Clamps

CANBERRA (Reuter) — the Australian government announced today it has temporarily suspended its immigration program to ease the country's unemployment problem.

Siege Continues

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The siege of the Venezuelan consulate enters its sixth day with no sign of freedom for United States diplomat Barbara Hutchison and six other hostages and no indication that the Dominican government will meet the terrorists' demands.

A BUSY DAY ONE FOR RENTALSMAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rentalsman Barrie Clark had a busy first day in office Tuesday.

Clark said his office received 600 telephone calls and between 50 to 100 visitors. The 20 telephone lines were jammed and another 10 lines were ordered.

The calls were handled by 14 officers, two deputy rentalsmen and Clark who has wide power over landlord-tenant matters under the new Landlord and Tenant Act, which also became law Tuesday.

Most of the calls were seeking information, but at least 100 were handled "in a mediation sense," he said.

No orders were issued in the first day of operation, but a number of the cases were not entirely resolved.

"I would anticipate that some further investigations are going to be required," he added.

"There were no crisis situations where we put to use any of the strong powers. None would be used on a first call."

He didn't think the hectic pace would last long, he said.

$1 Billion Mess Charged

Times News Services

An unpublished report written for a federal government advisory body states Canadian agricultural policy is a mismananaged "hodge-podge" of programs that costs the public more than $1 billion a year, according to the Toronto Daily Star.

In a copyright Ottawa story, the newspaper quotes the report as saying that consumers pay half that amount through artificially high food prices shoved up by farm marketing boards and the remainder through taxes that go to aid farmers.

The 114-page report was written by J. D. Forbes, professor of marketing at the University of British Columbia, for the Canadian Consumer Council, the paper says.

It adds that the report was submitted last May but the government has delayed publication. The report was "leaked" to the paper, it says.

A committee of the House of Commons will hold an inquiry into egg marketing in Canada, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

He made the announcement minutes after Liberal MPs rejected a Conservative motion to refer the egg controversy to the standing committee on health and welfare. (See also Page 14.)

Outside the Commons, Agriculture Minister Gene Whelan, who had stated earlier that he would recommend "some form" of public inquiry into egg marketing, indicated he would prefer an independent commissioner, under the Public Inquiries Act, to conduct the inquiry.

"I am not scared of an investigation," he assured the Commons.

Conservationists Slam Dam Plan

DUNCAN — The B.C. Wildlife Federation is "appalled" at the way the Chemainus Dam project has been handled by the provincial government, federation president Ed Mankelow said here Tuesday.

A four-member action group of the federation told a meeting of 120 citizens and conservationists that the provincial cabinet committee hearing did not include any ratepayer, conservation, federal fisheries or regional district representative.

The action group's position paper said the North Cowichan municipal presentation to the cabinet was "replete with misinformation most of it in their favor.

Mankelow, and the 40,000-member federation wants the whole issue turned over to the Environment and Land Use Committee Secretariat for a thorough analysis.

Some provincial cabinet members may be ashamed of the decision to allow the dam on the Chemainus, Mankelow said.

"I have been told this wasn't a very popular decision in the cabinet," Mankelow said.

The meeting was called by Mankelow and three other members of an "action group."

The initial stage of the dam project, which would be built near the confluence of Solly Creek, would flood an area of 45 acres and provide water for some 12,000 people at a cost of $2.7 million.

"I feel personally this was a political decision rather than a decision on merit," said Art Morton, another member of the action group which includes his brother, Ralph, and Walter Latter, past president of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club.

When asked what the ordinary citizen can do about the situation, Mankelow replied:

"I'm a great believer in letters" and added that the present provincial government has demonstrated they can be swayed by public opinion.

Return Tickets, Amnesty Sought by Indian Caravan

Times News Services

TORONTO — Indian protesters from across Canada, rebuffed in their attempts Monday to storm Parliament Hill, want the federal and provincial governments to share the costs of their trip back home. (What's behind the Indian militancy? See Page 50)

And representatives of Ontario Indians involved in the protest asked the provincial government Tuesday to protect them from any prosecution that might result from the Ottawa melee in which soldiers and police drove them from the House of Commons grounds.

Those were among requests made by the Ontario group as it met provincial Solicitor-General George Kerr asking for an independent investigation of the "unnecessary violence" by police.

Kerr would not say whether the group would be protected from prosecution.

He said in an interview later he would ask federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand for a full report on the Ottawa demonstration.

"I want it confirmed one way or another," he said.

On the other requests, he said the province does not want to give Ottawa the impression it was interfering in its jurisdiction and that he would seek an assessment from the provincial cabinet today.

The Indians reasoned that the governments should share the costs of telephone, food, accommodation and transportation back to their home — that would mean Vancouver for more than 100 of the 500 members of the caravan.

"The human rights of the Native People's Caravan participants were abrogated," said Peter Kelly, elected representative of the Chiefs of Treaty 3 area in Northwestern Ontario.

The expenses now are the responsibility of government because the Indians were simply exercising their rights to "air their views and discontent with the government," he said.

A precedent had been set, he said, when the province paid Indian telephone bills during their occupation of a park in Kenora, Ont., this summer.

Kelly said most of the caravan participants are unemployed and need financial help to get back home.

Militant young Indians, meanwhile, planned future action Tuesday in a warm, well-stocked Ottawa building while government leaders criticized them for their part in Monday's violent clash on Parliament Hill.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said the 200 Indian men, women and chil-

Rural Tax Haven End Sought

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The provincial government should end the tax haven for property owners in provincially-administered land adjacent to communities, Mayor Harold Moffat of Prince George said Tuesday.

He told the legislature's property tax study committee there are about 25,000 people who have such a haven around this central B.C. city.

The haven exists because of a long-standing government policy to levy general purpose taxes on land and improvements in unorganized territory at a flat 10 mills based on property assessment of about 30 per cent of actual value and improvements on 75 per cent of actual value.

This compares with a homeowner here who pays taxes at 37½ mills based on about the same land and improvement assessment.

Mayor Moffat said rural residents have been subsidized by urban taxpayers for their police, road and other services and this is one of the main reasons amalgamations are difficult.

"I submit that the residential taxpayer in the city should be paying less, not more, for the same services received by the residential taxpayers in the unincorporated areas," the mayor said.

He told Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer it would be unfair to suddenly increase taxes in unorganized areas but they should be gradually brought in line with urban taxes.

Jack Hardy, administrator for the district of Terrace said his district believes that if local governments are responsible for services to property, senior governments should be responsible for services to people.

He and Terrace mayor Gordon Rowland said municipalities should not be responsible for school, hospital or welfare costs — particularly communities with fast-growing populations.

They said if it had not been for a change in commercial and industrial assessment levels last year, Terrace would have been bankrupt.

Bert Simmons, a director of the Peace River-Liard regional district, told the committee that interior municipalities are not getting a fair share of resource taxes collected by B.C. in their areas.

"We would recommend that the $30 resources grant paid to renters and owners be discontinued.

"A far better use of this money would be to provide for the amenities of life to residents who live in remote communities of this province where most resources are extracted."

TIME WILL DECIDE FUTURE FOR NUNS

"Father Time" will attend to the future of the Society of the Love of Jesus, Mr. Justice H. C. McKay said in B.C. Supreme Court Tuesday in the 16th day of trial for control of the society.

He was commenting on a question put to society president Sister Leonette Hoesing by defence counsel Cecil Branson:

"What do you see now as the future of the society?" relative to allegations by plaintiff Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd and four other sisters that Sister Leonette was trying to destroy the society.

"I know what my hopes were, but at this point I don't honestly know, except deep down I wish we could have a flourishing community. . . ."

McKay asked her if dissolution is inevitable.

"It seems almost inevitable . . . I've always been under the impression I didn't know how that could be done," the sister replied.

"You could almost say Father Time will take care of that. You have no young . . ." the judge replied.

He was referring to the fact that most of the remaining members of the society, which operates St. Mary's Priory extended care hospital at Colwood, are elderly sisters, the youngest well into middle age.

Mother Cecilia, 85, leads what has been referred to as the traditional faction of the Society of the Love of Jesus, which she founded originally in the Anglican Church in 1922 and transferred to the Roman Catholic faith in 1937.

The modern faction, represented by Sister Leonette claims the five sisters led by Mother Cecilia lost their claim to be members of the society about 1969.

"In my mind, they had dismissed themselves from the priory" by refusing to obey orders to return to duties there and give up Mother Cecilia's animal shelter work, Sister Leonette said.

She said there had been a breakdown of community life among the sisters at the priory. "I didn't think anyone could live under those circumstances much longer."

Under cross-examination by counsel for the plaintiffs Hugh McMillan, Sister Leonette admitted being discouraged by events.

"That's putting it mildly . . . But I also knew someone had to hang in there" if problems of the religious community were ever to be resolved.

At one point in Tuesday's sitting, McKay said he was not interested in the defence reply to allegations of improper use of the priory by outside groups such as Mt. Marty-University students from Yankton, South Dakota, who came here with chaperones to study marine biology and slept together on one occasion in a common room.

"I thought they were an outstanding group of men and women," Sister Leonettle told the court.

When Branson asked her about other incidents referred to by the plaintiffs, McKay said this was "much ado about nothing.

"I had the chief justice ask me what in the world kind of case I was sitting on, from reading the headlines."

McKay said he understood the priory, through the church's ecumenical movement, was being used for what Sister Leonette considered legitimate purposes. It was not necessary to pursue the subject, he said, and Branson dropped it.

The trial is expected to continue at least through this week, with night sittings planned for Thursday and Friday.

Yehudi Buried At Duncan

The body of two-year-old Yehudi Prior was buried in Mountain View Cemetery in Duncan following a graveside service conducted by Rev. Allan Kerr at 11 a.m. today.

The child, whose body was discovered four miles from his parent's wilderness camp Sunday six days after he went missing, died of exposure, an autopsy has revealed.

The report also said the boy had been dead "at least three days and probably longer".

Acting coroner Dr. R. R. Wilson set Oct. 23 for an inquest. It will begin at 7:30 p.m. in Duncan Law courts.

A spokesman for the Shawnigan Lake RCMP said Yehudi's parents, William, 25, and Ann, 24 and his two-month-old brother Pollen have moved from their forest camp and are now living with friends in Shawnigan Village.

The spokesman said officers and dogs Tuesday traced the child's movements from the time he first went missing about 3 p.m. Sept 23. Police now feel the child must have walked along a little-used logging road four miles before cutting into the bush and stumbling into a pool of water near Holt Creek about 80 feet from the road.

Human Resources Minister Norman Levi today refuted a statement in the Times Tuesday that his department had moved the family.

"The decision to move is something they (the Priors) made on their own."

He said his department was satisfied the baby Pollen was in good health and adequately cared for.

Levi said there was "a limit to what kind of interference we can have in people's lives.

NEWS CONFERENCE held by members of the Native People's Caravan in Ottawa Monday elicited claims of "a premeditated assault" on Indian demonstrators on Parliament Hill during the opening of Parliament earlier that day. One of the leaders of the caravan, Louis Cameron (fourth from left) of Kenora said the mounties decided in advance of the demonstration that force would be used.

most the municipalities could achieve this year would be a joint contract on wages—with fringe benefits negotiated separately by municipalities.

Oak Bay Mayor Brian Smith agreed.

"The most we can hope for this year is a common agreement on wages and possibly on a cost-of-living clause, if there is one," he said.

Esquimalt Mayor Art Young said his council agreed to the joint bargaining concept and he would support the proposal.

Municipal councils of Central Saanich, Sidney and North Saanich have also been invited to the meeting Thursday.

Tom Smith, regional staff representative for CUPE, said the union has had no notification of plans by employers to bargain jointly.

"It seems to be a rather late time to start to do this," Smith said.

He said negotiations on new contracts have already begun in several cases. The union would have liked to be informed before this of plans for joint bargaining, he said, so they could consider what it would involve.

Greater Victoria school board chairman Peter Bunn said he and superintendent of schools Jake Longmore "were the initiators of the concept" of a joint bargaining team.

Bunn said he met with Mayor Pollen two years ago at the time of CUPE's three-week strike against the school district, and suggested the idea.

"Since then there have been copious meetings," Bunn said, mainly at the administrative level and one between the four-core mayors and himself.

He said he hoped Thursday's meeting "will show a completely united front with a single negotiator."

Greater Victoria School District appears to be the employer singled out again for CUPE's attack, Bunn said.

"We're obviously being set up as the patsy again," he said. "We have to act."

Bunn has called a special school board meeting for Thursday evening to discuss the CUPE problem.

School janitors, CUPE Local 382, have called a meeting for Sunday to discuss their long-simmering dispute over "rating" of schools to equalize workloads. A spokesman said they will consider starting a study session or walkout.

Contracts of teachers will continue to be negotiated directly with individual school boards.

Indians Seek Funds

dren who were driven off the Hill have damaged the Indian cause with their protest.

But Ken Dennis, a spokesman for the Indians said the incident could have been avoided if Trudeau or other officials had come out to hear their demands.

The stage was set for a long siege in the old stone mill.

A local food chain owner donated a truckload of bread, milk, fruit, vegetables and peanut butter; electric stoves were installed and the NCC has ensured that the building, a possible future multi-cultural centre, was warm, well lit and relatively comfortable.

Dave McIntosh, communications adviser to the NCC, said the agency had adopted a "humanitarian, wise and cool" approach to the occupation.

Indian groups across the country threw their weight behind the militants, warning of future, more violent demonstrations if there is no change in government policy.

Chiefs in the Kenora, Ont., region, scene of an armed Indian occupation during the summer, said further acts of violence against the 200 could lead to demonstrations which "may not turn out to be so peaceful."

They called for an end to the "barbaric and primitive tactics" of the RCMP and other forces.

PUBLIC CUPE TALKS SOUGHT

Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell wants contract bargaining between the municipality and the Canadian Union of Public Employees conducted at meetings open to press and public.

But the best her two fellow aldermen would agree to at a council committee meeting today is that the merits of the idea should be debated by the full council Monday night.

Various council members have expressed concern recently over what they see as difficult negotiations coming up with CUPE.

Dowell argued today that one of the levers the union has in contract talks is the public doesn't know what's going on and it's public funds which will have to pay for whatever contract settlement is reached.

Ald. John Goult saw some arguments for open bargaining but Ald. Norm Pimlott said he thinks open sessions would just make progress tougher.

Goult said there might be a tendency for both sides to "grandstand" and it's a question whether it would assist in getting a settlement.

Behind closed doors, as has been the traditional practice, no one's ego is on the line, he said.

Dowell said she hopes that if Oak Bay took a stand for public bargaining, other municipalities would follow.

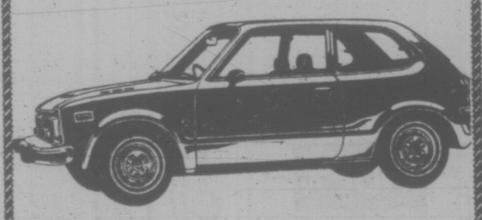
Arriving at work in a jovial mood this morning, Barrett said he would celebrate the day "as always, by working hard for the people."

The premier began his day with a televison interview with Washington based KVOS but said the only unusual feature of the day was a golden rainbow which hung over his home in Esquimalt this morning.

HONDA CIVIC



Here's what the car experts have to say about the Honda Civic:

"Honda Civic was chosen 'Car of the Year' by an overwhelming majority of our voters. Its bright design and practicality give it the potential to be a world-wide people's car. Its function and economy make it a masterpiece of its kind."
Motor Fan (Japan's leading car magazine)

"The Civic's acceleration is more than a match for that of competing 1200 cc sedans, and a few with larger engines as well; 1200 cc in the Civic feels more like the 1600 cc of, say the Datsun 510 or the Toyota Corolla (1600 cc)."
Road and Track — May, 1973

"Many makes talk about small on the outside, big on the inside, but Honda has done it."
Road and Track — May 1973

"The suspension is surprisingly sophisticated for such a tiny package — fully independent on all wheels. All use the McPherson strut principle . . . and lower swinging A-arms. The result is an exceptionally smooth ride for such a small car."
Motor Trend — April, 1973

"How does it go? What's the Japanese word for dynamite?"

the weather

The seasons first major storm which has reversed the weather pattern over the province now lies centered over the northern Gulf of Alaska. The main line of weather associated with the storm moved through the province overnight and dumped from one to two inches on the coast while inland areas were generally below a quarter of an inch. The cooler air which has moved into all regions will keep conditions quite unsettled giving frequent showers along the coast. These will be heavy at times. Inland regions will get a combination of cloud sunshine and showers. A lessening of shower activity will occur late Thursday while colder Arctic air again moves through northern B.C. reaching into the central interior. Temperatures are forecast to be a little cooler in all regions.

Cocke Shuffles Health Services

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reorganization of the provincial health department's structure was announced Tuesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

The four former departments in the ministry — mental health, public health, B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and medical care administration — now are contained in one of two divisions of a single department.

The new divisions will separate medical and hospital services and community health programs.

Purpose of the shuffle "is that we felt that when the department had four separate structures, health care was delivered in an unco-ordinated way," he said.

He expects the new system will be in smooth operation in about a year but "there's got to be a spirit of co-operation (in the civil service) as well," he added.

Deputy ministers from the existing system will be retained in new roles.

When legislation is changed to allow a deputy health minister to be other than a medical doctor, Jim Mainguy will become senior deputy.

Mainguy, formerly assistant deputy in the BCHIS department, now is a consultant to the minister.

Cocke said the medical and hospital programs branch will be responsible for such services as medical care, hospital insurance, administration of government institutions like Riverview Mental Hospital, emergency health (ambulance) services and the new diagnostic and forensic psychiatry services.

The community health program division will cover community public health including tuberculosis and venereal disease control, community mental health and environmental services regarding health.

The minister also said private medical laboratories will be subjected to greater government control through the health department reorganization which will provide a mechanism to take "a closer scrutiny" of the operation of labs.

Laboratory services are a considerable expense item in health care "and it's up to the government, because it pays all the bills, to have a pretty difinitive voice," he said.

Cocke also announced formation of an 11-member Health Advisory Council to advise him on long-range development of health services.

Impasse on Grain

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday his government does not want to introduce legislation to end the western grain handlers dispute until all their chances of a settlement have been exhausted.

It was his understanding that negotiations were still going on and that all possibilities of a settlement were still being explored, he said.

Government House leader Mitchell Sharp said however, the government might interrupt the eight day Throne Speech debate to bring in legislation to end the strike.

Sharp said it was not the government's intention to interrupt the debate, "but I would have to qualify that by saying that if the government does decide to bring in legislation to deal with the western grain handlers' strike, probably the debate would be interrupted for that purpose."

Labor Minister John Munro said several of the companies involved in the dispute have rejected his proposal for settlement on the remaining two outstanding issues.

Munro said he would have to wait to hear from all of the companies before deciding on the next step.

If the proposal is rejected, he said, the government might consider introducing legislation.

GOODMAN TRIES AGAIN

Charles Goodman, (right) retiring this month from the armed forces, is again seeking an aldermanic seat in Saanich.

Goodman who ran unsuccessfully last year, says the main plank in his platform is to end spot zoning and resist the expansion of medium and high density housing into single family neighborhoods.

Elected officials should reflect the views and wishes of the electorate and this, he believes, is not being done by the present aldermen.

On apartments and townhouses he said any new construction must achieve high standards of design and construction with good landscaping.

With this, he supports proposals for a Saanich design panel.

Goodman has been active in the community: on the Saanich advisory planning commission, on the executive of the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association and on the board of management of Victoria General Hospital.

Just One Little Word . . .

A single word could have caused a disruption of the municipal election in Victoria, city council learned Tuesday.

The one word — deputy — was substituted for the word "acting" for deputy or acting mayor, Ald. Alf Hood. The change was made Sept. 12.

He signed the voters list as "deputy" mayor instead of his formal title of "acting" mayor.

And that, Hood told council at its caucus meeting, "could conceivably disrupt the whole vote if there was a challenge."

It was Ald. Mike Young, a lawyer, who first spotted the problem. Any document signed in the name of deputy mayor would be illegal, he said.

No reason was given Sept. 12 for the resolution changing acting mayor to deputy mayor but it was believed that Mayor Peter Pollen wanted someone else to be able to fill in as mayor while he was in town but busy.

Solicitor Jacob de Villeirs said the Municipal Act provides for an acting mayor to fill in for the mayor, but not a deputy mayor.

Council's Sept. 12 resolution was therefore not valid and should be ignored, he said.

But just to make sure council agreed informally that it will rescind its Sept. 12 deputy mayor resolution.

CoL Bonus Rejected

City council decided Tuesday it won't grant a special 14 cents an hour cost-of-living raise to outside workers.

Earlier, council turned down a request by both the inside and outside workers for a $100 a month cost-of-living raise.

Council, at its regular caucus meeting, was told that the 14 cents an hour request would cost $25,000 a month.

City Manager Jim Bramley told council two negotiating meetings have already been held with the outside workers to renew the current contract but they wanted an answer on the cost-of-living, which they wanted dated to July 1.

He said the union hasn't "really substantiated this request" but there had been interim cost-of-living increases in Port Alberni, some mid-island municipalities and Sooke school board.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said council had already decided that city staff salaries have kept pace with the cost of living and "it's one of those years that are very tough for anyone."

Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) business agent Tom Smith said today the 300 outside workers were feeling the effects of the economic climate right now. They felt there should be some adjustment now rather than wait for the contract in 1975."

council wold only make the

Smith said the attitude of council would only make the unions more determined to achieve a 1975 settlement that would "catch them up."

DAIRIES WIN 4-DAY WEEK

A four-day work week will be in effect for 225 workers employed by three Victoria dairies by Dec. 1 under a new contract with the Teamsters Union.

It is part of a new one-year contract which also includes wage increases averaging $36 a week, a fully-paid dental plan and reduction in weekly working hours to 36 from 40 for production workers and to 40 hours from 42½ hours for driver-salesmen.

The dairies involved are Silverwood, Palm and Island Farms.

Wilson said the companies have two months in which to introduce the four-day work week so problems can be ironed out. With proper planning, he said, milk deliveries could still be made five days a week.

Pr. Albert Gun Drama

BORDEN, Sask. (CP) — An RCMP search for two men and two women involved in the shooting of a Prince Albert police officer and the abducting of another officer ended Tuesday night after a brief gunbattle near a Borden grain elevator.

Police said the four, two of whom were escaped prisoners from the Washington State penitentiary at Walla Walla, surrendered to RCMP officers and the hostage was released unharmed. Two children were also found with the fugitives.

The drama began when a Prince Albert policeman, Const. James Kidney, made a routine check of a car bearing Washington licence plates at a downtown service station.

While one of the car's five adult occupants was inside the station, someone inside the car apparently shot and wounded const. Kidney in the arm and hand, severing his finger.

Detective Albert Logue arrived on the scene and was taken hostage at gunpoint.

The man who was in the service station wasn't able to make it back to the car before it left, and was apprehended.

The car was chased along Highways 11 and 5 and, at one point, nearly slammed into a stalled semi-trailer truck near the Borden bridge about 25 miles northwest of Saskatoon.

It then veered down a side road into the Borden campground where the four fled on foot.

Police from throughout central Saskatchewan converged on the area as dogs and helicopters were sent in. One helicopter was hit by a bullet from a magnum-force rifle carried by one of the four, but after a brief descent it went back into the search.

The four were finally cornered by dogs, and after a brief gun battle surrendered to police and released their hostage unharmed.

Police have not released the identification of the four, but the children were reported to be seven and 12 years old.

Border Customs Change

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States government is withdrawing immigration officers from 22 stations on the Canada-U.S. border but the stations will remain open and manned by customs officers, the U.S. embassy said Tuesday.

An official at the embassy said the immigration officers are being transferred from small border posts in the northwest U.S. normally open for 16 hours a day. The posts will be manned by customs officers either for the full 16-hour period or on a reduced, eight-hour basis, he said.

A Canada immigration department official said the move will not have any effect on the operation of Canadian border stations.

$2M Bilk On Wall St.

NEW YORK (UPI) — State Attorney-General Louis Lefkowitz today announced indictment of 17 executives and employees of a bankrupt Wall Street commodities option firm on charges of bilking customers of more than $2 million. He linked the firm to organized crime.

Lefkowitz said in a statement the firm, Collins & Day Group, Inc., operated "in the nature of a 'ponzi' scheme in that the monies provided by later investors were used to make whatever payments were made to the preceding investors for monies due based on transactions."

He added, "this is a typical example of how organized crime takes over a company and milks it to its advantage."

The firm began business in November 1972 on a nationwide basis with an initial capital of $1,000 and went bankrupt in August 1973, he said.

The main commodity dealt with by the firm was silver bullion, Lefkowitz said.

Slow Down and Smooth the Way

Here we go again. Premier Dave Barrett has jumped with both feet into the confused controversy over property taxation and assessment rates. Following civil service predictions of chaos in the new year if municipalities don't apply a special lower mill rate for residential property, he has promised that the provincial government won't allow any "dramatic" tax increases.

By chaos, provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright meant that many homeowners would receive in the mail after the Christmas season a tax bill for triple what they paid last year — all because of the province's rush to put all property on a 100 per cent of market value basis.

The Barrett government began a needed review of the province's property tax system 18 months ago by abolishing the 10 per cent limit on annual assessment increases for several classes of property. Then last spring it moved to put all assessments on a full market value basis.

Previously, assessment was 50 per cent of market value, although tinkering with the rules and special ceilings on annual increases kept assessment levels below that ideal level. Much residential property, for example, now is assessed at only 30 per cent of market value.

An overhaul was needed, and the provincial government has recognized the need. A committee of the provincial legislature now is touring B.C. gathering ideas and listening to experts and laymen on proposals for a revamped tax structure to go with the brand new assessment system.

But the committee is operating with an Oct. 15 deadline hanging over it, while even the government's own think tank wizard, Mason Gaffney, says it should have at least nine months.

Premier Barrett undoubtedly is acting early to forestall public outrage with his promise, months before tax bills go out and we can expect him to repeat it. More's the pity, for the false starts and jerky progress towards a more equitable taxation system in B.C. probably could have been smoothed out if only he'd listened to the experts and civil servants and allowed more time. The property will always be there.

A Senseless Grandstand Play

It was like a page out of the sixties. People lying on the ground holding their heads; riot equipped Royal Canadian Mounted Police wading through the angry crowd, and women and children screaming. Canadian press said it was one of the most violent demonstrations ever witnessed on Parliament Hill.

The Native People's caravan — 300 native Indians who had driven from as far away as Vancouver to protest their treatment by white society — stormed the Centre block with a rage born of 300 years of frustration. And while the dramatics captured the headlines over a lacklustre throne speech they did nothing to enhance or aid just grievances which the Indian people could legitimately carry to Ottawa. The native cause was further tarnished by allowing the Marxist-Leninist supporters into the fray. This far left group shows up at every Ottawa demonstration with the sole aim of provoking violence.

But Prime Minister Trudeau's platitudes that his government would never negotiate under the threat of violence sounds like knee-jerk hindsight now that the dust has settled. Reports said the Indians milled about on the Hill for two to three hours before the trouble started. A government spokesman—most logically Judd Buchanan, the minister of Indian Affairs and Northern Development — might have cooled the situation by listening to the demonstrators' protests. Only a week or so ago Greek Cypriots living in Canada protested the Turkish invasion of Cyprus on parliament hill and received a sympathetic hearing from MPs. Do native Indians, some of whom travelled 3,000 miles, deserve less?

At the same time the shrill cries of "police brutality" and "set-up" from Indian leaders smack of fork-tongued talk. Parliament Hill is under the control of the National Capital Commission — a federal body — and as such it is policed by the RCMP. When postal workers, railway workers or southern Ontario corn farmers bring their protests to the government seat the RCMP is on hand to prevent violence. They do not interfere with protesters unless provoked. When the Indians charged the RCMP line what did they expect — handshakes?

Despite the violence the federal government has agreed to meet with the Indian leaders — an article of faith that should stop other senseless confrontations. Meanwhile, the Indians could shake loose from American activists and Marxist-Leninists. If native grievances are to be solved it will be done by a Canadian government acting for a segment of the Canadian people.

LETTERS FROM OUR READERS

Killing for Pleasure

As a person with 25 years of close association with hunters, ecologists and citizens actively engaged in the environmental movement, I must protest against the shallow thinking and vacuous philosophy of Irston R. Barnes in his "Only Outlaws Kill For Fun" on page 5 of your September 24 edition.

When he equates "murder" with killing animals for "pleasure", how does he define "pleasure"? Are the animals killed for "pleasure" those which supply the steaks and roast beef which he undoubtedly eats with "pleasure"? He is very unlikely actually to need steaks for the sustenance of life.

His definition of all sport as a competition is the typical view of the uneducated by dedicated non-participant addict of hockey and football. By far the greatest majority of participating sportsmen are involved in angling, hunting, skiing, hiking, boating and similar outdoor activities where the participants very largely compete only with their own individual attainments. Of these groups the dedicated hunter has for centuries displayed the most active and perceptive interest and sympathy for the welfare of wildlife. This is inevitable because the hunter, in following his sport, engages in a very close personal relationship with the animals he hunts and, therefore, he develops a perceptive sympathy with and understanding of the animals and their environment.

Without the active concern of hunters and their heavy financial support for the welfare of wildlife, most of these wild animals would long ago have disappeared from the more settled parts of this continent. They would have disappeared before the onslaught of a society which can afford to support people like Mr. Barnes, spinning vacuous moral arguments without any understanding of the real needs of our wildlife and the facts of life and death in nature.

Mr. Barnes' confusion in these matters is most painfully illustrated in his proposed solution to the problem of overcrowded wildlife populations. Here he slides around the problem of "killing" by recommending that "programs should be carried out by professional wildlife personnel". In other words, hire professional killers with no real concern for the causes of overcrowding or the long-term welfare of the animals, but at all cost maintain an ignorant fervor against "killing for pleasure"—whatever that really means.

Although I am no longer a hunter myself, after 25 years of close personal association with individual hunters, their organizations and wildlife agencies I must say that Mr. Barnes is writing high-sounding nonsense about a subject of which he has little real knowledge. — E.H. Vernon, 3420 Bonair Place.

Job Placement

What I have to say concerns the Canadian government's insensitivity to the needs of its own citizens. I am a well-qualified art educator (too well-qualified, in fact). I have been trying to gain permanent employment for the past three years.

I have had no luck in getting the job that I am qualified for. As a matter of fact, I can't even get a job as a dishwasher, since most often the employer's response is: "You wouldn't last long here. Your qualifications are too good," or "Why don't you apply for a teaching job." I have been applying for teaching jobs for the past three years to the point where I am blue in the face.

I personally believe that a qualified creative-minded teacher should be utilized, and is actually necessary to the betterment of our Canadian culture.

The point that I would like to make is this: I owe the government money for student loans incurred while at university. I am unable to pay back these loans, as I am on welfare and have only enough money for food and lodgings for my family and myself. My complaint is that if the government wants me to pay them back, then they should not allow Americans (or other) to take jobs from Canadians. I know, for example, that the art department at the University of Lethbridge is comprised of a majority of instructors from the States. I also know that very recently in my own city, Victoria, an art school has been hiring Americans as instructors. Please don't get me wrong, I am not anti-American. I just want a job.

I love my country and want to stay here, but I am now seriously considering moving to another country for employment. But let it be known that I am willing to move anywhere in Canada if I can obtain a job in my field.

If the Canadian government truly believes in a "just society," then I feel that in my particular case they are not achieving it. — Alexander B. Staples, B.F.A., M.F.A., 1188 Highrock Place.

Sewer Study

Now that $200,000 is available for a sewer study of the Langford-Colwood highlands area, it is trusted that the terms of reference will include serious research into alternatives to another ocean outfall.

A central treatment plant with or without garbage added to the sewer sludge is essential if the end product is to be returned to the land, where it belongs.

Just possibly some of the more remote areas could avoid sewers entirely by use of the so-called Humus Toilet.

All available information regarding the fertilizer situation should be collected from agricultural sources as I gather the outlook is pretty grim.

Unless people make their feelings known, it may be difficult for a political body such as our regional board to do an about-face on the disposal of the valuable wastes of Greater Victoria which up to the present are being lost to the sea through improved outfalls. — Geoff Mitchell, Sea Bluff Farm, R.R. 1.

Dream World

I feel that your editorial saying in effect that Human Resources Minister Norman Levi has seen the light and will now make the welfare bums do some honest work is premature.

He has under intense public pressure said whatever he thought was likely to reduce it, but even former President Nixon did no less. His whole past training, outlook and behavior in office suggests that he is very unlikely to have undergone any sudden conversion to the work ethic.

For example, in your issue for April 11, 1973, there is an article headed "Welfare bums." The subheading is: "So few of them they're not worth the hassle, says Levi." The minister goes on to say: "I have only met about a half-dozen people in my 17 years in this business (as a social worker and parole officer) that wilfully will not work."

If this is the dream world he was living in as recently as last year, it is hardly likely he has emerged from it. But perhaps he would merely say, if pressed, that this earlier statement was "inoperative." — Derek Pethick, 5420 Alderley Road.

MPs Salaries

A recent article in the Times contained a clear and concise description of salaries, working conditions and allowances of Canada's MPs.

The list containing the total paid various officials was headed by a word that could be aptly applied to the Canadian economy if the same old methods of stimulus continue. The word is breakdown.

A provincial premier visiting the U.S. complains that state legislators there were underpaid but on investigation it was discovered that the public insisted that pay increases must be decided by referendum.

Small wonder there is great respect for the parliamentary system. Where else would a boss allow his employees to raise their own salaries?

Some explanation about the 60 hour work week would be more convincing, especially if it were stated to how many weeks in the year 60 hours applies? Does this figure apply to sessions or include social time? Should they charge for social functions? After all, they are much more numerous as elections approach. In my opinion MPs' salary increases result in the hue and cry from all and sundry: "They got theirs, now we are going to get ours."

This response is inevitable when educators, political leaders, etc. reverse exemplary behavior and make a farce of dedication. Police officials tell us the crime rate is increasing alarmingly, especially in the white collar class (where penalties are less severe.)

This trend is traceable to the avarice at the top although there are still many that have the standards of Elizabeth Fry and Florence Nightingale.

A sincere try to turn the existing trend was made in Ottawa but the side effects were too severe or were outside pressures too great? However, if President Ford is successful perhaps it is not too much to say that "hope springs eternal." — R. S. Jones, Victoria.

Amnesty Inapplicable

An article in an American paper warns U.S. Vietnam war draft evaders and deserters who have become Canadian citizens that the recent amnesty may not apply in their case.

They have become aliens, away from the U.S. in order to evade military service during wartime. There is a federal statute barring such aliens from entering the United States.

President Ford said his amnesty does not apply to an individual precluded from entering the U.S. under certain federal laws. Be careful Ameri-Canadians, you will probably be arrested at the border. — R. Burgan, 41 Simcoe.

United Voice

May I commend Jack Scott for the personal stand he has taken and which he reported publicly in his column of September 25. Surely, our "sick" world needs more individuals with the courage of their convictions who are prepared to stand up and be counted.

It may be unknowingly, but Mr. Scott has joined many others who are supporting our crusade against obscenity and pornography — yes, including violence and brutality. The personal boycott is one positive way in which every concerned citizen can participate.

Poor box office receipts, low TV ratings and reduced magazine sales will soon force a change in the present unhealthy situation. Letters of concern to our political leaders will show that there are those who really care, and care enough to do something personally in fighting this evil.

We're troubled too, Jack, but we do not despair in our responsibility of quickening the conscience of the general public to moral decency, and we are encouraged by your stand. — Capt. Stan Ratcliffe, Salvation Army, 769 Pandora.

The Very Moral Salesman

OTTAWA—The Canadian speech in the UN Assembly's general debate, delivered by External Affairs Minister MacEachen rather than the prime minister, is a talented effort to reconcile intense commercialism with an equally fervent desire to be forever on the side of the angels.

Canada has every intention of introducing its particular line of nuclear technology into any part of the world where it can squeeze through the door, regardless of any considerations of political instability. Even where the opening move may be only the gift of an experimental reactor on a foreign aid basis, the ultimate aim is commercial—to pave the way for sales some day in the future.

At the same time, the government quite genuinely wishes this were a safer enterprise. There is no need to doubt the sincerity of the minister's call for better nuclear controls to feel some cynicism about the total approach. It is merely necessary to view in juxtaposition our statements of piety and the instability of the areas where we are prepared to introduce this technology. Ater that, eyebrows rise automatically.

Hard-Headed Position

The basic, hard-headed Canadian position is summed up in these words from the MacEachen speech in New York:

"We have developed a valuable system of nuclear power generation and we believe that nuclear power should not be withheld from those whose energy needs can best be met by this method."

The related problem is recognized frankly: "To devise a system which will allow the dissemination of the benefits of nuclear energy without at the same time contributing to the spread of nuclear weapons."

Admitting the imperfection of existing safeguards, the external affairs minister then put forward the Canadian solution so far as this country's own activities are concerned:

". . . we want to make our nuclear power generating system available to other countries . . . Until more adequate internationally agreed measures are instituted, Canada intends to satisfy itself that any country using Canadian supplied nuclear technology or material will be subject to binding obligations that the technology or material will not be used in the fabrication of nuclear explosive devices for whatever purpose."

This all sounds fine but the final part of this three-step exposition is largely window dressing and it is this aspect of it, the effort to kid ourselves and everybody else, this is distasteful. The reality is somewhat different from the impression the government set out to leave in New York.

Last December, this country signed a contract with the Argentine government to supply that country with a nuclear power station. This summer the necessary financing agreements were settled and, to all intents and purposes, the deal was completed. Canada, of course, insisted upon application of the safeguards of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

The difficulty with all of this, however, is the political instability of Argentina. The government of that country can, with complete sincerity, give all the assurances this country requires. It cannot, however, bind any future regime because it has no way of knowing even what system of government will be in effect in Argentina six months or six years from now.

This is the great difference between areas of political stability and instability.

The United States sent something of a shudder through the international community when Richard Nixon announced, while he was still the president, that Egypt would be supplied with nuclear reactors. The Egyptian government—and the internal political situation in that country—is more stable than the Argentine. The Middle East, however, is an area of much higher risk than South America. The two situations are not precisely comparable but they do touch upon similar issues and problems.

Our own motives—and those of the U.S.—in introducing nuclear technology to unstable areas are largely commercial. That should not obscure the fact that there is, nonetheless, a strong case for doing so. Anything that eases economic problems or prevents their development in the first place tends to contribute to ultimate political stability.

Energy Vital

Energy is vital to economic development and the case for nuclear as opposed to thermal power gengration may be just as strong in some unstable regions as in the stable ones.

The Canadian nuclear deal with Argentina is not, therefore, open to automatic criticism. It can be defended, but it also needs to be recognized that for coolly commercial motives we are prepared to take considerable risks. It would be better not to be too pious in our public statements about these matters. There is really no need to be.

In large part, the MacEachen speech was an exhortation to the world community to find better solutions to the nuclear hazards than exist now. He might have been more effective in his purpose by being blunter and saying:

"We and several other countries intend to make just as much money as we can spreading nuclear technology and we aren't going to be slowed down for a minute by the political instability of our customers. Obviously, there are dangers in that but we are going ahead. If someone can think of some effective safeguards, we are interested."

That blunt approach would not have satisfied any Canadian government, however. As a senior Indian official said wearily during the height of this country's quarrel with his government over their nuclear explosion:

"Canada and India are the most self-righteous countries in the world."

From the Times of October 2, 1914

Market day has met with excellent support. By 10 o' clock this morning several of the stall-holders had completely sold out their supplies. In all there were about 45 producers selling during the morning on the square. Pork sold at 12½ cents a pound, by the whole or half pig and rabbits were selling at 75 cents each. There was a shortage of fresh eggs which sold at 45 cents a dozen and butter at 40 cents a pound. Fresh country cream sold at 30 cents a pint — bottle included. Ducks sold for 23 cents a pound, chicken for 25 cents and broilers from 20 cents upward.

The Revolutionary Who Packs the Mail

By RICHARD GWYN

"What people forget about letter carriers is that it's we who deliver the unemployment insurance and welfare cheques. We know who's cheating. One guy is off in New Brunswick, fishing. Another is living in Australia and has his twin brother cash the cheques. These people make almost as much doing nothing as we do working."

Carl Melzer, 41, a mailman for 10 years, is a revolutionary. Not in any political sense. In fact he hates to go on strike.

"I like people to like me. I enjoy my job," he says.

Melzer, and hundreds of thousands of workers like him, is revolutionary in the pure sense of the word: He's demanding more from society than society wants to give him.

Melzer, his wife and four children live on his take-home pay of $500 a month. Six months ago his fortnightly household budget was $75; today it's $100. To make ends meet, Mrs. Melzer now works part-time in a pharmacy. "For sure I'd prefer she didn't have to work," Melzer says.

The letter carriers' contract ends in January. The union is gearing itself to demand a 25 per cent wage increase. Probably that means a strike, one to add to the list of those that have battered the public: Toronto transit workers, Montreal subway workers, grain handlers, and before them teachers, hospital workers, policemen, firemen.

Melzer's problem, and that of the 2.5 million workers organized into unions, is a basic one. Probably every single reader of this column who has ever watched a letter carrier making his rounds in winter, shoulders hunched against the cold, clambering up unshovelled steps, would agree that Melzer and his buddies deserve a healthy wage increase. But once the strike starts and the mail stops, public opinion will swing right around against the union.

Unions, as a recent Senate committee report pointed out, alone have to fight in public for their wages. Banks raise their interest rates; doctors and lawyers adjust (a nice bland word, that) their fees, and manufacturers and supermarkets up their prices, with at most, a one-paragraph press release.

MUNRO
. . . wants study

This phenomenon, often overlooked, isn't new. What is new is that more and more unions are no longer afraid of public hostility.

Inflation is the obvious cause of union militancy. Union wages, until the July figures, have fallen behind the cost of living.

Behind the dramatic headlines of strikes and of legislatures called into emergency sessions, however, is a far broader and more profound issue.

"The entire hierarchical system, the structure based on the presumption that the more educated you were the more money your earned, is breaking down, in fact it's gone," says John Crispo, one of the country's leading labor experts and dean of management studies at the University of Toronto.

Crispo doesn't defend the traditional wage and salary differentials. "What I am saying is that those differentials once were accepted. They no longer are, and we've got nothing to put in their place except more money for the strongest."

Causes, large and small, for the change aren't hard to find: inflation, the ability of unions to strike against the public and so force governments to intervene, the San Francisco street cleaners who won themselves $17,000 a year, and not least of all, the fact that today street cleaners, or letter carriers are harder to find than doctors of philosophy.

Solutions have been suggested: continuous negotiations, preventive mediation, a public interests disputes commission such as recommended by the Woods Task Force on Labor back in 1969. Labor Minister John Munro wants labor, management and government to study the entire bargaining system.

Crispo favors some of these techniques, particularly the commission—"it would depoliticize the process"—but believes the breakdown has reached the point where only radical solutions will work.

"We are going to have to attack concentrations of power and halt their abuses," says Crispo. He proposed a federal-provincial incomes and cost board that would have authority to examine any sector of the economy—monopolistic industries, professional associations, powerful unions—to determine what their profits, and wages, should be.

Crispo's proposal is, of course, revolutionary. It amounts to a technique for measuring the gap between what each group in society wants and how much society ought to pay.

Melzer's goals are more immediate. "Five years ago we made the same as firemen, policemen, bus drivers. Now we make $5,000 a year less. Policemen do deserve more. Why the others?"

I couldn't answer Melzer's question, nor could I rebut Crispo's analysis of a breakdown in our whole wage structure. It's too early to construct answers: we'd better start, fast, thinking up the right questions. The first step toward doing that is to recognize what's happening.

AYN RAND'S WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE?

Ford Hires an Edsel of Economics

By RICHARD L. STROUT
The New Republic

I confess that Alan Greenspan startles me. He is President Ford's new top economic adviser. I heard Sen. Proxmire ask him questions in an otherwise all but deserted Banking Committee room recently and my astonishment grew. So, I think, did Proxmire's.

Witness testified, without notes, with an earnestness and sincerity that left no doubt of his conviction. At a big financial loss he is leaving his Wall Street consulting firm of Townsend-Greenspan and Co. (where he has been on retainer for 100 corporations among the largest in the country, including almost all of the nation's 10 biggest banks) and he is willing to serve in Washington at a time of economic crisis.

What are his views? That is what is extraordinary.

- He opposes the anti-trust law.
- He opposes the progressive income tax.
- He opposes consumer legislation as an interference with the free economy.
- He subscribes to a form of laissez-faire capitalism that has been elevated into a cult called objectivism. Its leader is controversial author-philosopher Ayn Rand, with a dogma that she terms "rational selfishness" (and that sounds like economic Darwinism). Mr. Greenspan graduated summa cum laude from New York University's School of Commerce, with graduate work at the University of Chicago.

Miss Rand appears to have done more in shaping his views than did Dr. Arthur Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, a former teacher. Bespectacled Mr. Greenspan agrees that his 20-year association with Miss Rand helped to wean him from an earlier liberalism and other "mistaken policies."

"Alan is my disciple philosophically," Russian-born Miss Rand, 69, author of The Fountainhead and Atlas Shrugged, said recently.

To put the thing in context consider recent developments. The world economy and banking system are under great strain. Food is everywhere short and the oil producers have quadrupled the price with the effect of imposing a kind of excise tax of $60 or $70 billion annually on the consumers, at the same time that the producers' extraordinary new income is sloshing about the hard-pressed international exchange system.

In this crisis the United States is theoretically a balance wheel, a stabilizing force; America's GNP is almost one-third of the free world's total GNP. But America is infected with plague too, and is running the highest inflation fever in peace time history. The housing industry is prostrate from lack of capital (Which has been dried up by the anti-inflationary restrictive policies of the banks), and the industrial average of stocks has plunged from a high of 1050 in 20 months to below 700.

RAND

For anybody who went through the '30s it causes shivers. Inflation in Germany, for example, wiped out the middle class and brought Hitler. Times have changed. In those days on the American streets the threadbare poor sold apples for a nickel; they would charge a quarter today.

And so Alan Greenspan comes to President Ford. He will help to guide and direct his economic course. He has been confirmed as chairman of the three-man Council of Economic Advisers by the Senate without a recorded vote and with only three senators speaking.

Of the 10 men who have been CEA chairman since the Employment Act of 1946 created the council "to promote maximum employment, production and purchasing power," Greenspan is only the second without a Ph.D. (possibly a good thing) and he is far and away the most conservative. Perhaps conservative isn't the word. Under ideological relativity if you go far enough around the circle you emerge as a radical. How Mr. Greenspan squares his practical business counsel with his laissez-faire theories I don't know, but his writings and testimony make him sound like a fundamentalist mystic.

"The entire structure of antitrust statutes in this country is a jumble of economic irrationality and ignorance," he wrote in 1962. "It is the product: a) of a gross misinterpretation of history, and b) of rather naive, and certainly unrealistic, economic theories."

As an example he argued that "the control by Standard Oil at the turn of the century of more than 80 per cent of refining capacity made economic sense . . ."

Why not, he asked? Competition takes care of trusts if you leave them alone; this happens by a natural process for "laissez-faire is the most efficient and productive of all possible economic systems."

Mr. Greenspan could have changed his views since then but showed no sign of it as he testified before the astonished Sen. Proxmire.

Mr. Greenspan is now part of a monolithic group of business-oriented economic advisers that Mr. Ford inherited from his predecessor: economic counsellor Kenneth Rush, former head of Union Carbide; Treasury Secretary William Simon, former partner of Salomon Brothers; Budget Director Roy Ash, former president of Litton Industries; William Eberle, director of the Council on International Economic Policy, former president of American Standard, Inc. There is also shrewd, pipe-smoking Arthur Burns, whose mild conservatism seems almost radical in this group. Dr. Burns thinks that stiffer antitrust law enforcement would help stop inflation, for example, a view rejected by chairman Greenspan, his former pupil.

To find somebody in high office these days who opposes the graduated income tax has a quaint nostalgia that is rather charming. Back in the Civil War there was a small income tax, but the Supreme Court called it unconstitutional, five to four, in 1894. Mr. Justice Field declared "The present assault upon capital is but the beginning. It will be but the stepping-stone to others, larger and more sweeping, till our political contests will become a war of the poor against the rich."

The 16th Amendment in 1913 legalized the tax and seemed to settle the matter. But it left some unhappy. Mr. Greenspan, meet Justice Field.

KEEP ONE EYE ON THE COP

By GALE GARNETT

Recently there has been much talk throughout Canada about lowering our speed limits. Studies precipitated by a particularly hairy Labor Day weekend have shown that the U.S. highway death tolls have dropped appreciably since the speed limit in the States was set at 55 m.p.h.

I just drove the New York state highways from Buffalo to Manhattan. I've also driven, since the 55-mile limit went into effect, through Massachusetts, Michigan, Connecticut, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Let me assure you that nobody on those U.S. highways is doing 55. Oh sure, those doll-like octogenarians on a Sunday drive still do 40. Everyone else, however, is doing the same 65 to 85 that they always did.

If that's the case, why has the highway mortality rate gone down? Elementary, my dear Stirling Mosses — everybody's watching for the police. Watching for the police entails paying attention to the road. In front of you, behind you. To either side. Paying that kind of attention automatically produces a more alert kind of driving.

It also demands that the driver doesn't take the car to a speed that he or she isn't driver enough to handle. Driver may have to slow down gracefully if a police car comes into view. Swerving and slamming on the brakes won't do — you have to be able to coast down easy by getting off the gas. Anything more frantic than that and you could get busted, my friend.

And what of the busters, the police? How does the U.S. highway patrol handle the 55-mile limit?

As near as I can tell it's sort of a pact they've made with the drivers. "You exceed the limits carefully, drive well and slow down when you see me and I won't give you a ticket or stop you."

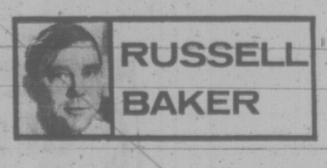
The threat of being stopped is what has lowered the highway fatalities. Why is it that we seem to need that sort of policing? Not just while driving. People stop eating unhealthy foods after a medical warning. They exercise for the same reason, once they are half immobilized from years of not doing so. They cut down on cigarettes or stop smoking entirely when others wish them to stop, or when it's forbidden, or when they have a bit of trouble breathing.

In short, I can only conclude that we seldom do anything simply because it would be good for us, but rather because we'll get in trouble if we don't.

Maybe I've misread what I saw on the highways of the U.S. and what it means. All I know is that nobody, including me, was doing 55, but most people were doing some pretty fine and considerate driving. Much better driving than we do when there's no danger of "getting into trouble."

Toronto Star

Psst. How's Your Health?



He is a big blonde guy who looks like he might have played some football in college and he is sitting there in the office when I get back from being beaten up in The Case of the Dissonant Tango.

"They tell me you're an outmoded old private eye with a battered heap and too much integrity," he says. "Get to the point," says I.

He says his name is Ford and he is president of the United States. "Sure," says I, "and my name is Sam Spade and I'm the cracker of The Maltese Falcon Case."

He believes me. "Actually," I tell him, "my name is Philip Marlowe and I'm the cracker of the Lady in the Lake Job." He believes that, too. I decide maybe he really is Ford.

Pretty soon I am tooling my heap up to San Clemente to solve the Nixon Health Mystery. A guy wearing a business suit and an affidavit face stops me at the gate. A heater bulging from his hip makes him a secret service agent, so I say, "How's the boss feeling these days?"

"Who wants to know, Shamus?" he asks.

I tell him I cannot reveal my client's identity but he's a man in position to transfer secret service agents from California to the Bozeman, Mont., field office, and park my heap in a clump of oleander bushes to give the author time to cook up some plot action.

Pretty soon out comes this bright-eyed Jasper who says his name is Bebe. "Don't tell anybody where these came from," he says, slipping me a sheaf of medical charts which look almost as bad as the Dow Jones trend for the past six months.

Back in L.A., I put the Bebe documents in a bus station locker when suddenly the phone rings.

"This is Eddie Cox speaking, Spade or Marlowe or whoever you are," he said. "Don't believe those medical charts, understand?"

"You mean the big guy is really in the pink, Eddie?" I asked.

"He's worse than the charts indicate," said the voice. "Much, much worse. Get me?" the phone clicked dead.

I drove home. He was on the bathroom floor. I rolled him over and didn't recognize him, but I realized he was as sick as a man can be. A note stuffed in his lapel buttonhole said, "If you think this man is sick, you ought to see Nixon."

Somebody was playing rough. I throw some water on my face, get in the heap, drive to London and park in a clump of palm trees outside the American embassy. Three hours later Ambassador Walter Annenberg comes out.

"There's a sick man on my bathroom floor and I want to know who put him there," I tell Annenberg. Annenberg says it can't be Nixon. "I just talked to him on the phone. His voice was firm and he seemed completely normal to me," says His excellency.

I am suddenly joined by a big man with rich eyes. He speaks in a aerosol hiss. "You don't know me, Spade, or Marlowe, or whoever you are, but the name is Abplanalp. I'm just going to say it once so listen carefully. Annenberg doesn't know what he's talking about." He is gone.

I drive all night and wind up sitting in the heap in a clump of bayberry bushes outside the Washington home of Dr. Walter Tkach. I grab him on the way to the infirmary.

"How's President Nixon's health, Sawbones?" I ask.

"We have never had a president in better health," says he.

"Then why do Bebe, Eddie and Abplanalp tell me he's lower than the Dow Jones?"

"They're perfectly right," says Tkach.

"How is it if we've never had a president in better health he's too sick to say how he feels?"

"Simple," says Tkach. "He's not president any more."

I am sitting in the Oval Office telling Ford I have cracked the case. "This mystery is so complex," I tell him, "that it can never be solved. There is only one man alive who could have masterminded a mystery as impenetrable as this."

"Professor Moriarity?" asks Ford.

"Richard Nixon," I tell him. "And he would have to be in good health to do it?" Ford asks.

That depends on how you define good health," I say.

He believes me.

Housing Situation Worsening

OTTAWA (CP) — Benefiting from the bulge in housing starts late last year, homebuyers had more houses to choose from in August than they did a year earlier.

But the sharp drop in housing construction in recent months indicates a growing shortage.

A Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. survey reveals housing completions in the first eight months of the year were 127,827, about three per cent higher than the corresponding figure last year. This includes a 5.4-per-cent jump in new single-family homes and a 3.1-per-cent increase for rental units.

With this healthy completion record, the number of unoccupied houses and duplexes was 3,017 at the end of August, up 17. 4 per cent from the same time last year, CMHC said.

But urban housing starts in August were 14,857, about 24-per-cent down from the same month last year. For the first eight months, urban starts were 121,968, nine-per-cent down from the corresponding period in 1973.

Dictaphone Files Suit

RYE, N.Y. (CP) — Dictaphone Corp. has filed suit in United States federal court to enjoin a tender offer by Northern Electric Co. Ltd. of Montreal to gain control of Dictaphone, charging the Canadian firm with fraud in its purchases of Dictaphone stock.

The suit also charged Northern Electric with making serious errors in its tender offer made Sept. 24, and subsequently filed with the securities and exchange commission.

Last week, Dictaphone's board of directors labelled the Montreal company's $12-per-share offer "inadequate" and unanimously urged shareholders to reject it.

Dictaphone, which has major manufacturing facilities in Bridgeport, Conn., and Mountain View, Calif., is a manufacturer of dictating machines and automatic telephone answering systems and other products.

Northern Electric is the equipment maker in Canada and is 90 per cent owned by Bell Telephone of Canada.

TODAY'S GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally higher today in moderate activity on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Rapeseed, barley and feed wheat were strong, while most other commodity prices hovered near Tuesday's closing prices.

Tuesday's volume of trade was 423,000 bushels of feed wheat, 1,422,000 of oats, 2,562,000 of barley, 115,000 of corn, 1,945,000 of rye, 504,000 of flax, and 3,374,000 of rapeseed.

CHICAGO (AP) — Record cold again penetrated sections of the Middle West, causing a sharp demand for farm commodity futures on the Board of Trade Wednesday.

Following a day of profit-taking, soybeans again closed with a limit advance of 30 cents a bushel. Soybean oil advanced the limit of 100 points and soybean meal, up the limit of $10 a ton early, closed with a gain of about $8. Wheat futures advanced the limit of 20 cents a bushel, and corn rose nearly nine cents. One option of oats closed the six-cent limit higher.

Demand was very heavy in the soybean complex on the opening, then eased. Trade was active and mixed in the complex until the final bell.

There was some weakness in 1975 corn contracts for a time, but it dissipated in a fast flurry of buying activity near the close. Cold weather also was a concern of corn and oats futures buyers.

Wheat futures ranged from four to 15 cents a bushel through most of the session, then pushed to the limit as shorts tried to liquidate positions.

Markets on Skids—and Accelerating

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

The news gets worse as the year gets older for stock exchanges in Canada.

Trading on the Vancouver exchange totalled only about 21 million shares in September, down from 51 million the previous September, and the average daily trade of just over 1 million shares was looked upon as something approaching a disaster for the British Columbia brokerage industry.

Break-even level is estimated to be a daily trading average of 3 million shares.

In Toronto, total volume in September was about 36 million shares, down from 49 million the previous September.

Value of trading in Toronto was about $264 million for the month, down from $539 million a year earlier. Average daily trading was worth under $13 million in September. The break-even level for Ontario brokerage firms is estimated to be $23 million. There hasn't been a $23 million day since April.

While the market news has been grim all year, it gets worse with each passing quarter.

Total value of all Canadian stock trading (Toronto, Montreal and Vancouver) was $2.58 billion in the first quarter of 1974, fell to $1.55 billion in the second quarter and plunged to $1.21 billion in the third quarter just completed.

Volume on the three exchanges was 510 million shares in the first quarter, 317 million in the second and 258 million in the third.

All numbers involving September results are preliminary figures.

In the third quarter (July to October), the Toronto industrial index fell 16 per cent, the gold index was down 19 per cent, the base metal index fell 16 per cent and the western oils plunged 27 per cent.

At the same time, the Dow Jones in New York fell about 22 per cent.

There is no indication of a turnaround.

The Dow Jones industrial average is near a 12-year low. The TSE industrial index is near a four-year low.

The value of shares traded on the three major Canadian exchanges was down 51.4 per cent from the previous September. Volume was down by 42 per cent.

The TSE industrial index is down more than 30 per cent from its 1974 high The Toronto gold index is 40 per cent below its high for the year.

Its western oil index is 50 per cent below its 1974 high and the base metal index is down about 40 per cent from its peak this year.

While the market is in a distressing slide, the over-all performance on the exchanges this year will be bolstered by a comparatively strong showing in the early months.

On the year, volume on all exchanges is down only 7.6 per cent from the first nine months in 1973 and cumulative trading value is off 20.6 per cent.

Toronto nine-month volume is down 5.9 per cent and value is down 21.9 per cent.

In Montreal the volume was off 19.3 per cent and value down 21.4 per cent.

Vancouver volume is off 3.6 per cent but value is up 0.3 per cent, due mainly to the PWA takeover bid through the exchange.

The nine-month totals are not severe but brokers are greatly concerned about the recent erosion in stock values because the pace of the slide seems to be increasing.

The stock industry has asked the federal government for some form of relief. Among the suggestions being considered by Ottawa is a plan to make the first $1,000 in dividends exempt from taxation.

Polyethylene Price Rises In Ethylene Drought

WINNIPEG (CP) — Seaforth Plastics Ltd. production has increased four-fold in the last 2½ years and the company now is looking for a production total of more than 10 million pounds in 1975.

Although Winnipeg is out of the mainstream of petroleum and its derivative products, Seaforth is one of the major producers of polyethylene packaging products in Canada. Its plant produces more than eight million pounds of products each year.

A subsidiary of Crown-Zellerbach Paper Co. Ltd., Seaforth's 46,000-square-foot plant will be expanded by 20,000 square feet this year.

Its main product is polyethylene film used for plain and printed bags for bread, garbage and garments.

The major ingredient of the plant is ethylene, used as a base for products such as anti-freeze and with the present shortage of ethylene, the price of the raw material is steadily increasing.

"The shortage of ethylene is world-wide," Mark Burggren, plant manager said. "The shortage of resin base has shown already and the price for raw material is astronomical.

"We get our resin from CIL Ltd. Edmonton, which is an old plant working to capacity. There is a plan for expansion, but even if it goes through, it will be 2½ years before we feel the result.

"The cost of producing polyethylene has more than doubled in the past two years."

But the demand is also growing and to help meet that demand for packaging of food and clothing products, Seaforth is installing two new see-through bag machines. One is a $500,000 six-color print press and laminator which will be capable of turning out three million pounds a year. In combination, the two machines will turn out 80 million bread bags annually.

And at a present cost of 1½ to two cents a bag to the bread company, that represents a large revenue base for Seaforth.

Burggren said the plastics industry is a "growth industry" increasing about 15 per cent annually. It is such a versatile industry, he said, that packaging companies find themselves in competition with such manufacturers as airplane and automobile producers as well as furniture manufacturers and producers of a variety of products and specialties.

Despite the competition, Seaforth's Winnipeg plant continues to grow.

Seaforth took over the former Union Carbide plant from CIL Ltd., Edmonton and now shops the bulk of its products to distributors from Alberta to Thunder Bay and some east to the Maritimes. Among the seven major producers of products from polyethylene, Seaforth rates number one in producing and distributing.

China's Birthday a Carnival

By JOHN BURNS
Special to Times

PEKING — Dazzling fireworks displays lit up the sky over Peking last night to bring a spectacular finish to a day of celebrations marking the 25th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic on Oct. 1, 1948.

More than 100,000 people packed into the city's biggest stadium to watch a two-hour extravaganza that mixed fireworks with football and a massed display by children, while tens of thousands of others enjoyed similar spectacles at three other locations. Perhaps a million more crowded rooftops and sidewalks throughut the city to watch the fireworks from afar, enjoying a spectacle that had fallen into desuetude in recent years after being a regular feature of National Day celebrations for the republic's first two decades.

Fireworks, mounted at a reputed cost of $200,000, were as colorful and ingenious as a nation that invented the technique more than a thousand years ago could make them, but in terms of sheer organization the more impressive feature of the day's celebrations was the performances by hundreds of amateur and professional art troupes in parks around the city.

Every aspect of Chinese Communist culture opera, theatre, ballet, acrobatics and a host of others — was laid on for the enjoyment of the huge crowds that pressed into the parks from early in the morning until late in the afternoon.

Food stands, children's games and toy stalls doing a brisk business in inflatable plastic animals added a carnival atmosphere to the scene, in sharp contrast to the martial spirit that pervaded the giant parades that highlighted the annual celebrations in the republic's earlier years.

The cancellation of the parades — a necessity forced by the Lin Piao debacle in 1971 and continued in succeeding yearss as a matter of policy — put an end to the traditional national day appearances of Chairman Mao Tse-tung, the man who proclaimed the founding of the republic a quarter of a century ago.

Yesterday, for the fourth year in a row, the 80-year-old party leader remained in the seclusion, confounding expectations that he might choose the silver anniversary of Communist rule as the occasion for his first public appearance since May 1, 1971.

Premier Chou En-lai returned to hospital after his surprise appearance at a gathering reception Monday night at the Great Hall of Me People a senior Chinese official disclosed Tuesday.

The official said that the 76-year-old premier had been in hospital "all along" and had left only to attend the 45-minute reception where he made a brief speech and was accorded a 50-second ovation by nearly 5,000 Chinese and foreign guests.

Court Action Launched Against Alberta Gov't

EDMONTON (CP) — The Civil Service Association (CSA) of Alberta today launched court action against the provincial government to determine whether the government acted legally in offering salary increases to civil servants.

The government offered its employees an increase of $50 a month or seven per cent, whichever was greater but since the current contract for the civil servants does not run out until next March, the CSA charged the province had broken the contract.

The CSA has termed the increase an attempt to sabotage contract talks.

Meanwhile, response among 18,000 members of the CSA to a strike call Monday from Bill Broad, union president, has ranged from total support to rejection of the walkout order.

In Medicine Hat the 200-member CSA unit voted not to strike and sent a telegram to the union office saying they would only consider strike action if negotiations broke down completely.

Local CSA spokesman Ray Burkett said the workers wanted more information and considered the situation confused.

In Lethbridge picket lines went up Tuesday around provincial offices as the 650 members of the bargaining unit there began to support the strike. About 10 RCMP officers were called to the Lethbridge Correctional Institute to keep the facility open after guards formed a picket line.

TEACHERS GET 15%

VANDERHOOF (CP) — The 160 teachers in the Nechako school district centred around this north central British Columbia community reached their 1975 wage agreement with the local school board in a single negotiating session Tuesday.

The agreement is based on a formula that is expected to produce wage gains of about 15 per cent and is the first 1975 teacher contract in the province.

Bill Broadley, vice-president of the B.C. Teachers Federation, suggested the agreement shoots down the B.C. School Trustees association call or province-wide bargaining.

Sixty-eight school boards have delegated their bargaining rights to the associatios but the Nechako board was one of six that decided to negotiate locally.

"That speedy settlement shows that the BCSTA's call is unnecessary and that for province-wide bargaining is unnecessary and that agreement can be reached through local bargaining," Broadley said.

He said that Nechako teachers gained the highest increase or B.C. teachers last year — 14.85 per cent compared with an average of about 11.1 per cent.

Asked why the Nechako district board decided against province-wide bargaining, Bill Brown, secretary-treasurer of the school board said:

"It was basically a question of philosophy. Our board has had very amicable dealings with the teachers."

Winter Games Set For North Island

Winter games will be held on northern Vancouver Island for the first time in February, 1975.

The sport festival has been organized by Mt. Waddington regional district officials. Provincial government special project grants will supply some of the prize money.

Sports events will be held in vartious parts of the district, which includes such communities as Port Alice and Port McNeill.

Competitions in more than one northern Island centre "should help to bring them (athletes) together in an atmosphere of participation and enthusiasm," said district recreation director Randy Aubie.

Existing sport facilities in the areas will be used. Events will include novelty races such as black winter snowshoeing and cross country jogging.

Aubie expects about 150 committee members will be involved in the event's organization.

Local Co-Op Housing Planned

More co-operative housing is being planned for Victoria by the Victoria Rental Aid Service.

VRAS's Jim Nelson is considering the establishment of two co-operatives, one for prefabricated homes and one for mobile homes.

The city's Pioneer Housing Co-op is the only one now operating.

VRAS has been offered land for sale or lease 11 miles north of the city.

"We're probably going to need government help, both provincial and federal to get the venture off the ground, Nelson said.

Because the project would be non-profit, he could receive the same Canadian Mortgage and Housing Corporation $10,000 grant and 10 per cent off a mortgage that Pioneer received.

He hopes also to be able to lower building costs by asking for labor from potential residents.

It is not the only local co-op now being planned, but is one of several at various stages of development.

At Metropolitan Life we've been looking after the insurance needs of Canadians for more than 100 years. And here in Victoria at 1601 Blanshard Street, we have a well-established office to help our representatives give you a very personal kind of insurance service.

Our belief is that "the future is now", so our office is staffed by local people who are trained insurance specialists. They know local conditions. They understand your lifestyle. And they can help you plan a life insurance program today which will benefit you and your family tomorrow...whether you hope to build your own home, help your children through college, or enjoy a more comfortable retirement yourself.

Mr. Roy V. Chapman, C.L.U. is the new District Sales Manager of Metropolitan's Victoria District Office. A Chartered Life Underwriter, Mr. Chapman has occupied various marketing positions, since joining the Company in 1950. He is a former Manager of the Victoria District, having served in that capacity from 1961 to 1964. Most recently, Mr. Chapman was associated with the Company's Marketing and Training Services Department at the Head Office in Ottawa.

'Expect More Kidnaps'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The U.S. can expect more political kidnappings like the abduction of Patricia Hearst, a leading authority on terrorism said today.

"The abduction of Patricia Hearst demonstrates that there are very many prominent potential victims who can't be defended and will be ransomed," said Dr. David C. Rapoport, political science professor at the University of California, Los Angeles, in an address prepared for delivery to the 15th annual conference of United Press International editors and publishers.

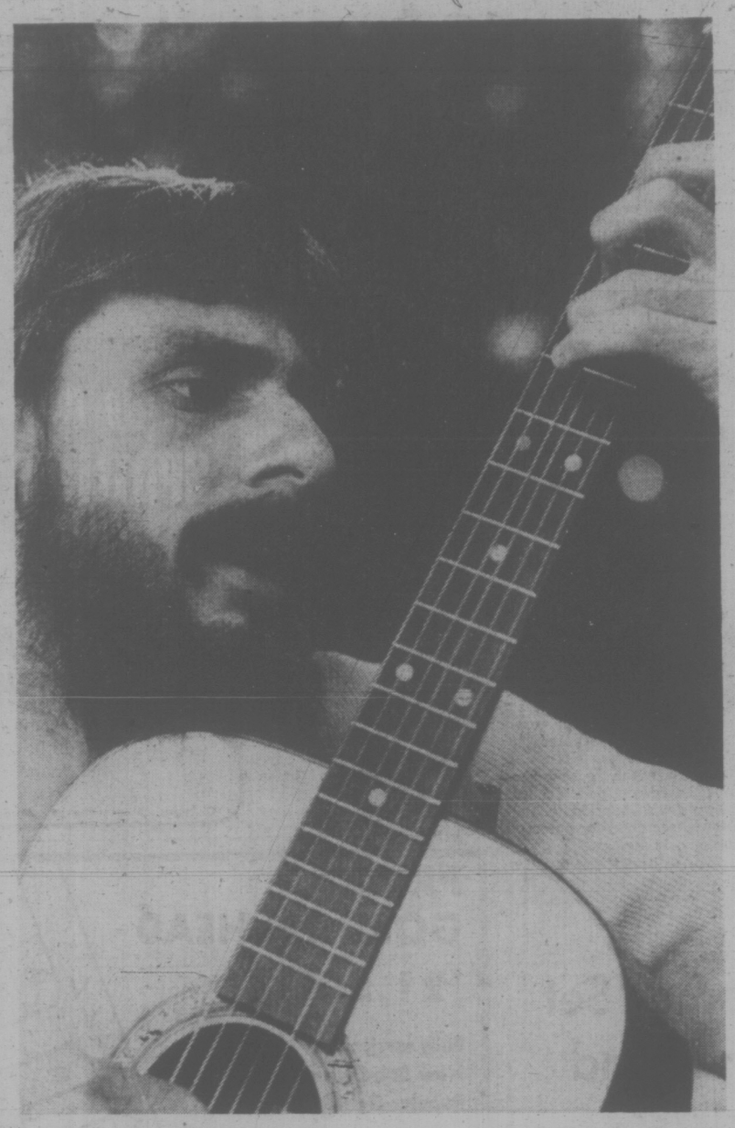
"We can expect more, perhaps many more, instances," he said.

Hearst, the 20-year-old granddaughter of newspaper empire founder William Randolph Hearst, was kidnapped last Feb. 4 and later, after her parents sponsored a $2 million food ransom program, announced she was joining her captors, the Symbionese Liberation Army (SLA). She later was charged with more than 20 state and federal crimes and faces life in prison if she is ever found.

Vice-president-designate Nelson A. Rockefeller was to address the conference Wednesday evening, substituting for President Ford who cancelled his scheduled appearance because of his wife's illness.

Rapoport told the more than 400 Edicon delegates that the current wave of terrorism is different from preceding terrorist sieges starting in the 19th century.

"Kidnapping is the major new extensively used tactic of this epoch — a tactic, ironically, first used by the Soviet secret police in the 1920s and '30s to crush left-and right-wing terrorism organized from abroad," he said.



BLENDING POETRY, drama, mime and body movement with his chants, songs and guitar improvisations, Paul William Simons will appear in a solo entertainment at Open Space, Fort Street, Friday at 8 p.m. Simons holds a degree from New York's Juilliard School of Music and has moved to Victoria via New York, San Francisco and Aspen. He is a deciple-performer, dedicated to the art of musical communion between word and sound.

Aluminum Connections Probed

OTTAWA (CP) — Ontario Hydro has set up a special group to investigate whether aluminum wiring now used in many Ontario homes — and homes throughout the country — is a fire hazard.

The action follows disclosure by scientists that aluminum wiring will not make a lasting safe connection with wall outlets now used. The faulty connection can cause overheating and possibly fires.

The investigating group was set up secretly because, in the words of one Ontario Hydro official: "We don't want to get the public uptight until we have the basic facts."

Another official, Keith Bellamy, Ontario Hydro's chief inspector, said Tuesday the group has just begun its investigation and has no findings yet. However, its report would be ready within months and made public.

Bellamy would not identify its members but another source said the group is made up of representatives from the aluminum-wiring industry and electrical products manufacturers, but has no members from consumer-protection bodies.

Bellamy said safety experts "just don't know" whether loose aluminum wiring fittings are likely to start house fires.

He said authorities have no evidence that aluminum wiring has been a cause of house fires, but added that there are apparent electrical and metallurgical shortcomings with the present method of fitting the wiring to wall outlets.

Bob Jerabek, an Ottawa scientist who has investigated the problem, said aluminum wiring has only been installed widely in homes in the last four or five years.

Deterioration of the fittings is fairly slow and the danger may not be evident for a few more years, said Jerabek.

Experts agree that aluminum, now being used almost exclusively to wire new homes and re-wire older ones to beat the high cost of copper, is an excellent electrical conductor.

But it has a tendency to creep or flow at the point where it is joined to wall outlets. Aluminum oxide, an electrical resistor, forms where the wire joins the copper or brass fittings of a wall outlet and causes overheating.

Jerabek, a former corporate scientist who has become a consumer-protection advocate, says he is angry at what he describes as the failure of authorities to act decisively with the problem.

Canadian Held As Spy in Europe

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Embassy in Belgrade is investigating the case of a Toronto man reported arrested as a spy for a separatist organization during a visit to Yugoslavia.

Katherine Smintic said in an interview Tuesday that her brother, Steve, 37, is being held and questioned by Yugoslav officials because he is a member of Seljacka Stranka, a Croation organization.

Brian Bruce, executive assistant to External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen, said Canada's ambassador to Yugoslavia, R. L. Rogers, has been asked to look into the matter.

And Miss Smintic sought help from Morton Shulman, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for High Park, who got in touch with the external affairs department. Dr. Shulman was also trying to reach Tomislav Simovski, Yugoslav consul-general in Toronto, before the latter returns to Belgrade.

Seljacka Stranka, which has about 150 members in Toronto, was described by Miss Smintic as a cultural organization. Its president, Robert Menalo, said it originally was a political party but now is outlawed in Yugoslavia.

Miss Smintic said her brother sold his business here this summer and went to Yugoslavia Aug. 15 to help care for their parents in the village of Cvetlin.

His wife, who is two months pregnant, and their six-month-old son went with him.

UVic Image Offered Lift

The University of Victoria Canada Manpower office is gearing for a massive recruitment program to help the hiring of university graduates.

Employment officer Frank Schroeder said Tuesday on-campus employee recruitment began with the mailing of 450 information kits to major employers across the country.

"Many employers haven't been aware of the status of UVic," said Schroeder. "They thought it was a junior college."

Initial results of the program, he said, are that many large businesses, including General Motors, will begin recruiting for the first time next year.

With UVic administration campus Manpower is developing a careers orientation program along with a national promotion scheme to prompt employment.

The program will be manned by a careers committee to advise graduating students on career interests and advise students throughout their years at university.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A six-month jail term was given in Victoria Provincial court Tuesday to a 34-year-old man for possession of stolen property.

Gordon Sherett, of 723 Yates, pleaded guilty earlier.

Sherett was found by polic Sept. 17 in a hotel room with a typewriter, suitcase and food that belonged to Gordon Campbell, 2621 Eastdowne.

Sherett was a parole at the time.

An 18-year-old youth was remanded to Oct. 8 for election of trial method on a charge of breaking into Capital Market, 50 West Burnside, Tuesday and committing theft.

Thomas Friel, of no fixed address, was ordered held in custody.

Court was told Friel was convicted of a similar offence Sept. 16 and had been remanded to Oct. 16 for sentencing.

Saanich police said outside the court a 16-year-old youth was to appear in juvenile court also in connection with the break-in.

A suspended sentence and six months' probation were given to a 19-year-old youth who pleaded guilty to possessing marijuana, even though the amount was small.

Brian Keith Doucet, of no fixed address, told the court the marijuana found in his knapsack Monday was worth about 25 cents.

But Judge William Ostler told him: "The Act doesn't say anything about the value — it just says you mustn't have it."

In other drug cases, Gary Clarke Cornish, 19, of 1158 Lockley, and James Alexander Colquhoun, 24, of 713 Mount Joy, were each fined $75 for possessing marijuana.

Riccardo Hubertus Scalliati, 18, of 4017 Grange, was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation for possessing cannabis resin.

Barbara Anne Braithwaite, 20, of 326 Arnot, was remanded to Oct. 22 for sentencing after being found guilty of possessing heroin.

Police found a capsule in her purse April 23.

In traffic court, Byron Turcott, 18, of Work Point Barracks, was fined $350 and banned from driving for 35 days for impaired driving and, for the same offence, Edward Ronald Byrne, 22, of 34 Island Highway, was fined $375 and banned eight months.

Calvin Neely Blake, 23, of 948 Esquimalt, was fined $250 and banned from driving for 30 days for driving with a blood-alcohol level of more than .08 per cent.

On Saturday, Joseph Powers, 22, of 1190 Fort, was fined $100 for possessing marijuana, and Jack Graves, 22, of Nanaimo, was fined $75 for possessing marijuana and another $300 for impaired driving.

Gary Peltier, 24, of North Vancouver, was fined $200 for driving with a blood-alcohol level more than .08 per cent.

'Con Artists' Sell Crafts

Sandwiched between a silversmith and a dress shop on Fort Street is a small store selling "made-in-prison" handicrafts.

The store is called Conarts and is the first of its kind in Canada. The crafts are made by inmates of prisons on Vancouver Island and the Lower Mainland, and the store is run by the John Howard Society with help from a United Way grant.

The small shop, containing more than 200 hand-made items, has been operating at 1016 Fort Street since April and September has been the best month so far, the store's full-time manager, Jocelyn Page, said.

Some of the inmates were worried at first, Mrs. Page said, "but now they hear from their friends that they can trust us, so they now send us more things."

Ninety per cent of he selling price goes back to the artist to be put in a trust fund for when the inmate gets out of jail. Prisoners use a percentage of the profits to buy more materials for their crafts.

When the store first opened, items were supplied by only seven or eight inmates. Now 70 men and women send in their goods on consignment. Pick-ups at the prisons are made as often as possible.

The crafts at the shop include leatherwork, copper plaques, embroidery, driftwood and wood cravings, jewellery, totem poles and tied fishing flies.

Many of the prisoners had been doing crafts long before Conarts came into being, Mrs. Page said, but had no official market for their work. Some sold them in small stalls set up in the visiting areas of the jails, but the marketing techniques were ineffective.

Now they have a real market for their work, Mrs. Page said, and are working longer and harder, building up bank accounts for their release.

Drug Trial Date Set

A Nov. 14 trial has been set for two Victoria men arrested in Nanaimo Saturday on drug charges.

Brian Gadboif, 22, and Rudy Cianslone, 19, addresses unknown, appeared in Nanaimo provincial court Monday charged with possession for the purposes of trafficking what RCMP believe is cocaine and MDA.

Nanaimo RCMP said they seized 64 caps of a substance believed to be the restricted drug MDA and two small quantities of a substance believed to be cocaine when the pair was apprehended on a Nanaimo Street Saturday afternoon.

A police spokesman said Gadboif also has been charged with assaulting a police officer.

Bail was set at $5,000 for Gadboif but denied Cianslone, who is wanted by Revelstoke RCMP on another matter.

Langford Fire Chief Al LeQuesne got his chief's hat back this month — seven years after he lost it during a rescue mission on Mount Finlayson.

Shortly after LeQuesne became chief in 1967, he and an RCMP member were climbing across a rugged part of the mountain. The chief slipped and dropped both rope and hat to an almost inaccessible part of the slope.

As firefighters fought the Mount Finlayson blaze earlier this month, Rob White found it and returned it to the chief.

"Just the band and the peak and the badge are left," said LeQuesne who is "really happy" to have it back.

"The hat had no special significance, but the badge had been passed from chief to chief since the department was formed in 1947," he said.

Both the badge and the worse-for-wear hat will remain in the fire hall as a reminder of rescue missions on the mountain.

Overheard in a local shop:

With those sort of sentiments, is it any wonder the corporation is having financial woes?

When does a black crow become a noise polluter?

Nobody knows.

In an effort to settle a hassle between themselves and Cordova Bay residents who have complained to Saanich council about the noise pollution cause by their trucks, Trio Ready-Mix (1971) Ltd. had the provincial government's motor-vehicle testing laboratory carry out a noise level test along the road.

The decibel readings were between 78 and 83 for dump trucks and mixers, between 72 and 80 for cars and a black crow was registered at 54.

Is the crow reading acceptable?

"The government of Canada has established that acceptable levels for pickups and cars are up to 85 and trucks at 88," a company official told council, "they do not indicate an acceptable level for black crows."

And speaking of crows, only in Oak Bay could one hear them get orally stoned in such an impeccable manner.

When Oak Bay council held its first "town hall" meeting this week, a public forum where citizens could deliver beefs or bouquets, one of numerous topics touched on was crows.

Drummond L. Armstrong of 2133 Windsor Rd. rose to castigate the flocks of crows which plague him but he did so in such vivid and precise language it was a treat to hear.

The crows dislike the sour plums they sample on his property so they "hurl" them onto the sidewalk where he must clean them up so pedestrians won't slip and injure themselves, he said.

Besides, the birds' raucous calls wake him early in the morning.

"I'm a lover of birds but I no longer love crows," he said in one of those masterpieces of British understatement.

When a sympathetic Ald. Douglas Watts suggested he too knew the miseries of crows about the home, Armstrong replied:

"Well I can assure you, sir, the majority live at 2133 Windsor."

It was opening night for the Camosun College night school students at Reynolds Secondary.

Chalked in huge letters on the blackboard behind instructor Jim Gilbert was the name of the course: SALT WATER FISHING.

Gilbert said he wanted to make a brief announcemnt before getting down to the business of telling his eager students how they could snag the big ones. His announcement was that this was the course in salt water fishing.

Spotting a few raised eyebrows on the faces of the students, Gilbert said he realized it might well sound as if he was overdoing it. Then he explained:

"A couple of years ago I was giving this course and I guess I was a full half hour into it when someone in the class said: "Is this the course on small car maintenance?"

"Now I don't take any chances," said Gilbert. "I always spell it out."

Light moments are few and far between in the lengthy Supreme Court trial of the Society of the Love of Jesus. When one develops the sparse public gallery takes full advantage, as it did last week.

Father Andrew Keber, history teacher and Latin scholar at Westminster Abbey, Mission City, holds the distinction of being named by the Vatican, with attendant powers, as Apostolic Visitor to the society. Once is rare, but it happened to Keber twice.

He was describing the appointment for his second visitation in March 1965, in connection with difficulties at St. Mary's Priory culminating with the suit by Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd and four followers.

Testimony had been involved as the day neared its close. Lawyers, officials and gallery alike were weary as defence counsel Cecil Branson asked Keber to confirm his awesome role:

"Did you come?"

"I came."

"You saw?"

"I saw."

There was a pregnant moment before Branson added:

"I won't ask the next one." But it was enough. The court dissolved with welcome relief, a perfect cue for Mr. Justice H. C. McKay to call the day's adjournment.

'Ghetto' Feared in North Tillicum

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

North Tillicum residents feel three large low-cost housing projects will turn their neighborhood into a ghetto and are upset that they will have to pay for roads leading to one of the projects.

Their anger began to mount almost a month ago when residents were notified by Saanich they are expected to pay the major share of $118,710 for road paving in their area under a local improvement plan.

At a rate of 80 cents a foot for frontage each year for the next 10 years this was bad enough, particularly for retired people on fixed incomes and single-parent families.

The anger increased a week ago when the residents learned the provincial government-owned Dunhill Development Corporation intends to build a low-cost 305 housing unit next to them.

As Terry Nex of 3882 Loretta puts it:

"When that development goes in Whiteside, Loretta and Raymond will be the streets most affected but other streets in our area will be affected to a greater degree than most of them (the residents) realize."

Nex and others have mounted a campaign to defeat the local improvement plan.

At a strategy meeting Tuesday night they summed up the situation.

The petition will be lodged Friday. With still two days to go support has been overwhelming.

"Some of the streets are 100 per cent against it," Keith Dinsdale of 3881 Loretta reported. "We didn't create the housing problem but we are going to have to suffer from it."

He and others on the neighborhood committee reported disturbed residents have been phoning Helen Nex and J. C. Hilton asking how they can join the protest movement.

Nex and Bill Bouchard of 531 Whiteside said the possibility of being caught in a pincer movement that will see their neighborhood jammed in the middle of three multiple low-cost housing projects threatens to destroy the lifestyle of the quiet residential area and many of them would like to sell their houses and move out.

In addition to the Dunhill's Interurban-Marigold development, they explained, further north of them, less than half a mile away, 400 units are planned for the Roy Road development and to the south is the Burnside Gardens site.

"We would like to sell our homes," Jean Bouchard said, "But who's going to buy property next to a ghetto?"

Nex said he had been told by a banker they could expect their properties to devalue as much as $10,000 once the Dunhill development went in.

Dunhill has agreed to pay the costs of roads within the 30.6-acre site but flatly refused to pay for upgrading of Whiteside and other access roads into the area.

Municipal planner Tom Loney has told council that Whiteside, at least, will have to be upgraded to handle the traffic load that the expected population of 1,100 on the site will create.

Nex said a municipal official had told him the timing of the local improvement plan, which is for minor road paving work, excluding curbs and gutters that will be needed once the Dunhill project goes through, is bad.

"A lot of people think they are getting curbs and gutters," Jean Bouchard said. "But they're not. This means all the money spent on this project will be wasted and we'll have to start all over again."

The council has decided to hold a public hearing on the application by Dunhill in spite of criticism of the project by the municipality's Advisory Planning Commission.

"The APC has condemned the project because of its high density, "wall-to-wall parking" the traffic it will generate and the dull uniformity of the units' exteriors.

No Funds From B.C. For L.I.P.

The B.C. government will not "under any circumstances" consider supplemental funding for Local Initiatives Projects approved this year by Ottawa.

"There is no way we will pick up $8.5 million of short-term funding, initiated without serious consultation, without any consideration of overall priorites, and often developed without consideration of existing resources," Labor Minister Bill King and Human Resources Minster Norm Levi said in a joint statement Tuesday.

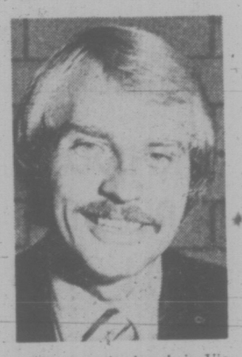
The ministers said they wished to make it known before the new LIP programs actually begin that B.C. "is not prepared to assume any financial obligations for projects once their federal funding expires in May of next year."

Last spring, Levi's department assumed continued funding of about 80 LIP programs that expired in May, at a cost of nearly $3 million.

Levi said the province picked up that tab in order to maintain essential services and save 600 jobs in municipalities.

But the projects are the responsibility of the federal government, said Levi, and if LIP groups want more money when the funding runs out they will have to re-apply to the federal government.

King also criticized the federal employment program saying that often "the pressing needs of communities are not met because community priorities are not considered in the centralized decision-making process that takes place in Ottawa."



CALLED to the bench in Victoria Tuesday, Douglas Campbell, 29, is believed to be the youngest judge in B.C. history. Campbell will preside in the family division of provincial court here. The Calgary native was called to the B.C. bar in 1971 and practised law in Vancouver.

Man Nabbed For Trying New Rifle

A young man who had "an urge" to try out his new .22-calibre rifle was arrested by Colwood RCMP early this morning after he shot up a tree.

Police were called after residents near Glen Lake School heard the shooting at 3:15.

An RCMP patrolman spotted the car about 15 minutes later coming out of a gravel pit near Parkdale Drive.

Police said a 20-year-old Colwood man will appear in Victoria provincial court Oct. 9 charged with discharging a firearm in a restricted place.

New Candidates Aim At City Hall Secrecy

A slate of candidates will be nominated next week by an ad hoc group of citizens to contest the Nov. 16 municipal election in Victoria and "end the secrecy at city hall."

Spokesman for the Association of Concerned Electors Joan Johnston said today it is not known how many candidates will be nominated by the group.

"If we feel we can support only two strong candidates we'll do that, if more, we'll support more."

She said council decisions seem to be made "for vague reasons" and "aren't aired before the public at council meetings."

The group would like to spend money to inform electors on public hearings and "definitely advertise rezoning plans in language everyone can understand".

She made the comments following the first official meeting of the association Tuesday in Newcombe Auditorium.

About 40 supporters, "who want something different than control of the city by real estate developers," decided issues would include the improvement of public transit, closure of certain streets for the people and more emphasis on providing advantages to the cyclist.

The group decided to support the Capital Region Tenants' Association candidate Ann Tarasoff and set the nomination meeting for Tuesday at a time and place to be announced.

In a lengthy debate over issues, Wayne Harding told the meeting that amalgamation of Greater Victoria municipalities had been considered as an issue but was discarded because it would tie candidates to an overly-specific platform.

Also discussed were pollution, municipal action to provide low rent non-profit housing and long-term community zoning plans.

Unsuccessful former aldermanic candidate Joe Richards suggested association members should stop discussing policy and consider ways to get voters to the polls in "poorly" represented areas, such as James Bay, Victoria West, the city core, and Fernwood.

You'll Park Your Car And Get By Without It

Victorians will have to get used to leaving their cars behind, a public information meeting on Government street semi-mall was told today.

In the first of three daytime information meetings with a fourth scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in city council chambers, traffic engineer Dave Campbell said "we have to accept we will no longer be able to drive anywhere in downtown in our cars."

People, he said, will have to be encouraged to leave their cars in carparks.

He said there is a "deficiency" in a number of carparks and city officials are looking at new sites. He said there will be a carpark with a capacity of 500 cars built on Broughton Street and "there should be an announcement shortly."

Close to a quarter of a million vehicles enter and leave downtown each day, he said and this is going up by four or five per cent a year: But he is planning on traffic volumes only going up one per cent.

He said he is "confident" that transit services can "take up the slack."

A shuttle-bus service is being proposed for downtown "once you've parked your car."

The Government street semi-mall, described by Ald. Sam Bawlf as a "beautification" scheme and by Ald. Mike Young as a "sidewalk beautification program," would see five blocks between Humboldt and Yates converted to two lanes northbound only with trees and planters and benches placed on the widened sidewalk. Wharf Street would be "matched" with Government with southbound traffic only.

Left turns from Belleville to Government would be prohibited, Campbell indicated, with traffic proceding to Blanshard, which he expected to be re-opened in the Burdett Avenue area late this month or early next month. He also indicated several other downtown intersections will have prohibitions on left turns in rush-hours.

Thirty-five people showed up for the first of the public information meetings.

NEW ADDITION to downtown Victoria will look like this if approved at a public hearing Oct. 24. The $14 million Nordal Centre will cover the blocks bounded by Government, Courtney, Wharf, Broughton. Features include underground parking, two floors of shops and offices and condominium apartments. Demolition work has begun but work on the building must await city approval.

Oyster Supply Running Down

Oysters on the Gulf Islands "are taking a beating in more ways than one," and a growing scarcity of the bivalve should surprise no one, a B.C. Fish and Wildlife official said, Tuesday.

Biologist Dave Smith listed four main reasons for the scarcity of oysters on many of the islands:

—More people every year are picking them.

—Pollution from subdivisions, marinas and industry have contaminated oyster beds.

—People pick more than legally allowed. (Under provincial regulations, a person may not pick more thas 24 oysters or a quart of shucked oysters. Clams are also limited to 24 per person.)

—Oyster breeding has been sporadic since 1958.

Fish and wildlife inspector Frank Gope said two persons were charged this year for picking oysters commercially witbout a permit.

"Many recreationalists were also warned by RCMP," he said. "These people didn't seem to be aware of the oyster quota."

Smith said clams have not been as hard hit as oysters, likely because people fear they might be contaminated by red tide and avoid them.

Rumble Strips Spaced

The new "rumble strips" on the Pat Bay Highway that have been bumping and grinding motorists for the past few weeks, have also shaken up the department of highways.

The provincial department received so many calls from grumbling motorists, that a highways crew was put to work Tuesday "modifying" the strips.

The strips, low pavement ridges stretching for about 15 feet along the highway, were installed two weeks ago in the southbound lane of the highway, just north of Sayward Road intersection.

Their purpose, according to the highways department, was to slow cars down as they approached the dangerous Sayward intersection.

But according to the motorists who drove over them, the strips themselves were dangerous and many complained they threw their cars out of control.

The highways crew Tuesday chipped away some of the strips so now the bumps and grinds last only half as long.

A NEW COMMONS SEASON . . . BUT IT'S A RERUN

OTTAWA (CP) — The supporting cast may have changed somewhat, but when the new Parliament took the stage Tuesday, it almost was a rerun of a play that ended suddenly five months ago.

The same characters held the starring roles and even their lines had a familiar ring.

Front and centre sat Prime Minister Trudeau and across from him was Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield.

There were some eager new faces in the supporting cast, including some attractive ladies. But in total they seemed remarkably similar to the last show.

The script had not been drastically rewritten during the five-month parliamentary break.

James McGrath (PG—St. John's East) was on his feet asking that egg reports of the food prices review board be referred to the health, welfare and social affairs committee.

These motions require unanimous consent. And — in keeping with the familiar script — didn't get it.

Then, Walter Carter (PG—St. John's West) proposed another motion calling for unilateral action to conserve fish stocks.

Again a chorus of "no" from the government benches assured that the regular script would be followed.

The question period, which many observers predicted would be the one daily act to return with great curtain-raising gusto, followed.

Stanfield asked whether the government has accepted the food prices review board's finding on egg production and marketing.

The best way to get the facts, replied the prime minister, is to refer the matter to a House committee "and we will be prepared to do that."

Does the government support the board?

"Of course the government supports the board," replied the prime minister.

Activist Role for Canada Pure Fiction, Says PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Tuesday described as "pure fiction" a report that he is determined to take an activist left-wing approach to international affairs.

Canadian foreign policy will continue to emphasize programs that benefit people but there are "no really flashing new initiatives," Prime Minister Trudeau told a news conference.

He was commenting on a Canadian Press story last Thursday which said he is determined to give Canada a strong new activist role on the left wing of international affairs.

Trudeau said the story, based on an interview with Ivan Head, the prime minister's special foreign affairs adviser, erred in stating there will be any major changes in the approach to international affairs.

"I really can't lead Canadians to believe there will be a series of bold new initiatives," Trudeau said.

The story reported Head as saying that, with the help of Allan MacEachen as his new external affairs minister, Trudeau will seek to heighten Canada's world influence by takin a more moralistic approach to international problems.

Head was reported as saying there will be emphasis on programs affecting people where ever they live and on strengthening ties with developing countries.

The story also reported Head as saying that the prime minister is keenly interested in learning more about the activist left-wing foreign policy of Sweden when Swedish Prime Minister Olof Palme visits Canada later this month.

Head was quoted as describing Sweden as "the cutting edge of the left — very active outspoken and moral," and as saying that Canada can be expected to take a similar but not necessarily identical approach in the future.

He also was quoted as saying one indication of Trudeau's concern lay in his choice of MacEachen to replace Mitchell Sharp as external affairs minister.

He was reported as saying MacEachen has a long record as a supporter of more expanded social policies, a contrast with Sharp, a former government bureaucrat who took a moderate line in the external affairs post.

When a Montreal reporter said at the news conference that he had received similar statements from several persons in the prime minister's office, Trudeau replied "I'll have to have a good talk with people in my office."

He said he wants his staff to maintain a "low profile" and let foreign policy statements emanate from MacEachen's office.

He said Head told him that he never drew a parallel between Swedish and Canadian foreign policy or used the terms "left wing" or "moral" to describe Canadian policy.

RHODES PLEDGE ON GAS

SALEM, Ore. (AP) — Natural gas imports from British Columbia to the Pacific Northwest may equal or exceed shipments of last year, James Rhodes, chairman of the British Columbia Petroleum Corp., said Tuesday.

Rhodes said B.C. is reducing its own use of gas to export more to the United States.

"Your situation will be no worse and possibly better than it was a year ago," he said.

"This should be your worst winter. Things will be appreciably improved in 1975 and 1976."

He was in Salem to confer with Gov. Tom McCall.

Rhodes said the projected shortage was caused by water in wells in Northern B.C. The problem will be solved next year, he added.

Charter Pitch

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada's charter airlines may initially hesitate, but will eventually decide to participate in the International Air Transport Association, Richard Wedge, director of industry and regulatory affairs for Air Canada, said Tuesday.

He told a conference of the Travel Industry Association of Alberta that Wardair's initial reaction to an invitation to join IATA was negative because "their style is not presently compatible with the rigid structures of IATA."

But charter companies will ultimately come around because the entire industry needs to be involved in air transport discussions, said Wedge.

"After all, charter fares are just another level of fare like first class or economy and a co-ordinated approach would be the best."

Wedge also warned that the adoption of a pre-clearance agreement with the United States could pose problems because of "a very tight space situation at both Calgary and Edmonton."

Rural Stress Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — A stronger commitment to rural development buttressed with better manpower policies has been urged on the federal government by the Canadian Council on Rural Development.

The council, an advisory body to Regional Expansion Minister Don Jamieson, said in its fifth annual report released this week that existing rural policies are inadequate.

The federal goverment and other agencies should move to discover what the real needs are locally and what industries would benefit most the local residents, the report said.

Rather than introducing mass production companies and techniques, small-scale industry should be located in rural regions.

And manpower retrajning plans should take into account the educational level in rural regions.

The council called for new training programs for rural residents, an institute to develop management and other techniques for rural businessmen, increased efforts by cooperatives in farming and other rural industry and government land-use guides.

Migration of people to cities is expensive for Canadian society, the council said. Existing homes and businesses were abandoned in the country and demands were created for new services in cities.

Moores Shuffles Cabinet To Change Gov't Emphasis

ST. JOHN'S (CP) — Premier Frank Moores shuffled his Conservative cabinet Tuesday, a move he said would be accompanied by a change in government emphasis.

John Crosbie, finance minister since the Moores government took office in 1972, was moved to fisheries, replacing Harold Collins who was given the forestry and agriculture portfolio.

H. R. V. Earle, at 62 the oldest cabinet minister, was put in charge of finance and was succeeded in the municipal affairs and housing portfolio by Brian Peckford, a former backbencher, who was the only addition to the executive council. No ministers were dropped.

Tom Hickey left transportation and communications for tourism, replacing Tom Doyle who moved to rehabilitation and recreation, formerly part of the tourism portfolio.

Ed Maynard, previously in forestry and agriculture, became minister of manpower and industrial relations.

Joe Rousseau was shifted to transportation and communications from manpower.

T. C. Farrell remained president of the council and also was given the public works and services portfolio, previously part of the manpower department.

Moores said the government will concentrate on programs "that more directly affect people in the communities where they live."

The government's main effort since being elected had been to develop an industrial base, he said.

Developments now under way or likely to begin soon, included a $1-billion harnessing of the hydro electric potential of the Lower Churchill River in Labrador.

Moores said the Government now would begin an analysis of the province's human resources "and to find out, together with the people, those projects that can be initiated to benefit each community to the maximum of its potential."

No-Fault Telegram Delay

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian National Telecommunications is exempt from financial liability in the event of late delivery of telegrams, the Supreme Court of Canada ruled Tuesday in a 5-to-4 decision.

The majority decision said the terms and conditions for sending telegrams, printed on the back of the telegraph form and approved by the Board of Railway Commissioners, plainly state the exemption.

The conditions state in part: "It is agreed between the sender of the message . . . that the said company (CN) shall not be liable for damages arising from failure to transmit or deliver or for any error in the transmission or delivery."

The issue arose after the B. G. Linton Construction Co. of Fort Nelson, B.C. sent a telegram to the public works department in Vancouver revising its bid on an Alaska Highway project.

Mr. Linton was assured by CN employees that the telegram would arrive within a few hours and that it would be a sealed telegram and not a telex message since the works department insisted on this procedure when it received tenders.

The message arrived too late and was in the form of a telex message. It was agreed in court that the company would have gotten the contract had the telegram arrived on time.

Mr. Linton then went to court asking that the CN Telecommunications pay him for the loss of the tender.

The court majority rejected his arguments on the basis of the conditions approved by the Board of Railway Commissioners.

A War All Your Own . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — Good and fitting it is to die for one's country, said the poet when the veteran scoffed at this attempt to glorify war.

The veteran of basement war games isn't as likely to scoff.

He knows war-gamming is good because it is fun, although having your troop of French chasseurs wiped off the styrofoam battlefield with a throw of the dice can rankle.

And the exercise is fitting, in that the games are based on movement, weapons expertise, hand-to-hand combat, morale and a bit of luck, just like real war, except that none of the contestants have to leave the rec room and nonbody gets hurt.

"The big attraction is war without its beastliness," said Jack Hutchings, who has a war-room in his basement, where he started the games in Vancouver 10 years ago.

"Nobody dies. At the end of the battle the soldiers go back, into their boxes. This is the beauty of it. You can resurrect your entire army the next day."

TEAMS FLEXIBLE

Most battles are fought with three or four players a side but as few as two can play.

A player in the Lower Mainlnd need never go without an opponent. There are groups in North Vancouver, West Vancouver, Burnaby, New Westminster and the University of British Columbia. And more than 300 showed up for Vancouver's first annual military fair.

Variations on battles are limitless. This has led to a proliferation of publications and a burgeoning production of tin-lead soldiers, authentic in every detail.

A London firm grosses $2 million annually by making everything from Zulu warriors and Nepalese Gurkhas to ancient Britons and Macedonians.

A British firm has published information on the order of battle, dress, equipment and weapons of historic units from the Waffen-SS of the Second World War to Julius Caesar's legions.

The war-gamers do painstaking paint jobs on the tiny figures, which are sold unpainted, giving them the colors of a particular regiment or even converting them entirely from, for example, Samaritan cataphracts into guard cavalrymen of the Sudanese Khalifa.

BATTLE REFOUGHT

Although war-gaming can be as exotic as individual artistry and imagination permits, most players, particularly in competition, stick to established battles.

The Trumpeters Club, which meets in Mr. Hutchings' basement, devotes itself exclusively to the Peninsular War where British and Portuguese forces, mainly under the command of the Duke of Wellington, fought Napoleon's legions.

One youthful member of the Trumpeters, Kelvin Boos of Vancouver, says he prefers ancient warfare.

"Modern warfare, when you get 1¼-inch tanks and every tank is different, is too hard to recreate," said Kelvin, 16.

He said in a recent battle against the Persian Byzantians his Macedonian army had five cohorts armed with 19-foot pikes.

"They are slow and sort of lumber along, but just deadly if they get you in a melee."

ELEPHANTS INCLUDED

Kelvin has bought a plastic zoo set and his army included elephants and armored camels.

"We had to introduce a smell factor in the rules because the smell of elephants and camels spooks horses and can cause enemy cavalry to bolt," said Kelvin.

There are as many rule books for war games as there are players.

A three-hour battle can be fought with 12 infantry regiments, three cavalry troops and four artillery batteries a side.

Each type of soldier can advance a fixed distance per move. For example, infantry can move six inches, cavalry 10 inches.

MORALE IMPORTANT

Morale decreases as units suffer casualties. If a regiment retreats, all those within six inches of it must test their morale with a throw of the dice.

In a recent Peninsular War battle, the British were hard pressed on their left flank, where Kelvin had two infantry battalions defending a wood — vital territory.

The French were attacking with five battalions, supported by cavalry.

In the final move of the game, Kelvin brought up a squad of cavalry which collided with French infantry. There were heavy casualties and morale on both sides had to be tested.

The French rolled the dice. Morale was good. The British rolled. Morale was shattered. The British had to retreat.

But during the confusion of the closing stages, someone reached for the rule book to find the British had superior morale. On this occasion, it could not be broken. All was not lost.

Kelvin was exultant.

"Thank God, we're British," he cried.

Despite Bereavement, Cheevers Set to Go

Times News Services

MOSCOW — Goalie Gerry Cheevers is expected to be in the nets for Team Canada Thursday night despite the death of his father-in-law in Toronto Tuesday night.

Cheevers learned of the death of the father-in-law, John Sciamonte, after Tuesday's game here in which he played brilliantly as the Canadian team dropped a 3-2 game to the Soviets.

Cheevers did not work out today. He has an injured groin and might not have taken the ice in any case.

Meanwhile, veteran Gordie Howe had just one critical assessment to make following the loss: The Canadians did not play well.

"But even then, the Russians had to play well to beat us," added Howe, the 46-year-old veteran who scored the first Canadian goal to tie the game at 1-1 early in the second period.

He refused to take credit away from the Russian national team that has won two and tied two of the first five games in the eight-game series. It was evident in a post-game interview, however, that he was upset.

I didn't think we played well as a team," said the elder Howe, who plays on a line with his 19-year-old son, Mark, and Ralph Backstrom. "Maybe our line played its best of the series.

"I enjoy a game like that. We weren't in a lot of trouble all night."

The Howes, never known to be shrinking violets on the ice and ever ready to retaliate to overzealous tactics, went after one of the Soviet skaters late in the game. Gordie took the incident in stride.

"I was just getting mad. At my age I should know better. Lots of times I think I'd like to go out and play a straight, clean game, but the Russians won't let you."

Canadian coach Billy Harris said — for the fifth time in as many games — the officiating "was adequate by international standards."

But centre Backstrom took full responsibility for the 10-minute misconduct he was nailed with in the third period when the Canadians could have used his talents.

The hard-skating little forechecker took exception to being hauled down by a Russian and swore at the Polish referee, Roguld Szczapek, who speaks fluent English.

"I don't think I've had a misconduct in 13 or 14 years," said Backstrom, adding "but I shouldn't have spoken to him in English."

Harris, while agreeing the officiating has been up to international standards, said it was unfair to the players and fans "to have amateur officials handle the highest level of hockey."

Harris, in an effort to put more zing into the Canadian attack, may revert to the three-line system for Thursday's game. He's been using four lines in order to give some of his elder players such as Gordie Howe, Bobby Hull, Backstrom and J. C. Tremblay, more time to rest their legs.

He was forced into the three-line strategy when Backstrom went off for those crucial minutes in Tuesday's game and discovered that Frank Mahovlich, a left winger, didn't look out of place filling in at the centre post.

Hey Patty: Move Over, Bessie Was There First

I see where Patty Pitts of the Victorian got mentioned in dispatches this week: "Believed to be the first woman to cover a hockey game from the Arena press box", the story in the Times said.

Sorry Patty, even if it's great to have you aboard, you can't get away with a distinction of that magnitude. No way. It's simply not true. The Times is away ahead, as usual. But then you can be excused. It's probably before your time.

It was back in 1951, the Cougars were competing in the version of the old Western Hockey League, sirloin tip was selling for 55 cents a pound, and in the energy field you could purchase two cords of all fir slabs and inside blocks for $8, and believe me that was a bargain.

At any rate, the Cougars were playing Saskatoon Quakers, and Elizabeth Forbes, then the social editor of the Times, was the invited Ms of her day. The press box was loaded, as usual, and several of the dignitaries of that day were there, glaring and scowling, and can bear witness.

There was Erwin Swangard, then of the Sun, Cam MacKenzie, sports editor of the Saskatoon Star Phoenix, Denny Boyd, then of the Times, Bill Stephenson of CKDA, a Canadian Pacific telegraph operator, Jim Tang and Tim Matson of the Colonist, later Fred Barnes, also of the Colonist. And in Bessie's (that's Ms. Forbes) words "there was also an uneasy sort of silence."

Or as Bessie wrote at the time:

"The lights dimmed, the strains of Canada rang out. We all got to our feet, then scrambled back as the game began. From then on, it was every man for himself!"

The Shoulder Moved–Higher

"Tang lighted a cigar which he chewed down to a lone half-inch by the end of the period. Swangard worried a pencil back and forth in his hands. Stephenson enjoyed a coke. McKenzie lighted one cigarette after another. Smoked 'em too. The CP man clattered away at his keys. They all watched the game intently. Ignored me.

"'Strongman's playing a good game, isn't he?' I said to Stephenson's shoulder, on my left. The shoulder moved a little higher. 'Hmmm! Nice save, Cotnoir,' he murmured. I looked. Cotnoir was sprawled on the ice. 'Good save Cotnoir,' I whispered, too.

"McKenzie was on my right. I nudged his arm and said: 'I think Strongman plays a good game, don't you?' McKenzie merely grunted and murmured, 'Bentley'. 'I Still like Strongman.' I grunted back."

Bessie pursued her tack, the next time to Cougar general manager Fred Hutchinson:

"Don't you think Strongman is playing a steady game?' But Hutchinson had his eyes closed. Play had swung to the other end. Cotnoir was along. Goegan saved. Hutchinson opened his eyes, looked at me with a wild stare. 'That's Goegan,' he told me."

One period was enough, so Bessie left, and she said it for all sports box jocks. "It's the quietest, most sedate spot in the whole arena. And I didn't even hear a good, rousing 'damn'."

Mr. Bassen, a Good Receiver

So there. And if you want the second chapter of the Bessie Forbes hockey story, that was in the Arena, too. Only this time Bessie didn't go near the press box. She went one better. She did her interview in the Cougar dressing room. Where else? Oh, sure, there was a gimmick. It was Leap Year, 1960, and the date was Feb. 29.

And the Times was right on the job with Bessie because Doug Peden was away covering the University Women's Club tea.

Very versatile, what!

And herewith a few lines of Bessie's prose from that game:

"For the occasion, Cougars wore distinctive ensembles of royal blue shorts and red and white jerseys, while Canucks chose darker blue uniforms with blue and white striped jerseys en tone. Although not in the new natural waistline silhouette, being shown for spring wear, these outfits did create a pleasing over-all picture."

About the goalkeepers and their part in the game:

"Presiding at small nets at either end of the ice were Mr. Marcel Pelletier, wearing the smart ensemble of the Cougars, and Mr. Henry Bassen of Vancouver. Mr. Pelletier had the puck with him four times during the evening, once in the middle part of the program and on three occasions in his last appearance on the ice. At the other end of the ice Mr. Bassen was kind enough to receive the puck eight times."

Then there was the time another Ms. reporter from the Times, the attractive Marguerite Dalziel, accompanied yours truly and the Shamrocks to a lacrosse game in Vancouver. Imagine our surprise when her husband met her at the airport on the team's return and immediately whisked her away.

Just thought you might like to know that too, and also that old cliche that goes something like this:

"To be forewarned . . ."

Okay, Patty?

Dodgers Win West; Bucs Lead by One

By The Associated Press

Los Angeles Dodgers won the National League West Division Tuesday night with help from Atlanta Braves.

The Braves eliminated Cincinnati Reds 7-1 and the Dodgers followed with an 8-5 victory over Houston Astros.

In Montreal, there was no joy for St. Louis Cardinals after they were beaten 3-2 by the Expos.

The loss dropped the Cardinals a game behind Pittsburgh Pirates in the East. The Pirates clinched at least a tie for the division crown by beating Chicago Cubs 6-5.

"This makes the ice a little thin for us," said Red Schoendienst, the St. Louis manager.

In other National League games, Philadelphia Phillies trimmed New York Mets 2-1 and San Francisco Giants ripped San Diego Padres 7-2.

Steve Garvey keyed two rallies, one with his 200th hit of the season, to lead Los Angeles over Houston.

Garvey doubled home one run and Willie Crawford singled in another as the Dodgers took a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

Pinch-hitters Rick Auerbach and Lee Lacy drove in two more runs with singles in the sixth. Mike Marshall relieved winner Don Sutton after the fifth and allowed four runs on two hits and four walks. Doug Rader's single and John Edwards' grounder scored two runs and Marshall walked home two more runs with the bases loaded.

The Dodgers scored two more runs in the seventh on John Hale's single.

Mike Jorgensen's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave Montreal its victory over St. Louis.

Bob Robertson's two-run homer in the eighth inning gave Pittsburgh a dramatic victory over Chicago. Manny Sanguillen singled with one out and Robertson, batting for Ed Kirkpartick, drilled a homer — his 16th homer of the year — over the left field wall.

Pirate starter Jerry Reuss held a 3-2 lead into the seventh when Steve Swisher singled and took second on a walk by Billy Grabarkewits. Billy Williams, batting for Cub starter Tom Dettore, then clouted a two-run double to left-centre to give the Cubs a 4-3 lead.

Left fielder Willie Stargell threw pinch-runner Ray Burris out at the plate on an ensuing single by Rick Monday off Pirate reliever Ramon Hernandez. But Don Kessinger tagged Hernandez for a triple to score Monday and give the Cubs a 5-3 edge. Pittsburgh rallied for a run in its half of the seventh on a triple by pinch-hitter Paul Popovich off reliever Oscar Zamora and a run-scoring single by Rennie Stennett off Dave LaRoche.

Robinson Expected To Get Tribe Post

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland Indians will name Frank Robinson as the first black manager in major league baseball on Thursday, it was learned Tuesday night.

The American League team plans a news conference sometime Thursday, knowledgeable baseball sources told The Associated Press, to officially announce the choice of the 39-year-old Robinson to succeed Ken Aspromonte, who was fired last Friday.

Prior to the Indians' Tuesday night game with the Red Sox in Boston, Robinson maintained he had not been asked to manage Cleveland next season.

"But I would still like to manage," said the slugging star, the only man to win the most valuable player award in both major leagues.

Indian officials would not confirm that the announcement on Robinson would come Thursday.

However, word of it spread quickly to other ballparks around both leagues and in Atlanta, home run king Henry Aaron of the Braves said as he heard the report:

"My heart is still thumping. I think I'll go out and celebrate."

The selection of Robinson as a manager comes 27 years after another Robinson broke the color line in baseball. The late Jackie Robinson — no relation to Frank — became the first black to play in the majors when he donned the uniform of Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Indians signed Frank Robinson to a playing contract for the 1975 season in September at a salary reported to be $180,000.

When the announcement is made on Thursday, it is expected Robinson will say he will continue to play for the team.

He would be the first playing manager in the majors in almost two decades. The last was Lou Boudreau with the Indians and later the Red Sox. Robinson is expected to confine most of activity to the role of designated hitter.

It was learned that Robinson plans to leave the Indians, who acquired him several weeks ago from the California Angels, immediately after Cleveland's final game today with Boston.

He will fly to New York for a meeting with his lawyer, then go on to Cleveland either later today or early Thursday, for the news conference.

Apparently still to be resolved by the Indians is the problem of pitcher Gaylord Perry, who has said he doesn't expect to be with the team if Robinson becomes manager.

The two had a verbal tiff last Friday night, shortly after Aspromonte's firing was announced, and nearly came to blows. Aspromonte, who has continued managing the team through the final six games, had to step in to prevent punches from being thrown.

Perry has said he wants to be paid $1 more than Robinson. The star hurler, the 1973 Cy Young Award winner in the American League, currently receives a reported $85,000 annually.

Orioles In, Yanks Lose

Times News Services

Baltimore Orioles' manager Earl Weaver was in no hurry to find out the result of Tuesday night's New York Yankees-Milwaukee Brewers game . . . all he did was keep a phone line open between his hotel suite in Detroit and Milwaukee's County Stadium throughout the game.

Baltimore had gained a share of the American League East title in the afternoon by beating Detroit Tigers 7-6, and a loss by the Yankees in their night game at Milwaukee would mean the Orioles would win the AL East outright.

Andy Etchebarren, who drove in the winning run against Detroit with a looping double in the ninth inning, was the bearer of good tidings on the phone in Weaver's suite. The Yankees and Brewers were tied 2-2, but Milwaukee had the bases loaded with one out in the 10th inning, and George Scott was about to step to the plate.

Scott hit the first pitch off Yankees' Doc Medich for a runscoring single up the middle, giving the Brewers a 3-2 victory and giving the Orioles the divison title for the second straight season.

"It's a base hit — we win!" Etchebarren yelled, dropping the phone in his excitement.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota Twins blanked Texas Rangers 6-0, Boston Red Sox beat Cleveland Indians 7-4, Chicago White Sox edged Kansas City Royals 2-1 and California Angels shut out Oakland A's 2-0.

Etchebarren, a reserve catcher who batted just .225 in 61 games, hit a looping double to drive in Brooks Robinson from first base with the winning run in the ninth.

Tigers' starting pitcher Joe Coleman was in trouble numerous times Tuesday but manager Ralph Houk kept John Hiller, his ace reliever, in reserve for possible use in today's finale. Hiller eventually came on in the ninth and was the loser.

Winless Capitals Still Respectable

By The Canadian Press

Washington Capitals, one of the National Hockey League's expansion teams, have only a tie to show for four pre-season games, but they have made a respectable showing in every contest, including Tuesday night when they lost 4-3 to Philadelphia Flyers.

The Capitals rallied from a 3-0 deficit and forced the Stanley Cup defending champions to hang on to win.

In other NHL exhibition games, Boston Bruins defeated Chicago Black Hawks 4-3 and New York Islanders beat Minnesota North Stars 6-4.

In World Hockey Association exhibitions, New England Whalers edged Quebec Nordiques 7-6 and San Diego Mariners made their debut with a 3-0 victory over Vancouver Blazers.

Bobby Clarke, Bill Barber, Gary Dornhoefer and Ross Lonsberry scored for Philadelphia. Dennis Dupere, Ron Anderson and Bob Gryp replied for the Capitals.

Dave Forbes scored the winning goal for the Bruins, who got other markers from Phil Esposito, Dallas Smith and Don Marcotte. For Chicago, John Marks, Grant Mulvey and Dick Redmond got one apiece.

Ralph Stewart had three goals for the Islanders and Gary Howatt, Andre St. Laurent and Doug Rombough each scored once. Blake Dunlop scored twice and Dennis O'Brien and Bill Goldsworthy once each for Minnesota.

Fred O'Donnell, Larry Pleau, Gary Swain, Jack Danby, Alan Hanglesben, Tom Earl and Guy Dufour scored for New England. Alain Caron, Andre Gaudette, Alain Beaule, Reg Fleming, Michel Parizeau and Francois Lacomb were the Nordiques' marksmen.

Wayne Rivers, Ray Adduono and Ron Plumb scored for the Mariners, formerly known as New Jersey Knights. Russ Gillow and Guy Denoncourt combined goaltending skills to shut out the Blazers.

Conteh Takes Title

Times News Services

One British boxer gained a world title and another scored an early knockout Tuesday night in fights at London's Wembley Pool.

John Conteh of Britain took control in the late rounds, pounded Jorge Ahumada's left eye shut and outpointed the Argentinian over 15 rounds to win the World Boxing Council's light-heavyweight championship.

The British crowd went wild in the closing rounds of the fight, marked throughout by two-fisted exchanges, as Conteh finished strongly and won the vacant WBC title.

And Britain's Joe Bugner, the European heavyweight boxing champion, knocked out Jose Luis Garcia of Venezuela with a savage left hook after 1:48 of the second round.

CLACKSON SUSPENDED FOR TWO MORE GAMES

SASKATOON—Players from Kamloops and Victoria were slapped with suspensions and the coaches of Western Canada Hockey League teams have been fined $200 for their actions in a recent exhibition game.

League president Ed Chynoweth handed Victoria defenceman Kim Clackson a four-game suspension and Kamloops' Mel Zinger a one-game suspension. Coaches Pat Ginnell of Victoria and Harvey Roy of Kamloops, who attended a Tuesday hearing in Calgary, have to pay the $200.

Zinger was suspended for coming off the bench to participate in a fight and Clackson allegedly used his knee on a Kamloops player in a game at Revelstoke last week.

Since Clackson already has sat out two pre-season games, Chynoweth said the Cougar rearguard's remaining two "sit-outs" will be the first two league games involving Kamloops and Victoria.

Rowdies Go Home: Big Six Order

There will be no room for rowdyism in the newly-formed South Island Big Six Hockey League.

League-president Ivan Temple announced his get-tough policy Tuesday and cited as an example a recent exhibition game in Lake Cowichan.

Lake Cowichan Lakers topped the James Bay Athletic Association Gulls 11-5 but the game was marred by the 133 minutes in penalties given to Lakers and 83 minutes to Gulls. Four game misconducts and one match misconduct were also assessed.

Temple said there was "going to be a few jolts" for both teams as a result of the rough play.

The league, which also includes Stockers North Americans, Ingraham Buckaroos and Chemainus Blues, is holding open a sixth franchise for a Mill Bay group planning to enter a team in the future.

Stockers and Lakers open the regular season with an 8:25 p.m. game Thursday at Pearkes Arena.

Buckaroos will be the first squad to benefit from extensive travel plans by the league. They go to Beaverton, Ore., on Nov. 9 to play Portland Royals, a senior club. Cowichan makes the trip Nov. 16, followed by Chemainus on Dec. 28, James Bay on Jan. 4 and Stockers on Jan. 18.

Plans to arrange an exhibition series in Alaska have been cancelled but league officials are still trying to set up trips to Sacramento, Las Vegas and Los Angeles.

Action Committee Unveils Crude Supports for Dam

stewart lang

An action committee of four men, struck to oppose construction of a mainstem water storage dam on the Chemainus River, came well-armed to a public meeting they had called Tuesday at the Eagles' Hall in Duncan.

The foursome — Art Morton, his brother Ralph, Walter Latter (past president of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club) and Ed Mankelow (president of the B.C. Wildlife Federation) — poked a series of large holes in testimony given by North Cowichan Municipality before a provincial government cabinet committee.

This committee, on the basis of evidence presented, overturned a water rights branch veto in the project.

From all the documents I've seen, North Cowichan is pressing for the dam with singleminded determination over the combined opposition of water rights, the provincial fish and wildlife branch, federal fisheries (although they seem to be bouncing back and forth, from one side to the other) and many conservation groups.

But let's return to that controversial testimony.

David Williams, council for North Cowichan, referred to the Chemainus as "a dependable source of water, it is glacier fed." Later on he refers to it as coming from 6,000-foot mountains.

At the meeting, the action committee pointed out that the "nearest glacier is the Comox Glacier behind Courtenay and even Mt. Arrowsmith is not 6,000 feet high."

"As all North Cowichan representatives have lived in the area for years it suggests either a complete ignorance of the situation or it shows a willingness to mislead," the action committee concluded.

Williams also referred to the water as being clean whereas a report prepared by Associated Engineering mentions coliform counts from zero to 1,600. The health standard in B.C. is 50.

If the dam were constructed, a treatment plant would probably be necessary, increasing the cost to residents of North Cowichan. It is interesting to note that the high cost was one of the prime objections put forth by water rights.

Another objection was that no studies had been made on alternate sources of water.

Later on in North Cowichan's testimony before Dennis Cocke (chairman of the committee and health minister), Phillis Young (consumer affairs, Graham Lea (highways) and Leo Nimsick (mines), Williams stated:

"Cutthroat trout are not a problem. There are very few of them and they are fished entirely in the lower reaches of the river."

The action committee pointed out that a fish and wildlife branch survey report in 1973 found "resident cutthroat trout are present throughout the system."

Further along the four conservationists dug up an incredible statement by Williams inferring that since the summer run of steelhead will eventually be wiped out through competition with the winter runs (each is believed to be a distinct race of fish), it really doesn't matter that construction of the dam would doom them.

They state:

"This whole statement is entirely false. Authorities on fish life point out the races are compatible. They co-exist in a number of other rivers on the Island and elsewhere and have done so presumably for hundreds, if not thousands of years."

Regarding the series of small waterfalls in the Copper Canyon area which presently block passage of salmon to the upper reaches of the Chemainus, Williams spoke to the cabinet committee about the difficulties and "vast expense" of bypassing the obstruction.

Rod Hourston, head of federal fisheries on the west coast, has gone on record as saying: "It would appear that it would be feasible to construct a rock crib dam immediately downstream of the obstruction area in order to backwater the lower falls by two or three feet. In addition, minor rock work would be necessary at the middle and upper falls in order to improve access conditions at these locations."

Federal fisheries planted 150,000 coho fry above the obstruction in 1970 and has promised action on bypassing the obstruction.

The conservationists also added it was "technically correct but totally misleading to suggest that the effect on game would be minor because the flooded area is a small percentage of the total range."

Winter range is the critical issue and when quality winter range is considered the area to be flooded (some 225 acres) constitutes quite a large percentage of what is available.

Williams also testified that the Chemainus is "fairly inaccessible" and has "relatively less importance than other rivers" as far as fisheries is concerned.

"One has only to glance at the maps of logging roads in the area as well as the roads and old grades on the south side of the river to realize how ridiculous that statement is. Secondly, fish and wildlife people have pointed out that this river has one of the greatest potentials of any river on the east coast of Vancouver Island," says the action group.

North Cowichan also underplayed recreational use of the area in their testimony.

"Nor is a dam necessarily beneficial to downstream fish life," adds the group. "A dam changes the water temperature; it changes the flow of nutrients; it changes the movement of gravel vital for spawning bed renewal; and it changes the environment of the estuary.

"As well as the dangers just mentioned we are faced with loss of prime recreational area, a total loss of a summer steelhead run, severe loss of winter steelhead, loss of half a million dollars in coho potential as well as other salmon, trout and steelhead potential, severe reduction of elk and deer winter range, and at least severe access restrictions if not total closure of the watershed."

After reviewing the point-by-point rebuttal of North Cowichan's case — and this is only part of what was covered at the meeting — I was left wondering why the cabinet committee made such a crucial decision without checking out the details presented or holding a public hearing?

A full cabinet review of the entire evidence should reveal a grave mistake has been made.

WILT CHAMBERLAIN

WILT CALLS IT A DAY

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Wilt Chamberlain, the highest scorer in pro basketball history, has retired from the sport, the owner of San Diego Conquistadors announced Tuesday

Dr. Leonard Bloom, owner of the American Basketball Association team, thus confirmed a published report that the 38-year-old Chamberlain would forego the remaining two years on his three-year, $1.8-million contract as coach of the Q's.

Although Bloom said, "There may still be a door open in terms of him playing . . . for all practical purposes we should conclude Wilt Chamberlain has retired from basketball."

Bloom said "there is no further compensation due him under his contract" but that Chamberlain "will continue to be associated with the Q's."

The only thing the owner said Chamberlain might do, however, is help acquire players.

Chamberlain missed several games while coach of the Q's last season and a variety of reasons were given then for his absences. Bloom said Wilt indicated over the summr he wanted to retire.

Identification Plan Remembers Lester

NEW YORK (CP) — The National Hockey League in the forthcoming season will have an entirely new look in name as well as fact.

Admittedly, it may seem a little awkward at first, but Don Ruck, vice-president of the NHL, said Tuesday he feels sure the fans will relate to famous names in hockey as the NHL is doing.

Instead of using geographical designations such as East and West for naming of conferences and divisions — a common practice in pro sports — the NHL will use the names of trophies and members of hockey's Hall of Fame to identify its new 18-team, two-conference, four-division setup. The regular season starts Oct. 9.

NHL president Clarence Campbell said the board of governors approved a committee's recommendation to use two famous trophies to identify the conferences and four great names in hockey history to identify the divisions.

The NHL's "name game" includes the remembrance of the late Lester Patrick of Victoria, a former New York Rangers coach and one of hockey's greatest innovators.

In the process, the NHL increased the regular and playoff money by almost $200,000 to $1,472,000.

One two-division conference will be known as the Prince of Wales Conference and the other, also with two divisions, as the Clarence Campbell Conference.

Ruck said that under the four-division setup it was impossible to come up with true geographic designations.

"We worked harder on this than anything else," he said.

The divisions will be named after four Hall of Fame builders in the NHL — Charles F. Adams, James Norris Sr., Conn Smythe and Lester Patrick.

The NHL broke down the lineups this way:

CAMPBELL CONFERENCE

Lester Patrick Division: Atlanta Flames, New York Islanders, New York Rangers and Philadelphia Flyers.

Conn Smythe Division: Chicago Black Hawks, Kansas City Scouts, Minnesota North Stars, St. Louis Blues and Vancouver Canucks.

WALES CONFERENCE

James Norris Division: Detroit Red Wings, Los Angeles Kings, Montreal Canadiens, Pittsburgh Penguins and Washington Capitals.

Charles F. Adams Division: Boston Bruins, Buffalo Sabres, California Golden Seals and Toronto Maple Leafs.

Washington and Kansas City are new expansion franchises.

Last season, there were two divisions — East and West — and 16 teams. The winner of the East took the Prince of Wales Trophy and the West won the Clarence Campbell Bowl.

But with four divisions, the NHL was faced with the choice off either dropping the two trophies or creating two new ones.

Ruck said the governors did not want to keep adding trophies and cheapen the tradition of the league. So they agreed to the two-conference system, keeping the prestige of two highly-regarded trophies and backing up the awards with a bit more money.

The conference and divisional championship award monies total $359,000 and is in addition to the $1,113,000 pool for the Stanley Cup playoffs, up from last season's total of $945,000.

The NHL's new two-conference structure also sets up a format for the annual all-star game, which this season will match all-stars from each conference, and will be played in Montreal on Jan. 21.

Two Gorge Teams Reach Semi-Finals

Bea Lundgren and Sis Reid of Gorge Vale had the easiest time Tuesday while advancing to the semi-finals in the Victoria Women's two-ball foursome tournament at Uplands Golf Club.

The Gorge Vale duo defeated Emma Silverberg and Margaret Chisholm of Glen Meadows, 5 and 3.

In other quarter-final matches, Elsie Saunders and Ivy Blunt of Gorge Vale downed clubmates Barbara Ricketts and Jean Thornton, 3 and 1; Beau Davis and May Lou Poy of Uplands tripped Bunny Yardley and Kay Butt of Gorge Vale, 3 and 2; while Helga Remes and Lorraine Jacklin of Glen Meadows ousted clubmates Freda Bond and Sylvia Britton, 2 and 1.

Semi-finals will be held Thursday at Victoria Golf Club and the finals are scheduled for Friday at Royal Colwood.

Field Hockey Tieup at Top

Norfolk House and Mt. Douglas both scored victories Tuesday to climb into a three-way tie for first place with idle Oak Bay in the Greater Victoria High School Girls' Field Hockey League.

Mary-Ann Wiggins, Nina Bland and Ticki Ruthven scored goals to give Norfolk House its fourth straight win of the season, a 3-1 decision over Dunsmuir. Marion Wilson scored for the losers.

Mt. Douglas, with three goals from Julie Straith and one goal from Brenda Cameron, blanked Parkland 4-0 at Sidney for its fourth victory in five games.

And in Tuesday's other games, Vic High defeated Esquimalt 4-2, St. Margaret's shut out Belmont-Fisher 4-0 and Claremont and Spectrum battled to a scoreless tie.

Doreen Fitzpatrick scored two goals for Vic High and the other scorers were Kathy Weich and Leslie Godfrey. Gail Clarke got both Esquimalt goals.

Bev Waterfield was a two-goal scorer at St. Margaret's while Francois Mainwaring and Theresa Hudson had a goal each.

Underwood Helps Gorge Break Ice

Reg Underwood scored a goal in each half Tuesday night to lead Gorge Molsons to a 2-1 win over Victoria West in a Vancouver Island Soccer League Premier-Divison match at Royal Athletic Park.

Ralph Storey, a midfield player who stepped in as a substitute goalkeeper when Peter Siebolts was taken to hospital with a dislocated shoulder after crashing into a goalpost 22 minutes into the game, made some fine saves.

Storey was robbed of his shutout when Robbie Williams scored for Vic West only three minutes from the end.

It was the first win in four games for Gorge.

Gill's Runners Respected

ULLA HANSEN

TOM GRIFFIN
. . . paces boys

SCHOLASTIC SCENE

By Jim Crerar

For a fellow who never ran a competitive race in his life, Stan Gill has done quite a job as a track and cross-country running coach.

You've only to look at the record put together by Mount Douglas Senior Secondary athletes under Gill's tutelage to realize that.

In the eight years Gill has been coaching the track team, Mt. Doug won the city championship seven years in a row, went on to win the Island title six of those years and twice won the B.C. championship (1969 and '70). The school has been second five times at the provincials.

In cross-country, the Mt. Doug boys last year won the city, Island and B.C. crown while the girls were first is the city and on the Island and third in B.C.

"I never competed in track," Gill explained. "My own sport was mainly hockey." He was a centre and defenceman on his high school team in Fredericton, N.B.

When he moved to Victoria and began coaching at Mt. Doug, his sports were basketball, volleyball and soccer.

"Eventually, we reached the point where we decided to have more specialized coaching and I concentrated on track," Gill added.

How does he explain his excellent record?

"You have to have good material to work with and we have athletes coming up from several good junior high schools, like Arbutus, Lansdowne and Cedar Hill," he said.

"The other plus is that I'm able to coach track and cross-country full time without having to worry about other sports."

Other schools are following suit, Gill said, citing Claremont (Pete Simmons), Belmont-Fisher (Tom Hatcher) and Esquimalt (Ron Bowker) as examples where track and cross-country have specialists.

There are several club athletes competing at the school level, and Gill figures Mt. Doug has been fortunate to have many of the better ones.

So far during the current cross-country schedule against other Greater Victoria schools, Mt. Doug boys have won twice while the girls were second to Esquimalt in their only start.

The city's two top high school cross-country runners, Tom Griffin and Ulla Hansen, form the nucleus of the Mt. Doug team. Griffin also won B.C. titles over 800 and 1,500 metres. Other mainstays on the boys' cross-country team are Tony Elwell, Larry Wheeler, Colin Harris, Kevin Kendall, Kerry Wilson, Graham Matthews, Mark Pesek, Gary Lindquist and Mark Salter.

Ulla won city and Island cross-country titles last year and was the city champ at 800 and 1,500 metres. Other leading performers on the girls' team are Debbie Campbell, B.C. 400-metre champ; Sue Hutchinson and Tish Doyle.

Like most schools, Mt. Doug athletes work out five afternoons a week from September to April. Gill puts plenty of emphasis on hill training.

"We sprint up the hills," he explained, "and do repeats using a stopwatch."

Which, of course, makes running on a level grade seem like luck soup.

George May Miss Rest of Season

EDMONTON (CP) — George McGowan says Edmonton Eskimos are going to put him back on the Western Football Conference injury reserve list and that he now has serious doubts it he'll play again this season.

McGowan, a wide receiver who was selected as the outstanding player in the Canadian Football League last season, said he was given the word prior to practice Monday that he wouldn't be making an eastern road trip with the team.

"There is a good chance I might not get back now," said McGowan, who suffered a hamstring injury in preseason practice. He has played two games with Edmonton but was not effective in either.

"I rested it for two and one-half weeks and came back and tested it Saturday. It just doesn't seem to be getting better."

Rider Owner May Sell Out

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders, a disappointment on the playing field, are almost a disaster at the ticket office and the "for sale" sign may soon go up.

Owner David Loeb said this week that the club may lose as much as $250,000 this Western Football Conference season.

"I'll finsh out the season and after that I'll go over the figures," said Loeb.

"If the figures are as bad as I think they'll be, the league can try to find a buyer."

After winning the Grey Cup last season, Riders have a precarious grip on third place in the EFC, only two points ahead of Toronto Argonauts. A sputtering offence is their main trouble on the field.

Riders drew well only for a game against Montreal Alouettes but on their first six games over-all they are down about 20,000 in attendance.

Loeb said many things have contributed to fans staying home.

"There was the beginning of the World Football League and the loss of some of our players," he said.

"Then there was the Marc Lalonde bill (which would have barred the WFL from Canada) which fans didn't like.

"There was the players strike and I suppose fans get turned off over labor-management disputes in sport."

If he was assured of average crowds of 23,000 a game, Loeb said he would break even or lose a little. He would in that event be inclined to ride out "a few lean years."

Riders need an increase in the number of seats between the goal lines to be able to seat 23,000 but that would mean the team would "get involved in a $3-million lease for the park."

Seniors' Tourney At Victoria Club

Approximately 138 menbers of the Vancouver Island Seniors' Golf Association will be competing in the annual Bob Mayhew Day tournament Friday at Victoria Golf Club.

Gordon Verley of the host club will be trying to retain medallist honors but Alden King of Uplands, who won the low net title last year, will not be playing.

City Volleyballer To Play for Canada

Greg Russell of Victoria will play for Canada when the national team meets the B.C. Selects in an exhibition men's volleyball game at 7:30 next Tuesday night at Landsdowne Junior High School gymnasium.

Russell, a six-foot, six-inch graduate of Claremont High School, is one of oply two players from B.C. on the national team. The other is Larry Plenert of Vancouver.

The Victoria player had a big part in Canada's first-ever win recently over the United States, blocking for five points in the final match in Toronto.

Canada plays Japan this Friday night at the University of British Columbia gymnasium in Vancouver.

Kevin's Scoring Touch Shows Up in Hockey

Kevin Alexander hammered in three goals Tuesday night to lead Juan de Fuca Gulls to a 7-3 victory over Saanich Braves in the opening game of the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League at Pearkes Arena.

Alexander played for Victoria McDonalds aid led the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League in secring during the summer, setting a record for goals and points.

Brad Girling added two goals to the Juan de Fuca total while singles were contributed by Greg Ross and Brian McLaghlan.

Stan Thomas, Rob Coldwell and Kim Bowles replied for Saanich.

Ken Shaw of Juan de Fuca blocked 22 shots on goal while Saanich netminder Mike Pienard made the same number of saves.

QB FACES $10 MILLION LAWSUIT

DETROIT (AP) — A $10 million negligence suit has been filed in Wayne County circuit court against the world Football League, Detroit Wheels and quarterback Joseph (Bubba) Wyche.

The complaint, filed by a former Wheels employee, Albert Chester, charged that Wyche beat him up "in an effort to kill or cripple him for life."

Chester, who worked for the Wheels temporarily as a comptroller, claims that Wyche, whose career included a stint with Saskatchewan Roughriders of the Canadian Football League, lifted him "a great distance into the air and hurled him bodily against the floor and walls of the office . . . causing several and permanent injuries . . . which as yet are undiagnosed."

Comeback In Darts

After losing the first four games, Dolphins came back to eke out a 6-5 victory over Mustangs and take over first place in the Pacific Men's Dart League.

Al Hudson led Dolphins, using only 11 darts to finish a 301 game, while Len Handley topped Mustangs with a high score of 140.

Secrecy Urged on Land Report

CALGARY (CP) — Chief City Commissioner Denis Cole Tuesday urged that Calgary city council keep secret a report which is said to show that a near-monopoly exists among land developers on land inside an area proposed for annexation to the city.

Cole, in a letter to council members, confirmed that the $80,000 report, which was prepared by a firm of lawyers, deals with property developers, but says the report should not be made public at this time.

"The findings are inconclusive but confirm the need for vigilance," said the letter.

He said commissioners and the law firm which prepared the report feel that further studies should be conducted by federal authorities into the operation of the property developers, and that publication of the report now might jeopardize further investigations.

Information in the report, said Cole, "cannot be confirmed at this time, and if the report was made public it might include false information which would be harmful to the companies named.

Mayor Rod Sykes said Monday night the accusations contained in the report could cause the city to "be blown out of the water by law suits from the companies for defamation.

The report, which has been seen only by the commissioners and Mayor Sykes, has become the central issue in the Oct. 16 civic election here.

Two of Mayor Syke's opponents—Aldermen Peter Petrasuk and Ross Alger—have called for publication of the study, claiming that it should be available before voters are asked to decide on a 125-square-mile annexation plebiscite.

Ald. Alger has asked Municipal Affairs Minister Dave Russell to delay the plebiscite until the report is made public.

The minister has not replied to the request.

Mayor Sykes has asked the federal combines department to investigate the accusations in the report, but Ald. Petrasuk has criticised the mayor for not acting sooner on the report, which has been in the mayors hands since February.

Ald. Petrasuk has succeeded in obtaining a special council meeting to discuss the report and to decide whether it will be made public.

Shady Deals at City Hall Edmonton Election Issue

EDMONTON (CP) — The question of shady affairs in government has emerged as a key issue in Edmonton's civic elections, with Mayor Ivor Dent and several incumbent aldermen embroiled in an incomplete judical inquiry into practices at city hall.

Another contributing factor is the disquieting past of former Mayor William Hawrelak, perhaps the most formidable of Mr. Dent's five opponents. Hawrelak resigned from office in 1959, won re-election, and was removed in 1965 after being accused of misconduct in land transactions.

"I didn't take anything from anybody," insists the burly, 58-year-old owner of several hotels.

Nevertheless, his appeal of an Alberta Supreme Court decision ordering him to pay the city more than $80,000 is still outstanding, and, as with the judicial inquiry, voters are left to make their own judgments.

The provincial government has rejected requests to delay the Oct. 16 election until the inquiry, called after Ald. Alex Fallow said two developers offered him a $40,000-gift, is completed. Ald. Fallow is not running for re-election but at least two other council members involved in the inquiry are.

Dent has told the inquiry he was informed last fall of "an excellent job" awaiting him after his term as mayor if he softened his attitude towards the same two developers.

The mayor denies any wrongdoing. But, to forestall any conflicts in the city's highest seat, he has limited campaign contributions to $500 per company and $200 per individual.

$600,000 MORE FOR MAN. FIRM

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government, acting from "social and economic objectives," announced Tuesday it is advancing another $600,000 to the Saunders Aircraft Ltd. plant at Gimli.

The government decision was taken after the Manitoba Development Corp., the provincial industrial lending agency, said it could not accept responsibility for further loans because of the high risk involved.

The new loan is on top of $19.4 million already advanced to the aircraft plant which, through equity funding arrangements, now is under effective government ownership.

Since the arrangement began in 1970, the plant, located on an abandoned armed forces base, has produced eight aircraft and has committed sales for seven.

Pay Off Strike: MLA

SASKATOON (CP) — The provincial government should provide the money that the University of Saskatchewan needs to end a strike by its non-teaching employees, Gary Lane, a Liberal member of the Legislature, said Tuesday.

If there is not enough money in the university's budget to meet the demands of the strikers the government must provide it, Lane, the member for Lumsden, said in an interview.

The government had "a clear obligation to students at least." There had to be an assurance that classes would not be cancelled and that students would be able to complete their year, to do otherwise would severely penalize students, who might lose a year of their education.

Closed Shop Urged Province-Wide

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — The Manitoba Federation of Labor has passed a resolution that, if law, would virtually impose a closed-shop system on all worker groups.

The motion was given unanimous approval by delegates to the federation's annual convention after the federation's resolutions committee ruled non-concurrence Friday and put the motion back to the delegates.

The resolution would give the unions power to fine members for misdemeanors, to expel members from the union or cause them to lose their jobs for reasons other than failure to pay dues, assessment or initiation fees.

Certain unions now have closed-shop systems but legislation states that while workers may lose union membership, they cannot be fired for that reason.

H. L. Stevens, Prairie region supervisor for the United Steelworkers of America was re-elected president by acclamation. Also returned to office by acclamation was Joseph Wilford, first vice-president and William Reske, treasurer.

BLAKENEY

INFLATION NO EXCUSE

SASKATOON (CP) — Premier Allen Blakeney of Saskatchewan said Tuesday he will not accept inflation as a federal government excuse to reduce programs aimed at solving problems facing Western Canada.

Using removal of railway branch lines as an example, Blakeney said such a move would force the province to build major highways, paralleling some of the branch lines which are removed.

"This will only feed the fires of inflation," he said. "That's just not a constructive way to deal with inflation."

Tourists Seek Asylum

EDMONTON (CP) — The fate of two Chileans hangs on their application to the federal government for official status as political refugees.

Gabriel Pizarro, a former dancer with Chile's national dance company, and Rolando Huerta, a 37-year-old former newspaper owner in Chile, are both in the city on tourist visas. Because of recent regulations forbidding immigrants to apply for landed immigrant status from within Canada the two are seeking asylum as political refugees.

The status of Huerta is critical because a return to Chile for him could endanger his life. Huerta's former partner in Chile was taken to prison, tortured and executed.

Jury List Sex Bias Ruled Out

EDMONTON (CP) — An Alberta Supreme Court judge has ruled against a defence lawyer who challenged a panel of 108 prospective jurors because there were not as many women as men on the panel.

Lawyer Burke Barker made the challenge during the trial of four men charged with forcibly seizing two teenagers.

Barker told the court that under section 558 of the Criminal Code he or the prosecutor "may challenge the array of petit jurors only on the ground of partiality, fraud or wilful misconduct on the part of the sheriff or his deputies by whom the panel was returned."

He told Mr. Justice David McDonald that he was making the challenge on the ground of partiality and called Sheriff Mike Funduk to the witness stand.

Funduk testified that the names which are pulled out of the jury box are selected at random from a city directory. Under the Jury Act it was required to have, in addition to the names the address and occupation of the people. The directory had the three requirements the sheriff needed.

Sheriff Funduk said the names are taken from the directory without regard to sex but added that there were more men's names listed with occupations than women's in the directory.

"This panel contains only 19 women and I suggest it would be wrong" to force a jury selection from a panel that of women, Barker said.

The lawyer said that in this day it would be wrong to assume that women have no place in the administration of justice. The discrepancy in the number of women was quite substantial and the directory was used because it contained occupations. Funduk "has been driven by this need to the use of the directory."

Crown prosecutor Mike Stevens-Guille said that in his opinion the ground of partiality was ruled out as the heriff had testified that he selects the panel without regard to sex.

"In handing down his decision, Mr. Justice McDonald said sex wasn't the only basis for differentiation of human beings and although there doesn't have an even number may be partiality in the directory he wasn't aware of it. If there were imbalances evidence of it should be brought before the court.

U.K. Election Match Picks Up

Heath Jabs . . .

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER

LONDON (WP) — After 10 days of shadow boxing, Edward Heath is beginning to jab at his Labor foes with some zest.

The Conservative leader is charging that a Socialist-led Britain will suffer a 30 per cent rise in prices next year, widespread bankruptcies and a foreign debt reaching an astronimical 35 billion dollars by the end of the decade.

The Labor Government, he contends, is deliberately starving business of cash to force firms to seek government aid. It is "Nationalization by the back door on the cheap," Heath asserts.

Both Heath and Labor's Dennis Healy, Chancellor of the Exchequer have been stretching figures in a way to make any economist shudder. Healey has been claiming that Labor kept inflation down to 8.5 per cent and Heath charges that Labor has permitted wages to rise by 40 per cent.

Both used the same trick, multiplying by four changes over three recent months to get an annual rate. The year-to-year comparisons, regarded as more valid, expand Healey's 8.4 per cent inflation to a more plausible 17 per cent and shrinks Heath's 40 per cent wage increases to 20 per cent.

Heath is trying to appear as a healer and unifier, rather than a divider, as his aides feel he appeared before he lost the last election. His campaign's centerpiece is a proposed "government of national unity."

Just how a Heath government would deal with the crisis of stagnant output, rising prices and unemployment is also unclear. He talks of creating a "national contract" with representatives from business, unions, farmers and other interest groups. He so far refuses to be drawn out on the terms of any such agreement.

Heath says that his government would bring back mandatory controls over wages if no agreement is reached on the "national contract." His last administration sought and failed to get the unions to accept voluntary restraint.

Conservative strategists are convinced that a major cause of their February setback was the anger of home owners over the increases in monthly mortgage payments. To bring these defectors back to the Tory fold, Heath is promising subsidies to hold mortgage interest rates at 9.5 per cent. They are now 11 per cent.

That this is a major plank in the Tory platform illustrates the extent to which homely pocketbook issues dominate the election. For Heath, who delights in playing a world role, the almost complete absence of foreign affairs from the campaign must be irksome.

Wilson Counters

LONDON (UPI) — Prime Minister Harold Wilson moved today to keep his lead in Britain's national election race and counter opposition attacks against the Labor government for failing to halt soaring inflation.

"Inflation in Britain is coming down," Wilson said.

Employment Minister Michael Foot accused Wilson's chief critic, Conservative leader Edward Heath, of "telling a monstrous lie" by saying inflation is rocketing in Britain under Labor rule.

"He is throwing figures around in a last desperate attempt to save himself from defeat," Foot said.

With only nine days before Britons vote Oct. 10 in what Wilson has called "an election on which the future of this country largely depends," the three main parties were locked in a bitter dispute on the extent of Britain's inflation.

Wilson ordered the election — the second in Britain this year — in a bid to win a new five-year mandate to deal with the crisis and also to nationalize large sections of industry still in private ownership.

Wilson Tuesday brought the European Common Market back to the forefront of the campaign.

Speaking on the eve of today's crucial talks in Luxembourg on the community farm-prices crisis, Wilson said the Common Market has deteriorated.

The country might be divided about the benefits of the Common Market "but it is united for its support for the Labor government's determination to renegotiate those terms," he said.

Meanwhile, Foreign Secretary James Callaghan, who will take part in today's Luxembourg talks, told an audience in Cardiff, Wales, that it was time the community's common agricultural policy broke loose from ideology and based itself on the realities of agricultural production.

Callaghan said that he had no doubt the policy would need to be drastically revised.

Deserters Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The defence department said Monday that only 70 military deserters have volunteered so far to take part in President Ford's amnesty program. It said the other 522 listed as having gone through processing had turned themselves in to military authorities before Ford announced his program two weeks ago.

PUBLIC MEETINGS
FOR CONSUMERS AND BUSINESS

The Inquiry studying prepaid consumer contracts in British Columbia invites interested persons from the business community and general public to attend a public meeting.

The meetings, chaired by Mr. Bill Kinsey, will be held in several Greater Vancouver locations: Burnaby, West-side Vancouver, East Vancouver, North Vancouver, Richmond, and New Westminster. Other locations in the province are Prince George, Kamloops, Castlegar and Victoria.

The Inquiry will be looking into prepaid consumer contracts and in particular the activities of health spas, reducing salons and other physical fitness facilities, magazine subscription sales, dance studios, food distribution plans, record and tape clubs, other mail order schemes, and house repair contractors.

Although the Inquiry would like as many of these hearings as possible to be open to the public, the wishes of the participants will be respected. If you want to relate your views or experiences in private you may do so.

If you plan to submit a written brief, it should be sent to the Inquiry at the address below for scheduling into the meeting agenda. It will be helpful to the Inquiry if you can bring items such as copies of standard form contracts, advertising materials, sales manuals, and other relevant material.

Based on their findings, the Inquiry will make recommendations to the Honourable Phyllis Young, Minister of Consumer Services and Michael Hanson, Director of Trade Practices. So plan to attend and express your point of view.

The meeting in your area will be held at:

Victoria
Thursday, October 3
1—4 p.m.
7—10 p.m.
The Carlton Club
900 Carlton Terrace

Friday, October 4
10—12 noon
1—4 p.m.
Red Lion Motor Inn
3366 Douglas Street

"THE CLINCHER!" ANNOUNCING "THE CLINCHER!"

For the first 12 months of use, any Chrysler Canada Ltd. dealer will fix, without charge for parts and labour, any part of our 1975 passenger cars we supply (except tires) which proves defective in normal use, regardless of mileage.*

CHRYSLER CANADA LTD

Your Plymouth and Dodge dealers are very anxious to show you their 1975 cars for some very good reasons.

Whether you're looking for a small car, big car or something in-between, we're confident we have one that will more than satisfy you—from engineering, to styling, to economy.

And added to that, they're offering an owner care program that just has to be "The Clincher".

What do we mean by all that?

Simply this. If something we put on one of our '75 passenger cars becomes defective during the first year, you don't have to worry about it. We'll fix it.

That goes for everything except tires (which are covered separately by the people who make them).

And when we say "regardless of mileage" we mean just that. The mileage is unlimited.

Your part is easy

We ask you to take care of what we call normal maintenance. In short, we'd like you to change the oil and filters, when the time comes. And replace things like hoses and belts when needed.

Our part is generous

Like the fact that, we'll replace brake linings, shock absorbers, tail pipes and mufflers should they simply wear out in normal use during the first year. And if you put enough miles on a car, they can wear out. So we take care of them for 12 full months. Unlimited mileage.

And we won't leave you alone in the night

If you make an appointment in advance for warranty work and it can't be finished from morning until evening on the same working day, participating dealers will supply you with a loaner. Free of charge.

*The warranty period for police cars and taxis is twelve months or twelve thousand miles whichever occurs first.

Visit your local Plymouth or Dodge dealer. See the exciting 1975 cars and get the full details of "The Clincher".

"THE CLINCHER!"
It's going to take better care of the people who buy our cars.

White Man's Burden Once Again Eased . . .

By PAUL HOFMANN

national liberation movements and international agencies are pressuring old imperial powers to yield the last shreds of once mighty overseas domains, the world's remaining colonies are fast shrinking.

This month, two former dependencies of the British and Portuguese empires — the West Indian island of Grenada and the African territory of Guinea-Bissau — entered the United Nations as independent states. Another former Portuguese colony, Mozambique, is painfully groping for self-government.

Of a world population of nearly four billion, fewer than 30 million people live today in areas that the United Nations still regards as colonial.

Fifty years ago a tabulation of territories under the sway of colonial powers would have comprised a sizable portion of mankind — almost all of Africa, parts of the Middle East, the hundreds of millions on the Indian subcontinent, and the Indochinese and Indonesian peoples among others.

Today's remnants of colonialism form an odd and farflung assortment of real estate.

It ranges from the Rock of Gibraltar — the only colony in Europe — to the phosphate-rich Spanish Sahara, from the Napoleonic nostalgia of St. Helena to the gambling casinos of Macao and to a group of islands in the Pacific Ocean, the New Hebrides, that are jointly administered by France and Britain in what is legally termed a condominium.

The movements that have brought independence to Arabs, Indians, Pakistanis and Indonesians in the 1940s and to North Africans and Black Africans in the 1960s are already history.

Decolonization seems inevitable, unstoppable and irreversible.

"We are now, at last, in sight of the end of colonial rule in Africa," says United Nations Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim.

Yet, there remain potential crisis spots in colonial areas where the winds of change may wreak havoc.

Rhodesia and Namibia the latter called South-west Africa by the Government in Pretoria are foremost among them.

The Spanish Sahara, coveted by Morocco, may become another.

Furthermore, there are many large and small population groups all over the world that regard themselves as subject to colonial rule, although the UN ignores their plight.

These are ethnic, religious or cultural minorities, such as the Latvians in the Soviet Union or the Kurds in Iraq.

Central governments accused of oppressing such population elements usually tell international bodies and interested neighbors not to meddle in what they regard as domestic matters.

There is also what the Third World of emerging nations calls neo-colonialism. It is described as a policy by the former colonial masters or by other powers to exercise a new form of hegemony by way of economic, financial or technical domination.

The United States, which has resisted some but by no means all temptations of the colonial imperialism of the 19th and the early 20th centuries, now finds itself the principal target of the Third World charges of neocolonialism.

The U.S. is also being berated for alleged outright colonialism regarding Puerto Rico.

Although the UN General Assembly formally found in 1953 that the island had become self-governing, small but vocal Puerto Rican groups keep contending that its commonwealth status masks what is actually colonial exploitation.

Cuba support such charges internationally.

Other U.S. dependencies are listed among the territories with which the UN body on colonialism — the special committee of 24 — is concerned. These areas, considered colonies by the world organization, are the Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands, American Samoa, Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands.

Each of the four possessions appears on its way to self-government, although at different speed.

Hunger, Death The Norm

CALCUTTA, India (NYT)

This is a hungry city. It is a place where thousands "survive" each day on a slice of bread or a bowl of rice, a potato or a scrap of garbage.

It is a metropolitan area of nine million people where the line between life and death seems precariously thin. Long a stricken city, it is now beset by tens of thousands of impoverished peasants who have surged in over the last few months because of hunger and drought in surrounding West Bengal and such neighboring eastern states as Bihar and Orissa.

Rice and wheat, the dietary essentials, are in short supply. Fish, chicken, vegetables and the spices that are an important part of Indian fare are out of the grasp of millions. Prices have climbed inexorably, and the lives of middle-class clerks, shopkeepers, teachers and businessmen are tormented. Food — its cost and availability, its preparation and consumption, its quality and taste — is an obsession.

Government officials and relief workers voice alarm. "We may just tide over this crisis," a senior state official said. A relief worker commented: "There's not much starvation in Calcutta, but there's so much hunger now. For a person to starve in Calcutta, he would have to be in social isolation — either a crazy person or an old and sick person who literally can't cry out for help. People are not starving, but they're at the bottom.

Akhtari Haque, a lithe, long-fingered woman, speaks with fatigue through dry lips, her eyes half-closed. She has eight children, ranging in age from 2 to 22. Her husband earns $35 a month as a tailor. The family has lived for nine years in a Calcutta bustee, a mud hut that rents for $3 a month. In a single room 9 or 10 people cook, eat, argue, study, make love and sleep.

There are only eight ration cards for the family. It is too complicated to get cards for the younger children, Mrs. Haque said, because the clerks are nasty and the lines are too long.

. . . But the Traditions of Empire Die Hard

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Humphrey Brooke, third cousin once removed to the last White Raja of Sarawak, drinks long into the afternoon at the Coliseum Bar where things haven't changed for 50 years.

Still fit, ever cordial, tall and only slightly stooped after several decades of Coliseum patronage, Tuan Humphrey gathers there daily with his rubber planter cronies and retired district officers.

A pace or so away young men in wide-striped shirts and broad neckties stand drinking Tiger beer in a circle of their own.

The two groups are thoroughly British and Australian in looks and manners. They and their surroundings are utterly remote from the Asia that's just out the door.

The empire is alive and well at the Coliseum Bar and Restaurant, 98 Batu Road, Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia.

Lodging rates start at $2.90 a night in the rooms over the bar.

Diners about to plunge into ample sizzling steaks are fitted with white starched bibs tied at the neck by aging but always attentive waiters.

On an ornate hatrack in the sensibly-lit bar where no canned music has ever played hangs a pith helmet. It has been there for 20 years.

"The market is doing terribly and very little is going well out there," Humphrey Brooke said, summing up 1974. "So I come here where there is character, people I know, something different from the bloody Hiltons and whatnot."

Humphrey describes himself as a "colateral heir" to the estates of his ruling cousins and their jungle empire long ago dissolved.

The Hilton, into which it is doubtful the scornful Humphrey Brooke has ever ventured, is in fact a very good hotel. The food and service have inspired some seasoned travelers to rank the Kuala Lumpur Hilton right under the Coliseum as one of the best in Asia.

There's more to "Kay El," as Kuala Lumpur is called, than its two good and several bad hotels. The 600,000 population Malaysian capital is a little off course for all but the Australian tourist in Asia.

That being so, the city has more of a left-alone charm about it than Singapore, Bangkok or Hong Kong.

While it has Hiltons shooting up through the blue-green haze of its tropical setting at the joining of two muddy rivers, Kay El retains much of the real Asia.

It has snake charmers and fortune tellers squatting in spicy-smelling alleys connecting streets where the fragrance of clove and cardamom gives way to the fumes of diesel trucks, buses and taxis.

Along sidewalks — called "five-foot ways"-move Malay, Chinese and Indian folk, ladies in saris, sarongs and miniskirts, men in topis, turbans and Malaysia's national dress — batik dyed shirts, open necked with rim collars.

The city's two rivers conjoin right in the middle of the business district and on one bank at night a parking lot becomes an open air dining room. Street vendors hawk rice noodles, mutton curry or the famous Malay dish called Satay, a skewered piece of barbequed meat dipped in peanut sauce.

The local people seldom eat satay, but it is sold to tourists who are told it's terribly authentic.

Kuala Lumpur boasts striking old government buildings with exotic, oriental spires poking the sky. Shangri-La facades adorn public administration buildings and the city's railway station, all conceived by the British before independence.

The Malaysians hired Italian architects to build later edifices, including the Parliament House, in the blocky modern style of the west.

Still, Kuala Lumpur remains pretty well tucked away from outside influences. If you dream of a steamy, mystic Asia, mosques and temples, jungles, exotic people and things, try on Kay El. And order the T-bone at the Coliseum — at $2.85.

Even War Circles Temples

SIEM REAP, Cambodia (UPI) — The winds of time blow slowly over the ancient temples of Angkor Wat, even in the middle of a raging 20th Century war.

Most of the fabled shrines have been controlled by Communist rebels since June, 1970. In late August, Cambodian government forces recaptured three buildings on the southeastern flank of the main temple grounds at Bakong, Preah Lo and Lolei.

The gains were militarily and psychologically important to the Cambodian army and civilians in the area. Cambodia's official religion is Buddhism and the Angkor Wat temples represent the apogee of this belief.

Government forces attacked in unusually aggressive style, moving under cover of darkness to take the insurgents by surprise and kill nearly 400 rebels while suffering minimal losses.

The assault was part of an unheralded government offensive to drive the Communists from the entire Angkor Wat complex, located five miles north, 35 miles east and 10 miles south of Siem Reap, a provincial capital 180 miles northeast of Phnom Penh.

Throughout the war, each side has blamed the other for destroying the temples. The government maintained it would rout the estimated 2,000 rebels from the sanctuaries with T-28 fighter bombers but would never do so.

"We can't do anything violently that would destroy the temples," one officer said. "The Communists would simply use that against us in world propaganda."

From the 9th to the 14th centuries, the ancient Khmers carved Angkor Wat out of the jungle as a city-state with a network of dozens of temples and satellite cities, all equipped with irrigation systems and other day-to-day needs.

In the 12th century, Agkor Wat's population was estimated at between 700,000 and 800,000. Today, the number of people in the government-controlled temple area is measured in terms of hundreds.

SLA Trial Delayed

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI) — The trial of two Symbionese Liberation Army "soldiers" charged with assassinating Oakland school chief Marcus Foster was postponed Tuesday until November 15.

The murder trial of Russell Little, 24, and Joseph Remiro, 27, was to have started today, but the judge issued a delay to allow for a state supreme court ruling on a defense request for a change of venue.

Little and Remiro were arrested in January and charged with killing Foster as he was leaving a school board meeting in Oakland Nov. 6, 1973. They have pleaded innocent to the charge.

Touch of the Lash Still Common Rule

SINGAPORE (UPI) — Flogging, the practice of beating criminals with a cane, still is common practice in Singapore's prisons, a legacy of British colonialism.

Prisons director Quek Shi Lei said offenders, generally those convicted of robbery, assault, mugging or other crimes involving some type of violence, are flogged "in such a way that criminals will get a taste of the violence they inflicted on their victims."

The punishment is intended to leave scars on the criminal for the rest of his life, he said.

Flogging, also called caning, was introduced to Singapore as a punishment for criminals by the British, who ran the colony from its founding in 1819 by Sir Thomas Stafford Raffles until 1959.

Quek said prisoners normally are sentenced to a term in prison and also can receive up to 24 strokes with a flexible rattan cane on their bare buttocks. The judge determines length of the prison sentence and number of strokes.

Prisoners about to be flogged are stripped of all clothes and strapped by the wrists and ankles to a wooden trestle with the buttocks protruding.

Then, Quek said, one of the four robust executors of the punishment wields the half-inch-thick, four-foot-long cane using "the whole of his body weight, and not just the strength of his arms.

"At each stroke at a half-minute interval, the skin usually splits open and after three strokes, the buttock will be covered with blood," Quek said.

Most prisoners, he said, put up a violent struggle after each of the first three strokes.

"After that, their struggles lessen as they become weaker," he said. "At the end of the caning, those who receive more than three strokes will be in a state of shock."

Before being flogged, each prisoner is examined by a prison doctor to determine if he is physically able to withstand the punishment.

Quek said many prisoners have collapsed under flogging but the doctor and his assistants are required to stand by to revive them and disinfect the wounds.

He said in cases where flogging must be stopped for medical reasons, a report is sent to the court and the prisoner may be sentenced to an additional prison term in lieu of the beating.

"However," he said, "many will pretend to faint but they cannot fool the prison medical officer."

Quek said the normal reaction of prisoners is to "fear caning—firstly, the fear of pain and then whether they will be able to control themselves from crying out during the caning session.

"To cry means a terrible loss of face to them," he said. "Secondly, the cane marks are indelible and will be a source of humiliation to them throughout the rest of their lives."

Heraldry Expert

LONDON (AP) — Dermot Morrah, 78, an expert on British royalty and ceremony who rejoiced in the title of Arundel Herald Extraordinary, died Monday. The post was created specially for him in 1953 in recognition of his knowledge of heraldry and genealogy. As he explained in jest to friends, "extraordinary" is Latin for "unpaid."

Campaign Plan

SASKATOON (CP) — The Association of Metis and Non-status Indians will support independent candidates seeking election in the northern constituencies of Cumberland and Athabasca in the next Saskatchewan election, Rod Bishop, a director of the association, said Tuesday.

Bishop said in an interview that nomination meetings will be held in the two constituencies within two months.

The candidates would not be affiliated with any existing political party but would have support from AMNIS, formerly the Metis Society of Saskatchewan.

TICKET, TICKET . . . WHO'S GOT IT?

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Nooks, cranies and cubbyholes in city hall are being searched for what may amount to $6 million in unpaid traffic tickets.

One closet in the city judges' law library yielded eight cartons containing about 28,000 traffic tickets.

"Fantastic," says Mayor Wyeth Chandler. "Maybe if we open up all the closets in the clerk's office we'll find the whole bundle."

George Supensky, director of finance and budget, said in early September that checks by his office showed that up to 150,000 citations could not be located at either the traffic violations bureau or the city court clerk's office.

Another 14,000 tickets worth $807,000 in revenue were located by Charles Cagle, manager of auditing and management services, in a city court clerk's file marked "uncollectable."

City officials said part of the problem results from an April switchover of ticket responsibility from the city court clerk to the traffic violations bureau, which installed expensive computer equipment to process tickets.

Chandler and Suspensky have asked city council to authorize a $30,000 audit to untangle the snarl.

City Court Judge Ray Churchill has opposed the audit.

"What's going to be established except inefficiency?" he asked.

Court Rewards Good Samaritan In Series of Highway Crashes

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has decided that a good samaritan who rushed for help for victims of a traffic accident is entitled to damages for injuries she suffered in the process.

In a narrow 5-to-4 decision the full court ruled that the person whose negligence caused a 1970 accident is fully responsible for the injuries suffered by the rescuer, despite the fact she was hurt in a different accident.

The court allowed the appeal of Bonnie Jo-Anne Corothers and her husband Donald Wayne Corothers of Herbert, Sask., against lower court decisions that denied damages.

It said the Corothers must go back to the Saskatchewan Court of Queen's Bench to determine the extent of the damages to be paid by Thomas Russel Poupard and Guarantee Trust Co. of Canada.

The court also dismissed an appeal by the Corothers against another lower court decision that said the owner and driver of a truck that hit Mrs. Corothers is not liable for damages.

The case revolves about what one judge called a terrible collision on the Trans-Canada Highway between Herbert and Swift Current in January, 1970.

A small car driven by Neil Francis Poupard hit a heavy car driven by a man called Hammerschmid. Three persons were killed in the light car and Mrs. Hammerschmid was fatally injured.

The driver of the car, son of the Thomas Russel Poupard, respondent in the case, was killed. The accident was found to have been the result of his negligence.

Mrs. Corothers, following behind the Hammerschmid car, stopped and tried to help. Noticing that Mrs. Hammerschmid was in serious condition, she rushed down the road seeking help.

A semi-trailer tank truck, driven by Ostop Slobodian and owned by J. Kearns Transport, was coming down the road.

Slobodian slammed on his brakes when he saw Mrs. Corothers and the trailer jack-knifed. Mrs. Corothers was hit and injured.

The Corothers sued both Poupard and the driver and owner of the truck. The lower court and the appeal court dismissed the cases.

In a decision written by Mr. Justice Roland Ritchie the Supreme Court said Mrs. Corothers falls into the roll of a rescuer. She was acting in a matter of life and death.

In Canada it was an accepted principle that the wrongdoer owed a duty to the rescuer of a victim of his negligence.

Mrs. Corothers, had been injured in an attempt to rescue such a victim, could recover damages from the one whose fault had been the cause of it.

The decision said there can be no finding of negligence on the part of the driver of the truck that hit Mrs. Corothers.

COMMUNISTS THRIVING THIEU WARNS CRITICS

SAIGON (WP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu told the nation Tuesday night that the Communists are taking advantage of the growing political unrest inside South Vietnam.

At the same time the president announced he would take steps to liberalize the press censorship law and the decrees limiting political party activity in South Vietnam — two major areas of complaint against his previous policies.

In a two-hour speech broadcast on national televison, the president answered his increasingly vocal critics by stating that he had never engaged in personal corruption and that "those who say confidence in me is falling are Communists or people working for the Communists."

Thieu's speech, his first major policy address to the nation in the 20 months since the Paris cease-fire agreement, comes after a month of mounting anti-government demonstrations by Buddhists, Catholics, newspapermen and others.

These groups have criticized Thieu for thwarting peace efforts, for alleged corruption, press censorship, economic hardships, political repression and other ills.

Tuesday night in his sweeping statements the president took the moral high ground against the Communists, blaming them for all the ills of the country.

He announced no specific plans for further repression that political oppositionists said they had feared, and his speech was generally mild in tone.

Even so, reaction among Thieu's opponents was one of disappointment that he offered no specific responses to the charges of personal corruption that have been levelled at him.

Addressing himself to the issue of press freedom and other democratic liberties, Thieu said these liberties must be exercised within constitutional restraints or the Communists would turn them to their advantage.

"The Communists are everywhere," he said. "They will cause incidents and then they can charge government repression."

In large portions of a speech that seemed aimed at an American audience, Thieu said the aid cuts by the U.S. Congress "are tempting the Communists to further aggression in South Vietnam."

High Interest 'Cuts 2 Ways'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Trevor Pilley, president of the Bank of British Columbia, Tuesday defended banks against statements by Premier Barrett that banks are making usurious profits because of high interest rates.

He said it is frequently forgotten that interest rates are high "on both sides."

"It is quite true that we have a prime lending rate 11½ per cent and a consumer loan rate of 13½ per cent but at the same time we pay 9¼ per cent on non-chequing savings accounts and 10 per cent or more on certificates of deposit," Pilley said.

The president said that when the current rate of inflation is taken into account, the effective cost of money is less than it has been at any time since the Second World War.

The Bank of B.C.'s return on investment is lower than others in the industry because it is newer and does not have the economies of scale available to the bigger banks, he claimed.

"I don't see how anyone can say we have been earning unconscionable profits."

The Bank of B.C. has placed substantial amounts of money in mortgages during the last two years and still has a number of committments to meet, Pilley said in response to Barrett's statement that the banks are neglecting mortgages in favor of short-term loans which have a higher interest rate.

Under the Bank Act, a limit is placed on the amount of money banks can put into mortgages, as a percentage of their total Canadian deposits.

"Our limit is nine per cent and we are at that level already," Pilley said.

"Next year we will be able to go to 10 per cent of our deposits, the same as other banks."

He said Barrett's plan for six-per-cent mortgages for low- and middle-income families would call for government subsidies because of the cost of money and the open-market interest rates.

Barrett also wants to participate in ownership of chartered banks but Pilley said he doubted this would produce any improvement or significant change to the banks' operations.

138 IN M-B LAYOFFS AT NEW WESTMINSTER

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel announced Tuesday it will lay off 138 employees over the next two weeks at its New Westminster lumber divisions. A company news release said the first layoffs will begin today and blamed the move on continued weakness in the lumber market.

The release said the Mainland processing division will operate on a one-shift basis producing lumber specialty products as long as orders are available. The company said a return to normal production levels is dependent on improved market conditions for building materials.

VANCOUVER (CP) — A "think-tank" on vegetable growing in British Columbia was told Tuesday a bright future awaits that industry with proper planning and a critical review of its potential. The prediction came from provincial government horticulturist A. C. Carter who noted there is a major trend in the industry toward production as close as possible to the consumer market provided proper growing land is available.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The enforcement supervisor for the federal Department of Communications district office here said Tuesday malfunctioning emergency locator transmitters are costing taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. Allister Pedersen said Monday there have been 256 false alarms across the country this year. The transmitters, designed to be triggered in an air crash to broadcast a distress signal, can be triggered by shocks such as turbulence or mechanical fault, he said.

RICHMOND (CP) — Seven Richmond youths set at least 38 fires causing more than $50,000 damage during their summer vacation police said Tuesday. The fires in Richmond and Vancouver were set in everything from abandoned residential buildings and factories down to garbage cans. No one was injured in any of the fires.

CASTLEGAR (CP) — Contracts for mobile homes were criticized by a community organization Tuesday at a hearing of the provincial government's study group on pre-paid contracts. Vera Kristiansen of the Nelson Community Services Centre told the three-man group that warranties on mobile homes often run out before satisfaction could be reached on complaints. The centre's brief recommended that warranties for pre-paid contracts on mobile homes be put on hold at the date a complaint is filed by the buyer and that the warranty continue once satisfaction on a complaint is reached.

VANCOUVER (CP) — There is hope a dispute between dentists and the provincial department of human resources will be settled soon, Ken Croft, executive director of the British Columbia College of Dental Surgeons said Tuesday. Negotiations have been held spasmodically for the last two months "just to keep talking until both sides reach agreement" on treatment of welfare cases, he said. The dentists' fee schedule now is almsot three years old and the government is prepared to cover 75 per cent of fees for welfare cases but the college wants 80 per cent, he added.

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Joshua half-way house for 30 ex-convicts has been ordered to vacate its premises by its landlord, Accord Mortgage Corp., in compliance with city council's eviction order. Joshua had been ordered evicted on the grounds that it violated single-family zoning in the area.

RICHMOND (CP) — A rezoning bylaw for a 158-acre industrial park development project here was approved Tuesday by Municipal Affairs Minister James Lorimer. The bylaw permits the development to be built on land now under farm use, and goes before council for final approval Oct. 15.

SQUAMISH (CP) — A 26-year-old man whose body was found Sept. 10 about 12 miles south of here has been identified as Karl Dieter Ostermeier of Vancouver. RCMP said the man died from a head blow possibly inflicted by an axe handle near his body which was discovered in thick timber 100 yards from a highway.

QUESNEL (CP) — Paul Emilio Reid, 21, of Quesnel, was sentenced Tuesday to nine months in jail after being convicted of possession of a narcotic for the purpose of trafficking. Douglas Glover, 22, was remanded for higher court trial after he pleaded not guilty to the same charge. The two were among nine arrested earlier this year during an RCMP investigation.

Apartments Given Loan

St. John's Court Society has received a $262,700 Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation loan and federal contribution toward its senior citizens housing development at Quadra and Mason.

The 19-unit apartment building, with three units for handicapped tenants, is being built on land donated by the Church of St. John the Divine.

The project has already received a $131,330 grant from the provincial government under its Elderly Citizens' Housing Aid Act.

The federal financing includes a grant of $52,300 and a 50-year loan.

Disabled Veto Tokenism

Members of the local Handicapped Action Group are determined to keep control of the organization in the hands of the disabled.

"In other groups the handicapped are just a token membership on the board," says representative Ron Olfrey.

"It is impossible for the able-bodied to appreciate the problems facing the handicapped," he said.

The newly-formed group wants to consult developers and government officials before making decisions affecting the disabled.

"We want to be a body that public officials would refer to when making plans; all public buildings, housing, sidewalk curbin, reform in the welfare system," said Olfrey.

The organization's second meeting Sunday night attracted more members interested in its purpose and consolidating the group's mork with that of other groups in town.

"We don't want a bunch of splinter groups working against each other," said a spokesman.

"There are many groups already working for the handicapped and we do not want to have a duplication of services," said Olfrey.

The next meeting will be held Sunday at 7 p.m. in the Henderson Pavilion at 2291 Cedar Hill Cross Road.

Cause for a Great Celebration On China's Harsh Borderlands

TACHING, China (Reuter) —The pioneering spirit of a frontier town lives in this remote and harsh piece of northeastern China called Taching, a name which means "great celebration."

The cause for celebration is oil, and enough oil is being discovered here and elsewhere to ensure that China will loom large in the world oil trade, probably within a decade.

Taching is China's largest oilfield and a crucial asset to a country which, although it has not been a great producer or consumer of oil in the past, is pledged eventually to outstrip the economic performance of the non-Communist world.

But Taching is much more than an economic plus mark. "In industry, learn from Taching" is a national slogan coined 10 years ago by Chairman Mao Tse-tung. The legend of Taching is enshrined in Communist China's folklore.

Taching symbolizes China's go-it-alone philosophy which shuns foreign aid and foreign debts. It also typifies the spirit of hard work in the face of adversity which Peking strives to instil into the nation.

Taching must also be one of the country's biggest security headaches.

Situated less than 250 miles from the nearest point of the Sino-Soviet border, it would be a prime target if the Soviet Union should mount an attack.

This is presumably why the exact location of Taching was kept a secret for nearly a decade after it opened and is still not shown on most published Chinese atlases.

The Soviet threat was not stressed by official spokesmen accompanying a group of 22 Peking-based foreign reporters invited to visit here—almost certainly because the group included two Soviet correspondents.

But roofs of oil storage tanks are disguised in camouflage paint and installations have been buried underground beneath three feet of concrete. The party visited one of these underground installations, innocently called Apricot Tree Harbor.

A group of about six anti-aircraft guns was parked near the refinery attached to the oilfield but these weapons were not in battle readiness—some of them still had covers on—and the main Chinese defences remain outside the perimeter of the oilfield proper.

There is little doubt that Taching has earned the mantle of national pacesetter the hard way. Oil is often found in inhospitable surroundings and this bleak tract of land is no exception.

Taching is located in China's northernmost province of Heilungkiang—meaning Black Dragon River—about a day's train journey north from Peking. It is ice-bound for nearly five months of the year and with winter temperatures dropping to 40 degrees below zero. By contrast, the summer is boiling hot.

In 1959, when test wells showed promising results, Taching was a flat, windswept wasteland patrolled mainly by wolves.

The strike was of vital importance then, with China at the start of a period of severe economic difficulties because of natural disasters and the cutoff of Soviet aid and technicians.

Chinese then living in Peking recall that the fuel shortage was so acute that public buses were running on coal gas stored in rubber bladders balanced on the roof.

The reporters talked to Yuan Chien-chong, now 49 and one of the Taching pioneers. He was here when the first derrick was dragged into position by hand and oil began gushing in the early summer of 1960.

Yuan said the 30,000 people who descended on Taching like a 19th-century gold rush lacked many of the necessities of life.

He had to wait a week in bitter weather before drilling equipment arrived and then it had to be dropped six miles from the railhead to the drilling site.

The transformation of Taching since those early days is dramatic. It is inhabited by 300,000 people and produces approximately 20 million tons of oil a year.

But the spirit of the early pioneers persists.

Every work project is depicted in terms of a battle. Even the local Taching paper is called "Battle Newspaper."

There is a great accent on youth with 70 to 80 per cent of the workers in their early 20s and unmarried. Many are former members of the militant Red Guard movement, which played a decisive if unruly role in the 1966-69 cultural revolution.

Taching has the rough-and-ready feel of a place where orderly development has been sacrificed for speed. The landscape is crisscrossed with power and telephone lines mounted on a motley assortment of pylons.

Few drilling rigs are to be seen. Once a well has been drilled, the steel derrick is replaced by two small brick sheds housing the equipment monitoring the flow and pressure of the oil.

There is no central town of Taching. The community is broken down into small settlements as part of the long-standing official policy throughout China of combining town with country, industry with agriculture.

The housewives took the lead in fostering agriculture and fields of corn, wheat, sorghum and other cereals dot the landscape between the oil wells. The Chinese passion for planting trees has helped to soften the harsh environment.

But the going is tough for farmers, with a growing period of less than 180 days in the year and a swampy, alkaline soil.

Housewives operate side industries, running a tailoring and clothing repair service, turning out nuts and bolts and brewing a lively grain liquor guaranteed to keep the coldest winter wind at bay.

The pace of expansion in Taching has left little room for frills.

Most of the housing is long barrack-like structures roofed with fading red tiles. The walls are of double thickness with natural-gas burners between the layers providing a crude form of central heating.

The standard road surface within the agro-industrial units is mud, frozen in winter and slushy in summer.

Nor do Taching workers enjoy any special benefits. Drillers with the skills to earn a small fortune in the non-Communist world are paid only 150 yuan (about $80) a month, in accordance with national wage scales for heavy industry.

There are no bars, no nightclubs, and only strictly honorable girls.

But none of this seems to matter to the oilmen here. They show an unshakable pride in being associated with China's industrial model.

Back From Italy

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis returned Monday night after a 15-day visit to Italy. The 1,600-mile tour arranged by a group of Italian-Canadian organizations took him to 21 towns and cities.

New dual ingredient medicine double effective for hemorrhoid sufferers.

The combination of an anaesthetic to relieve pain and itch quickly, and a soothing cream to help heal sore tissues makes new Hemoraids particularly effective on hemorrhoids.

Diperodon Hydrochloride—the water-soluble anaesthetic — spreads long-lasting relief directly into sore tissues by combining easily with natural, protective body moisture. This helps Hemoraids' smooth cream to effectively coat the irritated area, quickly relieving pain and itch.

The anaesthetic is carried in a soft-textured cream which can be spread over the most sensitive tissues without additional discomfort. And this soothing, cooling cream, in itself, has valuable healing properties. In suppository form, Hemoraids melts quickly and easily after insertion, becoming a gentle, healing cream.

Dressing Needs Change

By MARY MOORE

Keep out of that rut where you always toss your salads with the same old dressing.

To my delight my sister-in-law, Wyn, casually asked me to "make a sour-cream dressing for this salad." (Pete and Margaret and family and I had driven from Rosseau to Foote's Bay — both on Lake Joseph — in the camper for lunch at my brother's cottage.) Eleven of us sat down to lunch at the picnic table on the lawn and that salad took only second place to the huge pan of Lasagna Wyn had prepared.

It is the sour cream dressing we had that day in mid-August and an emulsified French dressing that I want you to have today for I can recommend both highly.

SOUR CREAM DRESSING

one half-pint carton fresh dairy sour cream
1 tbsp. grated onion or finely chopped chives
1 tsp. celery seed or dill seed
1 or 2 tbsp. chopped green or sweet red pepper
½ tsp. salt.
about ⅛ tsp. freshly grated pepper

Measure sour cream into a bowl and gently beat it with a fork until smooth. Add all remaining ingredients and mix. For a large salad for ten measure all salad ingredients into a large wooden bowl. Just before mealtime pour sour cream salad dressing on top and take to table. Just before passing neatly toss with salad servers and pass at once. Salad connoisseurs will approve of this one.

The next little item comes from Donna: "I am enclosing my recipe for French Salad Dressing. I think it is very good and comes very close to the commercial dressing. Hope you like it and this may be the one your reader was looking for early August, 1974."

I quickly took Donna's recipe to the kitchen and made it up in 5 minutes or less I'm sure. It does not separate and is one you should clip right now.

FRENCH DRESSING
(facsimile of commercial type)

¼ c. white sugar
¼ c. white vinegar
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. Worcestershire sauce half 10-oz. can tomato soup
½ c. plus 2 tbsp. oil
½ finely chopped onion
¼ tsp. garlic powder or garlic salt.

Combine all ingredients in blender and blend for 1 or 2 minutes. Store in covered 16-oz. jar in refrigerator. NOTE: If you want to make a double quantity the blender will hold it and the whole can of tomato soup would be used up.

Zucchini Book

By HILDA BEASTALL

I've used zucchini in recipes for pan cooked summer suppers, diced and sliced in place of cucumbers for salads but it has taken Paula Simmons' new little "Zucchini Cookbook" to promote zucchini into cookies, cakes, breads, and even a fabulous wedding cake, complete with candied zucchini decorations. More than 100 recipes using not only the young fruits but the huge mature ones, and even frozen zucchini during winter from your freezer.

The book appeared locally a week ago at booksellers. If you haven't seen it, do get it if you are wondering what to do with all those perfectly delicious zucchinis before the frost takes them.

PORK CHOPS do have a lot of fat and bone but somehow the flavor is hard to resist for many. One way to make worthwhile purchase of chops is to look for bulk specials such as 10-lb. packs now sold in some meat outlets. Here, chops sit pretty with asparagus.

Pry for Meat Buys

FOOD

By HILDA BEASTALL

The best buy in the meat market is not the most obvious one, and certainly not the most advertized cut. Looking along the counters you can sometimes come across a section of packages which appear attractive enough to investigate more closely. Look for thick short ribs of beef next time you think of a meat purchase.

The price will vary from 69 cents for a pound to 89 cents; they are not always available and the quality varies as much, though not according to price. Quite often those at the lowest price have the thickest portions of lean with a moderate layer of fat to keep it tender in cooking.

These thick ribs are the best buy. Look for a package which is still a fresh color, not become a sort of dark grey from long exposure to the store light.

Last month I found thick short ribs of beef that were just right; a package of two and a quarter pounds at 79 cents cost one dollar 80 cents. Three different meals were made from the one package.

Short ribs are easily handled at home when you wish to use a small part of a package. Take out the number of pieces you need for cooking at the time, rewrap the remainder closely to exclude air, drop into a suitable size clean plastic bag, again excluding air; close with a tie. It will keep in a top of refrigerator freezer for a week or two.

I cook short ribs in a covered casserole when the oven is being used for other types of baking requiring it to be heated for two or three hours. Once the meat comes to a gentle simmering on top of the stove, the dish goes to the least hot part of the oven where it will continue simmering.

Many electric ovens, when the power is switched off, remain at around 295 degs. for an hour longer. This is enough heat for final cooking of short ribs.

THICK SHORT BEEF RIBS

2¼ pounds thick short beef ribs.
2 cups water or vegetable stock.
2 garlic cloves whole.
1 tsp. dark molasses
½ tsp salt.
1 small carrot, cut in two.

Arrange the meat pieces in casserole, or other dish having a cover. Add other ingredients. Add a tomato for richness of flavor.

Heat to boiling point, either on stove top or in oven at 375 degs. if up to that point for other baking.

Cook in slow oven for at least three hours to make completely tender.

Serve the hot meat (it will come easily from the small solid bones) with potatoes, and your choice of string beans, boiled onions, carrots, cabbage at least two of these. With your own patch of vegetables you will still have a selection. Keep the bones and the gravy for later use. Cover, in a basin.

According to the number of servings, you may have some meat left. Use it the next day for a stack of unusual

BEEF PANCAKES

1 cup cooked chopped beef.
1 tbsp chopped parsley.
1 small chopped onion.
A little salt.

PANCAKE BATTER

1 cup unbleached flour.
1 tbsp wheat germ.
1 tbsp brewer's yeast.
2 tbsp skim milk powder.
½ tsp baking powder.
2 small eggs.
½ cup vegetable stock.
2 Tbsp skim milk powder.
½ tsp salt.
Soft margarine or soy oil.

Mix all ingredients except margarine, leaving the mixture rather lumpy; add chopped beef and seasonings.

Melt margarine or oil in pan; pour in all of batter to make a large pancake. Cook quickly on one side; cut into quarters and turn each quarter with a spatula to brown on second side.

Will serve four, with slices of tomatoes and lettuce or cabbage wedges. The extra protein in eggs, milk powder, yeast and wheat germ increase the food value to an acceptable level, still making a meal at reasonable cost.

Now comes the final use from the short ribs buy. Simmer the bones in water with a whole garlic clove, a quarter cup of brown rice, and a little salt. When rice is cooked, remove the bones.

With the gravy from the original cooking of the meat, make up two cups of liquid. This dish is called

CARROT KUGEL
(German for Ball or Dumpling)

2 cups gravy.
1 cup finely chopped carrot.
1 tbsp chopped parsley or other green herb.
1 small onion, chopped.
The cooked rice.
1 tsp lemon juice.
1 tsp molasses.

Heat all ingredients in saucepan. Simmer 10 minutes.

Meanwhile make the Kugel:
1 cup wholewheat flour
1 tsp baking powder
1 tsp salt
2 tbsp soft margarine
3 tbsp cold water

Mix all ingredients with a fork into a ball.

Turn the hot gravy and vegetables into a casserole.

Place the ball of dough in the centre. Cover, and bake at 350 degs. for about 20 minutes. Remove cover and cook for 10 or 15 minutes longer until lightly browned.

This is another unusually delicious meal. Will serve four if other vegetables or a salad are used to complete the meal.

YOUR TURN TO COOK: AN INDIAN PUDDING

By MARGO DONNELLY

(Today's reader recipe was given to us by Mrs. Denis Donnelly of 1041 Queens. If you have a favorite or family recipe you would willingly share with Times readers, please send it to the Family Desk of the Times, 2621 Douglas.)

Indian Pudding is a dessert. It serves a large number of people and it's also good for you. (Made with corn meal). Besides being quite easy to make, it's quick. It's fairly inexpensive too

We copied this from a friend (Pam Henson) some time ago, and I don't know where she got it from.

It feeds 10 to 12 not very hungry people, or four to six hungry people.

INDIAN PUDDING

4 cups milk
1 cup yellow corn meal
Two eggs lightly beaten
One-third cup finely minced suet (optional)
Half-cup sugar
Two-thirds cup light molasses
Three-quarter teaspoon salt
Half-teaspoon cinnamon
Quarter-teaspoon ground cloves
Quarter-teaspoon ground ginger
Eighth teaspoon nutmeg

Bring milk just to boiling point. Gradually add the corn meal, beating well. When it begins to thicken, set aside to cool.

When nearly cool, stir in remaining ingredients.

Pour into buttered baking dish, bake two hours at 325 degrees. Serve hot or cold.

NOTE: Play around with the spices in it — depending on personal preferences.

Lids Back

Canning lids for home preserving are now available in some Victoria area stores after having been unobtainable for much of the current harvest season.

Canada Safeway outlets report a limited supply of lids in all its stores, plus a smaller quantity of canning jars.

Rhine's Unique Onion Flan Created for Wine Tasters

By KARL ROHRICH

Grape-gathering begins in the Federal Republic of Germany at the end of September and continues throughout October. The wine-leaves along the Rhine, the Moselle, the Saar, the Main and the Neckar have already turned red and brown. The night frosts, which mostly set in as early as the end of October, have been hard on them.

And in November only a few grapes remain on leafless vines on particularly sunny slopes. These provide the basis for "Spatlese" (late harvest) wines. They are not picked until November's mists and rains begin to shade into winter proper.

Even if there should be severe early night frosts with more than seven degrees centigrade below zero, this is not a disaster for the vintner, for in such rare years the result is "Eiswein" (ice wine), wine from grapes which are shrivelled up and frozen hard when they arrive at thewine press. They provide a particularly excellent wine.

When the grape harvest is over in the vineyards and the grape juice runs from the press into the old oaken barrels, the growers begin to taste the cloudy white liquid which is just beginning to ferment: the first young wine. The experienced call tell at once what the year's vintage will be like. And many wine-lovers come to taste the young wine as well.

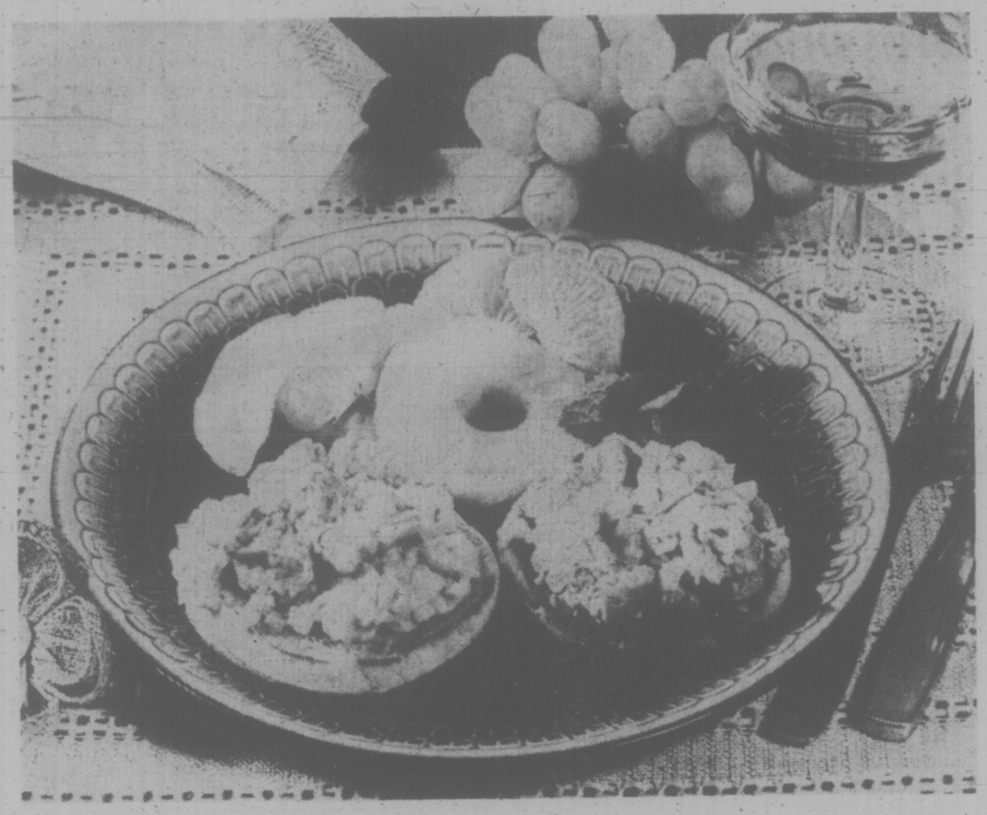
A unique dish goes along with this wine tasting: the "Zwiebelkuchen," a kind of onion flan. This is something which is little known outside the wine-growing areas of Germany, France and Switzerland and which is made there only at the time of the grape-harvest. Here is how this unique dish is prepared:

For the pastry you will need nine ounces of flour, two eggs, half an ounce of yeast, four and a half ounces of curds, a little salt and about two ounces of butter. With these ingredients make a normal yeast dough. While this dough is rising, fry four and a half ounces of bacon in a saucepan and add to it two pounds of onions cut into half rings and a cup of water. Cook over low heat until the onions are soft.

Allow this bacon and onion mixture to cool, stir in two eggs (yolks and whites) and add a teaspoon of grated nutmeg, a teaspoon of salt and a pinch of ground white pepper. Now butter a springform baking tin, roll out the yeast dough and line the bottom and sides of the tin. Now fill with the egg, onion and bacon mixture, to which a quarter of a pint of sweet cream and three and a half ounces of butter have been added. Bake for one hour in the oven at a temperature of between 320 and 356 degrees Fahrenheit.

While the "Zwiebelkuchen" is baking, the young wine is being chilled. It is a delicious combination in September, October and November in Germany's wine-growing areas along the Rhine and the Moselle, the Saar and the Main, as the new wine ferments in the heavy oak casts to become — we hope — another good vintage.

La Scala International



Sunshine scrambled salmon-egg dish puts candlelight to shame.

Elegance in the Daylight

Serving an elegant little dinner for two has inspired many a romance. But an equally tempting idea (and one that's simpler to prepare) is a late-morning brunch featuring Salmon Scrambled Eggs served on toasted muffin halves.

Accompanied by delicious fresh fruit (we've used orange sections, pineapple slices and grapes), a nice light wine — and you, this sunshine dish will put candlelight to shame.

SALMON SCRAMBLED EGGS

1 can (3¾ oz.) B.C. salmon
3 eggs
½ can (10 oz. size) cream of vegetable soup
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 English muffins, halved and toasted

Flake salmon with juice, mashing the bones. Blend soup into lightly beaten eggs. Add salmon and seasonings. Melt butter or margarine in frypan heating until it just starts to turn brown. Add salmon mixture cooking slowly and stirring frequently to let uncooked mixture flow under cooked. When desired consistency has been reached, serve over toasted English muffin halves. Makes two hearty servings.

But if it's dinner you're stuck on, and the suggestion of salmon still appeals, try this:

SALMON-STUFFED BAKED TOMATOES

2 cans (7¾ oz. each) or 1 can (15½ oz.) B.C. salmon
6 baking potatoes
½ cup hot milk
1½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
¼ tsp. thyme
1 egg beaten
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
½ cup fine dry bread crumbs
¼ cup butter, melted

Heat oven to 350 degrees. Wash and bake potatoes as usual. Cut potatoes in halves lengthwise while hot. Scoop potato out into a bowl, keeping shells intact. Set shells on a large baking sheet. Add hot milk to potato and beat or mash until very light and fluffy. Add seasonings and egg and beat well to blend. Drain salmon. Fold in salmon, together with onion and parsley, and spoon mixture lightly into the shells. Combine bread crumbs and butter and sprinkle over potato. Bake about 20 minutes or until nicely browned and heated through. Serves 6.

The following for your salmon files are also what you can do cheaply (and in a hurry) with the 7¾ oz. tin of salmon.

WITH SOY EXTENDERS

To make basic mixture, place 1 can (7¾ oz.) B.C. salmon in a bowl with its juices; mash bones; flake. Add 1 packet (1 oz.) soy protein extender plus 3 oz. water; stir well. THis will yield 1 2-3 cups salmon mixture which can then be used to make a salmon loaf or salmon croquettes.

Salmon Loaf — To the 1 2-3 cups extended salmon mixture, add chopped parsley, chopped onion, seasoned salt, and 1 beaten egg. Place in 1-quart greased casserole dish; sprinkle top generously with Parmesan cheese. Bake at 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Serves 4.

Salmon Croquettes — To 1 2-3 cups extended salmon mixture, add ½ teaspoon salt, cayenne pepper, 1 teaspoon dried parsley flakes, 1 teaspoon instant onion, 1 cup crushed salted soda crackers (about 24) OR 1 cup fine dry bread crumbs, and 1 medium beaten egg. Mix well; add ½ can (10 oz. size) cream of vegetable soup. Chill mixture. Shape into patties. Dip each pattie in fine bread crumbs, then beat in egg, then again in bread crumbs. Fry patties in hot oil until golden; turn and fry until second side is golden. Serve with tartar sauce. Makes 6 patties.

Convenience Food Cost Cheaper Says Agency

By MARIAN BURROS

Much to the delight of the processed food industry, and much to the chagrin of consumer advocates preaching economy through home preparation, the U.S. Department of Agriculture continues to maintain that the majority of convenience foods are as cheap or cheaper than those made from scratch.

USDA has compiled an elaborate series of charts and statistics which appear to back up the claim and which are quoted by those who benefit most from such statistics.

Fuller evaluation of their research indicates that such claims are nutritionally askew.

In a recent speech, Larry Traub, an economist with the Agriculture Department, said: "The hypothesis that convenience foods contribute to higher prices may be questionable." He cited a January, 1974 study of 90 food items which, he said, showed that "59 per cent had a cost per serving equal to, or less than, their home-prepared or fresh counterparts."

Convenience foods are defined as those which "require less work or the adding of fewer ingredients in the home than home-prepared counterparts."

But Traub neglected to tell his audience at a Michigan State University food product development symposium one significant fact: no attempt had been made to compare te utritioal value or te the nutritional value or the percentage of high-cost ingredients in the home-prepared versus the convenience items.

Instead Traub said, "the lower cost of convenience meat items results, in part, from the fact that much more of the edible meat is used, enabling processors to more efficiently utilize a carcass."

In an effort to verify the concept that home-prepared food contains larger quantities of more expensive ingredients per serving than convenience foods, four of the products listed in Traub's chart as costing more when home-prepared were tested: beef stew, chicken chow mein, pork fried rice and spaghetti with tomato sauce and cheese.

The same recipes used by USDA for their survey were used in this test. In each of the four comparisons, the home-prepared versions had proportionately more of the expensive ingredients than their commercial counterparts. Thus, they provided more of the daily nutrient requirements of the higher-cost foods.

For instance, there is only one-tenth of an ounce of chicken in a serving of less than ½ ounce in the frozen version, but 2⅛ ounces in the homemade serving.

A 10-ounce package of frozen pork fried rice contains ½ ounce pork. Ten ounces of the home-prepared dish contains more than four times as much pork, over 2⅛ ounces.

If the commercial products contained as much of these ingredients, they would cost considerably more than the homemade.

Not taking this differential into account when computing the relative cost of these items invalidates USDA's statistics. Food value cannot be measured by quantity alone; quality evaluation is essential.

There are some convenience products that cost the same or less than home-prepared products and have the same nutritional quality: frozen orange juice and frozen french fries for example.

Pass the Kromeskies

By LON WOOD
Times Staff

How'd ya like to tuck into a mess o' sizzling kromeskies? A plate piled with pemmican rub-a-boo? Maybe Coquilles Eskimo would be apropos.

These and scores of other recipes comprise an anthology of food and drink over the past 107 years in Canada, together with helpful hints, historic engravings, cartoons, advertisements, menus and photos.

The collection is tagged Pierre and Janet Berton's Canadian Food Guide, a totally revised edition of the 1966 Centennial Food Guide which was sold mostly by direct mail by McClelland and Stewart publishers.

"In '66 and '67 there was a real trend to instant food, but it's tapering off now," co-author Janet Berton said in Victoria recently during a visit to promote the book. "Even though it's not intended as a cook book, the guide will be appreciated more now because of the current revival of old time cooking styles."

Mrs. Berton researched the book and tested all the recipes on her husband and eight children. She put ticks in the index by the recipes she feels are worth trying, and crosses by ones included more for historical value, on the "jolly times of Canada—what people were really like."

"Beer soup, for example," she said. "It's more fun to drink the beer straight than to make the soup."

Local contributions come from Times columnists Arthur Mayse and Jack Scott.

Mayse tells how to cook a grouse outdoors, and embarks on a few well-chosen words about how not to handle freshly caught fish.

British Columbia Salmon and Oyster Casserole was picked up by the Bertons during a summer visit with the Scott family in the Gulf Islands.

Featured prominently at the front of the guide is Janet's Soup—proclaimed in two-inch high letters, with a full-page color plate of its own.

"The male editor of this book unconditionally guarantees this soup," states the preface. "In 20 years of marriage he has drunk bathtubfuls of it. It demands seconds, thirds and even fourths . . ." (Recipe below.)

During testing of the recipes—which included several weeks of Rapee pie, Apple soup, Bread Omelet, Nellie's Pudding, Fried Fingers and Ginger Cake—one of the younger Bertons was heard to plead: "Mom . . . when are we going back to eating normal?"

The B.C. born author, a Vancouver Province reporter before she married Berton, said some of her older children are steeped in nutrition awareness and are more or less vegetarian "without even trying." Some of their recipes are included in the guide.

Janet Berton's Super Soup

Take one large beef heart, place it in a pot with four quarts of cold water, bring to a boil and skim. Take all the leaves and tops from 4 celery stalks plus 3 large onions, finely chopped, and simmer with the heart for two days. Remove meat and vegetables and strain the broth. To this add the following vegetables, finely diced:

4 stalks celery, 2 carrots, ½ turnip, ¼ green pepper, ¼ cup parsley, ½ cup chives.

Then pour in 2 large tins tomatoes and add these herbs and condiments:

1 tsp. each of oregano, celery seed, marjoram, thyme, basil and monosodium glutamate; ½ tsp. each of sage, savory, rosemary and chervil. Dash of Tabasco sauce, Angostura bitters and Worcestershire sauce. Salt, pepper to taste.

Now cook the soup for half an hour and serve. The aroma is maddening. The flavor intoxicating. A little dry bread should be its only companion. It is a meal in itself.

For future meals remove all vegetables and strain again. Then add one half cup each of freshly diced celery, carrots and onions. Bring to a boil but don't cook the vegetables further. Serve.

The soup improves with age. As it simmers on the back of thestove the water in which other vegetables have been cooked may be added to it. If this makes the stock too thick simply strain and start again.

And don't throw out that beef heart. It can be converted to "Shepherd's Pie or stuffed wth bread crumbs, onions, celery and all the condiments listed above, baked in a 325 degree oven for half an hour and served as a main dish with baked potatoes.

Toddlers love 'em any time of day

That's a fact — most youngsters are so fond of one particular cereal, they'll eat it morning, noon and night. It's the cereal many of these youngsters ate as their first solid food when they were wee babies — Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits. Now they're toddlers and nursing bottles are for babies, these sturdy toddlers eat their Farley's with a spoon. Serve Farley's-and-milk to your youngster. Or, for a between-meals snack, let your youngsters have a Farley's to eat just like an ordinary biscuit. Farley's are good for growing youngsters — and far from ordinary, for Farley's have added Riboflavin, Niacin, Iron and Calcium. Ask for Farley's Baby Feeding Biscuits at your favourite food store.

Salty Sauce Staple of Vietnamese Fare

By CRAIG CLAIBORNE

For better or for worse (and we consider it our loss), we have never been in Vietnam. For a long time, however, we have been intrigued by the brief glimpses and flavors of Vietnamese cooking we have experienced on occasional visits to Paris, which boasts several very good Vietnamese restaurants.

We know by reputation that the Vietnamese admire spicy foods, and a staple of the table is the delightful nuoc nam, an insidiously good and somewhat salty sauce made with bottled fish essence (it is rather like a light amber colbred soy with an intriguing fish flavor).

We have felt deprived over the years never to have had in our possession a really good book that details Vietnamese cooking. Among the dishes that have captivated our palate are grilled pork patties, wrapped in fresh lettuce leaves, which provide a marked and delectable contrast to the hot grilled filling; and a mavelous grilled duck fish with a delicate lemon flavor. Both are served with nuoc nam sauce as a dip. We came across an admirable source for these dishes in a new book called "Oriental Barbecues" by May Wong Trent. It has recipes from China, Mongolia, Korea, Japan and Indonesia as well as Vietnam. It is published by Macmillan ($6.95).

Here is an adaptation for the grilled port dish. There is also the recipe for nuoc nam sauce. The basic fish sauce used in making the noc nam is widely available in Chinese food outlets in New York and elsewhere.

VIETNAMESE GRILLED PORK PATTIES IN LETTUCE LEAVES

The Pork:

2 pounds ground pork
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped or mashed between waxed paper
1 teaspoon grated fresh ginger
1 tablespoon dry Sherry or Chinese shao-hsing wine.
2 tablespoons light soy sauce (editors not: preferably imported)
2 tablespoons peanut, vegetable or corn oil
1 teaspoon sugar
Salt to taste.

The wrapping and garnishes:

24 large Boston lettuce leaves, well rinsed and patted dry
1 cup loosely packed fresh coriander (also called Chinese parsley, cilantro and culantro) leaves, available in Chinese and Spanish-speaking markets.
1 cup loosely packed fresh mint leaves
1 cup chopped scallion
2 Cups raw rice cooked without salt until tender and cooled to room temperature
Nuoc nam sauce (see recipe).

1. Combine all the ingredients for the ground pork in a bowl and blend well with the fingers. Place the bowl briefly in the refrigerator. Do not freeze. The chilling will faciliatate shaping the patties.

2. Meanwhile, prepare a charcoal fire.

3. With the fingers and palms, shape the port into two inch balls of approximately the same size.

4. Maneuver each ball into a miniature football shape, approximately three inches long. Chill until ready to use.

5. Run askewer lengthwise (see not) through each patty and grill turning frequently, until browned and cooked through. Serve immediately. The technique for eating the patties is as follows: Open a lettuce leaf and add a sprig of Chinese parlsey, one or two mint leaves, chopped scallion and a small spoonful of rice. Add the hot pork patty and wrap the leaf around. Using the fingers, dip the "package" into the nuoc nam sauce and eat with the fingers.

Yield. Four to eight servings.

Note: We cooked the patties prior to skewering. We skewered them after they were cooked to facilitate handling.

NUOC NAM SAUCE

1 cup fish sauce (see note)
6 quarter-inch thick slices, peeled fresh ginger, finely chopped
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1 teaspoon hot red pepper flakes (or use a little cayenne pepper to taste)
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons sugar
¼ cup water.

Combine all the ingredients and stir to blend. Serve equal portions into individual bowls and serve with Vietnamese dishes. Leftover sauce may be kept refrigerated for a week or longer.

Yield: About 1½ cups.

Note: Fish sauce is widely available in Chinese groceries. May Wong Trent suggests that a light soy sauce (editor's note: preferably imported) such as that found on most American supermarket shelves may be substituted for the fish sauce.

Speaking of the Orient and grilled foods, we have long nourished a keen appetite for a Genghis Khan or Mongolian "barbecue" in which foods were cooked at table over a curved grill that resembles a rather broad and shallow helmet.

The name is said to derive from the 12th century when the hordes of the conqueror built fires under their rounded metal headpieces and cooked their lamb, or whatever else was at hand, on top.

In her book, "Oriental Barbecues," May Wong Trent offers her version of the Mongolian fire grill and proposes that the foods may be cooked on a makeshift heavy metal cookie sheet placed over an electric grill or charcoal fired hibachi. Here is our version of the Mongolian dish prepared once in collaboration with Virginia Lee, the Chinese cooking instructor.

GENGHIS KHAN GRILL

1½ pounds top sirloin or round steak or a well-marbled cut. (Boneless lamb or chicken, thinly sliced could be substituted for the beef.)
1 cup light soy sauce (preferably imported)
¼ cup finely minced fresh ginger
3 tablespoons finely minced garlic
2 tablespoons dry sherry or shao-hsing Chinese wine
3 scallions, finely chopped
¾ teaspoon sugar
Salt to taste
½ teaspoon hot red pepper flakes, optional
½ cup peanut, vegetable, or corn oil
½ pound spinach, well washed and drained, optional.
2 bunches water cress, tough stems removed, optional
1 pound zucchini, trimmed and cut into small "sticks" or batons about two inches long and half an inch square.
½ pound fresh bean sprouts, optional
2 pads fresh bean curd, available in Chinese markets, optional
½ pound mushrooms, thinly sliced, opional

1. slice or have the meat, sliced as thinly as possible against the grain. It should be sliced as for sukiyaki or shabu-shabu or a Chinese chrysanthemum pot. Arrange the meat in one layer, slightly overlapping, on a platter of small, individual dishes. If desired and the slices seem too thick, they may be pounded lightly with a flat mallet to make them thinner.

2. In a small bowl combine the soy sauce, ginger, garlic, wine, scallions, sugar, salt, and red pepper flakes.

3. Brush or spoon a little of the sauce over the meat when it is ready to be cooked.

4. Place the vegetables on individual serving plates or in bowls. The kinds of vegetables do not matter but there should be several.

5. Start a fire with charcoal in a unit over which the Mongolian grill will sit securely. The circumference of the charcoal base should approximate that of the Mongolian grill. Use sufficient charcoal to create intense heat. Make certain that the charcoal unit is well-insulated so as not to burn the table on which it sits. We used a portable round concrete slab.

6. When the charcoal is ready, add the top part of the grill. Brush the top of the grill with oil and pour about ¼-inch around the inside rim. Add a few teaspoons of sauce to the oil.

7. Using chopsticks or a fondue fork, let each guest prepare and cook his own food, first adding the beef to the grill and then alternately the remaining ingredients. Initially the meat will probably tend to stick to the grill, but we find that as the cooking progresses and the grill becomes "cured" through heat and oil, the foods will cook without sticking. As the oil and sauce disappear in cooking, add a little more of both. Continue adding oil and sauce as necessary. Serve with hot, freshly cooked rice.

Yield: Four servings.

Master Breads Mix Serves a Variety of Uses

You mean that from a simple mixture of flour, sugar, baking powder, salt and wheat bran cereal you can make muffins, coffee cake, loaf slices, pancakes or waffles?

That's right! And one recipe for this Master Breads Mix is enough for more than just one batch of muffins or coffee cake?

Right again! In fact, one recipe provides enough to make three different kinds of breads.

You mean you can store the Master Breads Mix tightly covered on the cupboard shelf and use the rest later.

Absolutely correct. So you can have muffins with dinner on Monday, pancakes for breakfast Wednesday and coffee cake with the neighbors on Friday . . . or loaf slices for the kids' after school snack on Monday, muffins with brunch on Wednesday and waffles before the ball game on Friday . . .

And all you do is stir eggs, milk and vegetable oil into some of the Master Breads Mix and the work is almost done? That's the idea.

MASTER BREADS MIX

4 cups regular all-purpose
3 tablespoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons salt
1 cup sugar
3¼ cups wheat bran cereal

In large container, stir all ingredients together. Store tightly covered.

Yield: 6 cups Master Breads Mix.

MUFFINS

1 egg
¼ cup vegetable oil
1 cup milk
2 cups Master Breads Mix

1. In large mixing bowl, beat egg until foamy. Add oil and milk; beat well. Add Master Breads Mix, stirring only until combined. Let stand 2 minutes or until cereal is softened. Portion batter evenly into 12 greased 2½-inch muffin-pan cups.

2. Bake in oven at 400 degrees F. about 25 minutes or until muffins are golden brown.

Yield: 12 muffins.

COFFEE CAKE

½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 tablespoons flour
2 teaspoons cinnamon
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup flaked coconut
2 tablespoons regular margarine or butter, melted
1 egg
¼ cup vegetable oil
1¼ cups milk
2 cups Master Breads Mix

1. Measure brown sugar, flour, cinnamon, nuts and coconut into small mixing bowl; stir to combine. Add margarine; mix well. Set aside.

2. In large mixing bowl, beat egg until foamy. Add oil and milk; beat well. Add Master Breads Mix; mix thoroughly. Let stand 2 minutes or until cereal is softened. Spread batter evenly in greased 9x9x2-inch baking pan. Sprinkle brown sugar mixture over batter.

3. Bake in oven at 350 degrees F. about 45 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near centre comes out clean. Cool about 5 minutes; cut into squares. Serve warm with butter.

Yield: 8 servings.

LOAF SLICES

1 egg
¼ cup vegetable oil
1¼ cups milk
2 cups Master Breads Mix
Regular margarine or butter, softened jam
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
¼ teaspoon salt.

1. In large mixing bowl, beat egg until foamy. Add oil and the 1¼ cups milk; beat well. Add Master Breads Mix; mix thoroughly. Let stand 2 minutes or until cereal is softened. Spread batter evenly in greased 9x5x3-inch loaf pan.

2. Bake in oven at 350 degrees F. about 50 minutes or until wooden pick inserted near centre comes out clean. Cool 10 minutes; remove from pan. Cool completely on wire rack.

3. Jammy Loaf Slices, cut loaf into ½-inch slices. Spread one side of each slice with margarine, then with jam. Place on baking sheet, jam side up. Broil 5 inches from source of heat about 3 minutes or until edges are golden brown. Serve immediately.

4. French Toasted Loaf Slices, use day-old loaf. Cut loaf into ½-inch slices. In shallow dish or pan, beat the second egg until foamy. Stir in the ½ cup milk, the vanilla and salt. Dip slices into egg mixture, turning once and allowing time for both sides to take up liquid. Cook on greased and preheated griddle, turning once, until golden brown. Serve immediately.

Yield: 18 slices.

PANCAKES OR WAFFLES

1 egg
¼ cup vegetable oil
1¾ cups milk
2 cups Master Breads Mix

1. In large mixing bowl, beat egg until foamy. Add oil and milk; beat well. Add Master Breads Mix; mix thoroughly. Let stand 2 minutes or until cereal is softened.

2. Pancakes, dip up batter using ¼ cup dry measure. Cook on greased and pre-heated griddle, turning once, until golden brown. Serve immediately.

3. Waffles, cook on greased and preheated waffle iron until golden brown and slightly crisp at edges . . . amount of batter used for each waffle depends on size waffle iron used. Serve immediately.

Yield: 14 pancakes about 5 inches in diameter or 3 large waffles, about 9 inches in diameter.

Week's Money Saver

When vegetables are seasonally abundant, as they are now, the economy-minded food shopper has special reason to choose sweet peppers. They are quite low in calories — about 15 per medium pepper — and very rich in vitamin C, for one pepper, raw or cooked, provides the full amount of vitamin C needed each day.

Green peppers have long been popular for stuffing and baking. They add a spot of color and extra zing to salads, cottage cheese, relishes, chicken a la king and even sandwiches. Peppers, stuffed with minced ham or chicken, beef hash, ground meat, potato salad, fish or egg mixtures, rice or other pasta in tomato sauce with cheese, have always added pep to a meal. Food Advisory Services, Agriculture Canada, suggest Roman or kidney beans with rice in tomato sauce as a different and nourishing filling for plump, shiny green peppers.

GREEN PEPPERS AU GRATIN

6 medium green peppers
½ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups cooked Roman or kidney beans. If canned beans are used, drain well.
1 7½ ounce can tomato sauce
1½ cups cooked rice
½ teaspoon ground oregano
1 teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons grated cheddar cheese

Remove tops, seeds and membranes from peppers. Saute onion in butter until transparent. Add next five ingredients. Fill each pepper with stuffing. Place in greased baking dish. Cover and bake at 350 F. until peppers are tender (about 30 minutes). Uncover and top each pepper with one tablespoon cheese and bake until cheese melts (about 5 minutes). 6 servings.

Flower Vegetables Out

Two of B.C.'s "flower vegetables" — broccoli and cauliflower — share double billing in the latest B.C. Food Information recipe leaflet. "B.C. Grown Broccoli and Caulifower" will be available in food stores around the middle of October.

The "B.C. Grown Cauliflower and Broccoli" pamphlet contains ideas and hints on how to prepare and serve these duel vegetables. Recipes with an international flavour, and toppings, sauces and seasoned butters are just a sampling of varied suggestions possible with broccoli and cauliflower.

Cooking cauliflower and broccoli correctly makes a difference in flavour and in retaining their nutrition. Brush or scrape the vegetables is recommended, but if peeling is necessary, peel thinly. Cook in a small amount of boiling water. Vegetables cooked in cold water have almost twice the nutrient loss. Cover the sauce pan tightly to shorten the cooking time and to cut down vitamin loss. Cook only to the "just tender" stage, then serve immediately.

BROCCOLI

Grown in the Fraser Valley, B.C. fresh broccoli is available usually from September through to November. This year's estimates predicted crops to be approximately 3.2 million pounds. This is a slight decrease from 1973.

Broccoli is delicious when green and tender. Look for tender firm stalks with compact green heads. Yellow wilted leaves indicate age. This vegetable can be kept for a few days by placing it in a plastic bag and storing in the refrigerator.

CAULIFLOWER

Cauliflower has been termed the "aristocrat of the cabbage family". This is because of its sensativity in growing. History records also date this vegetable back to the second century. Similar to broccoli, cauliflower has been around for approximately 2,000 years. Today it can be found readily available in food stores almost everywhere.

In 1973, over 6 million pounds of cauliflower was grown in British Columbia, with major concentration in the Vancouver Lower Mainland and Fraser Valley areas. Crop estimates for 1974 are predicted to be approximately 6.5 million pounds. About 60 per cent of B.C. cauliflower is sold fresh.

Fresh cauliflower should have white to creamy white compact solid and clean curds or flowerettes. Jacket leaves should be green for freshness. (Remember that the outer leaves make an excellent addition to soup, sauces and casseroles).

dear abby

Some Liars Are Bigger Liars Than Others

DEAR ABBY: Grandma thinks she was "done wrong" by her son and daughter-in-law because they asked her to babysit for them while they took a course in landscaping, when they really took a series of dancing lessons. (They knew Grandma wouldn't babysit if they told her the truth.)

Well, tell her she's lucky. My daughter got us to take her child for five months. She told us she was trying to get her life straightened out, and was working overtime to earn money to fix up her house so she and the baby could have a nicer place to live.

We knocked ourselves out looking after the boy. It cost us a bundle to fly up to get him, also for babysitters (I work part-time), not to mention loss of income for clients I had to turn away.

Now we find out that our daughter had taken up with a man who didn't want the child around. Three weeks after the baby went back with her, she phoned and asked if we wanted to adopt him because she was going to give him up and marry the man she'd been living with.

It's one thing to have kids who are liars. Some are bigger liars than others. — Grandma.

DEAR GRANDMA: Yours not only flew the coop, she used you to feather her love nest.

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column from a handicapped person who resented seeing perfectly able-bodied drivers zip into parking spaces marked "Reserved for the Handicapped," then walk a few steps to the store or building.

The writer complained that he often hobbled on crutches a long way to his destination while some inconsiderate, selfish clod took the parking place reserved for the handicapped.

Abby, one need not be crippled to be handicapped. Many disabilities are not visible. A heart patient, or one with severly reduced lung power may be more seriously handicapped than someone on crutches.

You should have said, "Before calling people 'inconsiderate, selfish clods' for having grabbed your parking space, consider that many who appear to be able-bodied and healthy may be in far worse physical condition than you are." — Asthmatic's Wife.

DEAR WIFE: Thank you for pointing out something that never occurred to me. You are far more insightful than I.

DEAR ABBY: I didn't know how to address letters to my daughter who lives with her boyfriend out of town, so I asked my psychiatrist who has a son who lives with his girl friend. He said he addresses his letters to Jane and John Doe. Now that's what I do. — Mother.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Concern with finances of partner, mate appear to be emphasized. Take nothing for granted. What appears a "dead issue" could rise from proverbial ashes. Basic change is indicated and involves Gemini, Virgo.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lie low; time is on your side. You can afford now to play waiting game. Be aware of what opposition thinks, plans. Marriage is spotlighted. One who appeared indifferent could aid in home building, loan or purchase. Domestic needs are spotlighted.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Employment matters command attention. Basic issues can be resolved if you face facts as they exist. Avoid wishful thinking. Pisces, Virgo persons may figure prominently. Keep health resolutions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar aspect highlights creativity, romance, emotional involvement, special relationship with children. Nothing occurs halfway — it is all or nothing. Know it and be prepared. You receive accolade from member of opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build on solid base. Get rid of notions which are childish, ill-conceived. Finish project. Reach beyond what appears to be a limitation. Get finger on pulse of current events. Catch up to the times!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Freedom to express ideas becomes more important than usual. Relatives are involved and so are close neighbors. Some people insist that you sign a petition. Maintain balance — and humor. Be independent enough to stick to your own beliefs, principles.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are artistic, versatile, sensitive, in love with love, probably weigh more than you should and suffered emotional setback last month. That changes now and your lifestyle takes direction, form. If single, you marry in 1975. Married or single, you will be promoting, organizing, taking on added responsibility, perhaps going into business for yourself.

Inflation Attacks Pentagon As Weapon Prices Soar $16B

WASHINGTON (WP) Soaring inflation has boosted the cost of completing 42 major Pentagon weapons projects by $16 billion over estimates of just three months ago.

The sharply increased estimates of the future cost of ships, planes, tanks and missiles are contained in a new preliminary quarterly report sent to Congress Tuesday.

The 42 key military projects —which the Pentagon keeps track of to measure inflation just as consumer organizations keep track of a standard "grocery basket"—now are forecast to cost $143.6 billion to complete as compared to $127.6 billion.

The new figure—covering a period through last June 30—is actually $16.9 billion higher than the estimate made last March 31. But Pentagon spokesman William Beecher said only $857 million of that increase is attributable to cost increases other than inflation.

The report highlights what undoubtedly will be a major issue for the Ford administration, Congress and the Pentagon in ten months ahead: Namely, how much loss of purchasing power through inflation can the military safely bear?

The report also no doubt speels trouble for some of the military's most sought after new projects. Some of the report's highlights: —The cost of a single B-1 bomber—which will not make its first flight until late this year—has jumped from $61.5 million to an estimated $76.4 million over the three-month period.

The proposed B-1 fleet of 244 bombers to be built over the next several years is already in some trouble on Capitol Hill. The weapon now shows up as the largest single victim of inflation in the new report, with its estimated total cost now $18.6 billion, up $3.6 billion in the last quarter strictly due to application of the higher inflation rates. Four years ago:, the B-1 program was estimated to cost $11.2 billion.

—The navy's Trident missile-firing submarine fleet of ten new vessels shows a $2.9 billion inflationary increase, pushing the total project to $15.4 billion over the next several years. Thist is about $1.5 billion for each missile-equipped submarine, up over the $1.2 billion estimate of only a year ago.

To cope with rising prices, Beecher said Tuesday that procurement of some items would have to be cut back, but he did not say which ones.

He also forecast "a substantial increase" in next year's military budget that goes to Congress in January to offset the inflationary pressures.

Beecher acknowledged, under questioning, that the new cost figures were dramatic. "They will have an impact on Congress. There is no question about it," Beecher said. He added, however, that the serious inflation in the U.S. "would come as no surprise to Congress" and he hoped that the lawmakers "understood and appreciated our candor" in revising the inflation factors to be more realistic rates which should give a better idea of how much new programs will cost in years to come."

Early Fall Time for Clematis

Clematis may be planted at any time when the soil is neither stickily wet nor frozen. Here a very good time is early fall.

Two reasons in favor of fall planting are warm soil to encourage early rooting, and the lack of hot drying winds to take the little bit of moisture from stems and leaves before new roots form.

Failures with clematis probably arise from disregard for basic needs which after all are common to 90 per cent of garden plants. The common need is a soil that is full of humus to hold moisture in summer, yet porous enough to have perfect drainage in winter.

Clematis roots must not become dry in summer, nor will they live if surrounded with standing water.

To prepare a planting hole, it is really necessary to break up the subsoil beneath our few inches of topsoil. Take the topsoil out, then work on the clay below to a depth of 18 inches if you possibly can. Our top soil is so shallow that we must realize that deepening it is the only way to have more healthy plants.

Clematis particularly are heavy feeders and need a large area for their roots. Take out some of the loosened clay. Put a layer of broken brick, old clay flower pots or even stones for drainage.

Then replace the clay with a mixture of leaf soil, compost, old farmyard manure. A handfull of bonemeal in the final topping-off layer of soil will be beneficial by spring.

An interesting fact for new gardeners is that the clematis is a member of the Buttercup Family, Ranunculaceae, thus its liking for a deep, cool, damp and rich soil can be understood.

It likes too a moderate summer climate for blooming and some varieties even prefer a north exposure.

In situations near house walls, often the spot chosen by gardeners for planting clematis, difficulty may be met in obtaining depth of good soil near enough to the surface for the first year's roots to work on, but remember that the minimum depth of soil preparation is 12 inches, and below that it must be broken for drainage.

Remove the plant from its container by turning the whole thing upside down on your left palm, spreading your thumb and first finger each side of the stem (with the training stake which is almost certain to be present).

Lift off the container, first loosening it by tapping its top edge, on a bench corner or shovel handle.

Without injuring the rootlets or removing soil clinging them, spread the roots out on the good mixture of soil you have put into the hole.

Add more of the mixture, gently working it down and around the roots. Then add a pail of water to drive out air and wash soil into close contact with the roots.

Top off the hole with enough soil to bring the level just a little higher than it was in the container. The tablespoon of bonemeal goes on top, lightly scratched in.

The first year of growing in your soil is the most critical for your clematis but don't expect much flowering.

It will be good for your plant to be cut back to about nine inches height in late March whatever kind or variety it may be. Then as new shoots develop and grow, they too can be shortened. This treatment builds up a strong framework the first year in your garden, with less strain on the roots than if sending nutrients to the end of one single shoot 12 or 15 feet long.

Clematis is a long living and lovely plant, adding a new dimension to gardening — the vertical — its growing space is usually upwards.

Some varieties may be grown on restricted trellises on balconies; or they will cascade over stone walls or wooden fences. The clematis is versatile.

DEPARTMENT OF THE ENVIRONMENT
FISHERIES RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

Sealed tenders clearly marked "Purchase of experimental fish Rosewall Creek hatchery" will be received by the Director, Pacific Biological Station, Box 100, Nanaimo, B.C., up to 4:00 p.m. P.D.T. on October 8, 1974, at which time they will be opened.

The tenders for the purchase of an estimated 16,000 to 20,000 lbs. of coho salmon are to be submitted in letter form on a price per pound basis, FOB, Rosewall Creek hatchery site.

These adult coho salmon will be available at the Rosewall Creek hatchery approximately 6 miles north of Bowser, B.C., commencing about October 15, 1974. The tenderer will supply adequate weighing scales, fish packing boxes and ice and will be required to pick up fish on 24 hour notice. The fish will be headed only.

All fish are expected to be in good condition and are to be processed for human consumption only. Weight of fish will be determined by Department personnel.

The tenderer will be responsible for transporting the fish and will observe that a bridge on the hatchery access road has a Department of Highways weight restriction of 20,000 lbs. To be considered, tenders must be accompanied by a money order or certified cheque payable to the Receiver General of Canada in the amount of 10 per cent of the tender based on prices and estimated quantity of 20,000 lbs. The deposit of the successful tender will be retained until the satisfactory completion of the operation. Payment for fish taken is payable to the Receiver General of Canada 40 days after date of each pick-up of fish.

The Department reserves the right to reject any or all tenders and the highest tender will not necessarily be accepted.

Mummenschanz: Mime as an Art

By AUDREY JOHNSON

There is nothing new under the sun, we have been told.

But for those, even seasoned theatre-goers, exposed to Mummenschanz for the first time, there is definitely something new in its conception of mimes, masks, and movement.

Most of us have seen Marcel Marceau or other mimists in the great tradition. Some saw the unique Blacklight Theatre of Prague last season, a distantly-related event.

But Mummenschanz is in no way derivative except in the sense that it is an extension, a fanciful development of old forms.

These extensions in all their superbly imaginative variety, humor and high style, were summed up in a touch of broad comedy at the conclusion of Tuesday's performance at the McPherson.

In this scene the competitive and ultimately destructive instincts of the human animal were expressed as two of the company of three — Andres Bossard and Bernie Schurch — vied in moulding the highly manipulative mask material on their faces.

Wonderful and bizarre effects ended in a mini-melee, with the two actors adhering to each other in a sort of custard-pie mess.

The cord upon which all this vivid imagination, whimsy and toe-touching on the border of burlesque, is strung, is human development from the single-celled creature emerging from the primordial soup, marine and swamp life, the insect and bird world to the primates and then man, complete with his basic jungle instincts.

One never sees the faces of the three — the third is a girl, Floriana Frassetto — until the final curtain. Their bodies are encased in black leotards and in the various manifestations, flexible body wrappings.

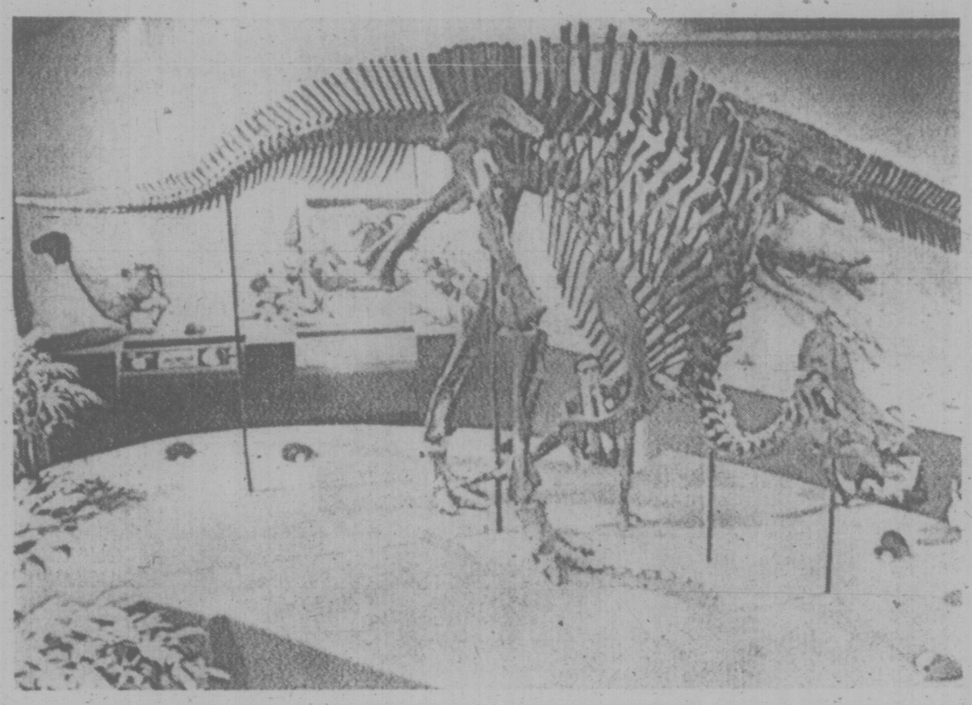
Superbly sinuous, there is not a movement, from the cock of a head, the marvellous delicacy of fingers that at times seem to shimmer, even to the flexing of a single toe, that is not highly expressive.

There seem to be no inhibiting bones, only fluid sinew and muscle inspired throughout by an acute probing of lively minds in the realm of human communication.

It is a silent show that reminds us forcibly that there are generally too many words, too many sounds, many of them non-essential.

The deliberate rhythm of padding bare feet, the occasional knock of elbows, wrists and hands on a wooden ramp that is the simple staging — these are the only sounds of Mummenschanz.

They are enough in a show that is one long visual delight.



PETRIFIED SKELETON of a four-ton, 28-foot-long tyrannosaur will be on view again Thursday amid the sub-tropical vegetation of Canada 75 million years ago at the Victoria Memorial Museum in Ottawa. The museum has been closed for renovations for the past five years.

Spinola Death Plot

LISBON (UPI) — The armed forces have arrested 197 persons believed involved in a right-wing plot to overthrow the leftist government of Premier Vasco Goncalves and the armed forces remained on full alert.

A high-ranking government official said the military had also uncovered a plot to assassinate former President Antonio de Spinola, who resigned Monday after losing a power struggle with Goncalves. He gave no details.

A military spokesman said the army found a rifle with a telescopic sight near Goncalves' official Sao Bento palace residence and arrested seven right-wing conspirators. But officials did not say whether the seven were planning to assassinate Goncalves, or what charges were being brought against them.

Indian Militancy's Causes Unchanged, and Worsening

OTTAWA (CP) — A high infant mortality rate, poor housing, low education and disease are a part of the social backdrop behind increasing Indian militancy.

And while some indicators of social well-being among the native people of the country show improvements in recent years, Statistics Canada figures reveal a worsening or static situation in other directions.

Infant mortality has declined, the native population is growing about twice as fast as the national average and economic loans to help establish industries for the native people have increased.

But figures published in Perspectives Canada, a statistics bureau publication, indicate that the condition of housing has largely deteriorated since the mid-sixties.

Other indicators show that despite improvements, living conditions for Indians and Inuit are far below those for Canadians as a whole.

The statistics show rapid movement by the native people into cities and towns in the last 20 years. In 1971, 30.7 per cent of Indians and Inuit lived in urban areas, while in 1961 the proportion was 12.9 per cent.

At the last census in 1971, there were about 5,000 Indians in Winnipeg — the largest group in any city. In 1961 there were only 1,080 and in 1951, only 210.

Infant mortality rates for Indians in 1970 were twice the national average while that for Inuit was nearly four times as high. A decade earlier, the rate was three times as high for Indians and 10 times higher for Inuit.

Northwest Territories Eskimos in 1968 had a hospitalization rate of 238 per 1,000 population while the national rate was 157 per 1,000 persons. In 1970 Eskimos in the Territory were 10 times more likely to die of pneumonia, three times more likely to die of injuries and accidents and six times more likely to perish in childhood.

One compensation is that their death rate from cardiovascular diseases was one-quarter the national rate.

In 1972, the birth rate for Indians and Inuit was more than twice the national rate. The death rate for Indians was about the same but for Inuit was slightly higher.

Housing, one of the biggest concerns in recent Indian representations, seems to have actually shown a decline based on a three-fold rating of reserve homes as poor, fair or good.

In 1971, Statistics Canada found that 25.4 per cent of families on reserves needed new houses. In 1965, 19.7 per cent were said to need new homes.

Statistics also show that in 1971, 15.9 per cent of occupied houses needed major repairs. In 1960, 6.8 per cent were found to be in that state.

The agency found that in 1971, 51.7 per cent of frame houses and those other than log were good while 20.8 per cent were rated poor. Eight years earlier, 59.4 per cent were rated good and 12.9 per cent were considered poor.

For log houses on reserves, 14.6 percent were rated good in 1971 and 64.1 per cent found to be poor in 1971. But in 1963, 25.3 per cent were considered good and 45.1 per cent were said to be poor.

The 1971 census found that while 80 per cent of reserve housing had electricity, only 30 per cent have running water, 25 per cent have indoor toilets and 20 per cent have indoor baths.

Among the Indian and Inuit population over 20 years of age only 1.7 per cent have university education compared with 11.9 per cent nationally.

About 80 per cent of Indians and Inuit in that age group have only elementary school education while the national figure is 36.8 per cent.

Gillnetters Protest On Puget

SEATTLE (AP) — Scores of gillnet boats illegally dropped nets into the choppy waters of Puget Sound Tuesday night as state patrol boats moved in to issue citations.

It was not immediately known how many citations had been issued.

Fishermen staged the fish-in to protest a pro-Indian U.S. federal court ruling that slashed their fishing season to four days this year.

"We have to do something to demand our rights," said one gillnetter.

Despite department warnings that fishermen would be regarded as poachers, about 50 fishing boats left Shilshole Bay at Seattle Wednesday evening, and others between Seattle and Tacoma reportedly joined protestors scattered in Puget Sound.

Gillnetters were protesting U.S. District Court Judge George Boldt's decision that guarantees Indian fishermen the right to catch 50 per cent of the harvestable salmon in Puget Sound.

Non-Indian fishermen, however, say the decision based on Indian treaties signed in the 1850s gives Indians an unfair advantage and threatens their livelihood.

Gillnetters were warned Wednesday that those violating regulations would be cited. Ray Morrison, of the fisheries department, said the citations for a gross misdemeanor carry a maximum penalty of a $1,000 fine, a year imprisonment and forfeiture of boat and equipment.

School Board Goods Stolen

About $400 worth of equipment was stolen Tuesday night from the Saanich District school board office at 9751 Third St. in Sidney.

RCMP said a transcriber, tape recorder and calculator were taken.

Entrance was gained by slipping a knife through a lock.

A window was also smashed in another school board building on the lot, but nothing was stolen.

Nanaimo Council Queries Offer

NANAIMO — City aldermen feel there are too many unanswered questions on amalgamation of Nanaimo and surrounding districts for the issue to be decided in a Nov. 2 vote of area residents.

To get some answers, aldermen have scheduled meeting for tonight and Thursday with officials of the municipal affairs department.

The government has promised the proposed new city about $4.7 million in special grants if the vote favors union.

In addition, the province has said it would retain responsibility for highways and policing for five years.

Amalgamation would go into effect Jan. 1, 1975.

Mayor Fed Up With Gov't

Cumberland's mayor is fed up with dealing with the provincial government.

Mayor William Moncrief announced Tuesday he will not seek re-election in the November civic elections, after three terms as mayor and one as aldermah.

"I am unable to take too much more of regionalism and resource boards," he told Cumberland municipal council.

Moncrief said he was "fed up with having to fight the people who are supposed to help us. We are being stymied at every turn by the provincial government."

2 Spend Test Week In Mock Space Lab

HOUSTON (UPI) — An astronaut-physician and another researcher are spending seven days testing biomedical experiments inside a mockup of spacelab — a small two-man laboratory to be taken into orbit in the US shuttle craft in the 1980s.

Astronaut Dr. Story Musgrave and Dennis R. Morrison, of the bioscience payloads office at the Johnson space centre, entered the mockup Tuesday for the first of a series of tests over the next six years. They will actually live in a house trailer adjacent to the mockup on off-duty hours.

Spacelab, the project of the 10-nation European space research organization, will be carried to orbit by trhe reusable space shuttle craft in the next decade. It will be manned by European scientists.

The lab is the size of a tiny efficiency apartment compared to the U.S. skylab which was the size of a three-bedroom house.

The test is a rehearsal for the shuttle ground support and flight crew operational procedures in addition to the 12 spacelab biomedical experiments.

Taxi Owners Seek 'Fair Competition'

If C & C Tax Service Ltd. is allowed to expand its operations on the Saanich Peninsula, all cab companies should be given the same chance, motor carrier commissioners were told Monday.

"Fair competition is all we ask," Bruce Woodward, president of Bluebird Cabs Ltd. said in the third day of a hearing by the B.C. motor carrier board.

The board is hearing an application by C & C to amalgamate its operating licence with that of its subsidiary, Sidney Taxi and Transport Co.

Woodward suggested that if C & C gets permission to pick up and deliver fares outside the existing five-mile limit, all other operators should be given similar access.

C & C has special interest in the Sidney area because it holds a federal franchise for airport limousine service, which entitles the company to pick up fares at the airport, whereas other Victoria cabs may only deliver there.

C & C driver Mel Jeffrey said this allows C & C to take the "cream off the milk" by delivering and picking up at flight times, but, in between flights the Sidney area suffers a lack of service.

The hearing was to be completed Tuesday and a decision by the board was considered possible within a month.

GALLERY ACQUIRES RARE MARBLE BUST

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Gallery unveiled to the public Tuesday what it calls one of the most important acquisitions in its history — a white marble bust of Pope Urban VIII, sculpted by the 17th century Italian sculptor, Gian Lorenzo Bernini.

Bernini, active as a painter, architect and sculptor, from the age of 17 until his death at 82 in 1680, designed the colonnade on the square in front of St. Peter's in Rome and numerous altars, fountains and other statuary.

The bust was created as a commission from Pope Urban VIII, one of the foremost art patrons of the period.

The gallery acquired it from a New York art dealer, but the price has not been revealed.

B.C. Sends Aid To Honduras

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. government's agricultural aid fund has pledged $25,0000 towards Red Cross aid for the victims of the recent hurricane in Honduras.

This brings to $80,000 the contribution sent so far by the Canadian Red Cross. It included cash donations of $61,000, and clothing and layettes, made by Red Cross members, valued at $19,000.

Funds will be used to purchase such urgently needed items as soaps, disinfectants, insecticides, food, beds and cutlery.

Minister Faces Buyers' Queries

Consumers will be able to question provincial Consumer Affairs Minister Phyllis Young on the work of her department when she appears on a special Channel 10 program on Thursday at 9 p.m.

Young will discuss consumer legislation and problems facing buyers.

The program is one of a regular series arranged by the Community Planning Association of Canada.

NO BLAME IN DEATH

A 75year-old woman died Sept. 23 as an indirect result of a traffic accident, a coroner's jury ruled Tuesday.

Nelley Louise Playne, 840 Vernon, was hit by a tow truck being backed by John Frederick Batey, 3455 Carter, on June 10 while she was walking on a Cook Street sidewalk near Yates.

Evidence showed Mrs. Playne died from a blood clot probably resulting from disruption of long-time clotting treatment.

The jury blamed neither Mrs. Playne nor Batey, but recommended trucks sound their horns before backing to the sidewalk from Auto Electric, 1110 Yates.

Holiday Recess 'Contempt'

TORONTO (CP) — A Jewish contractor, seeking $46,000 from two firms through a mechanic's lien, had his case dismissed in Brockville, Ont., last week because he refused to continue court action on the Yom Kippur holiday.

In an oral judgment made public here Tuesday, County Court Judge William Dubrule said the refusal of contractor Peter Kersen to proceed with the trial on the Jewish holiday was "tantamount to contempt."

Judge Dubrule, sitting as an officer of the Ontario Supreme Court, ordered the dismissal after three days of testimony, mostly by Mr. Kersen as president of Benoit and Kersen Ltd. of St. Therese, Que.

The judge also ordered Mr. Kersen to pay $7,800 in costs to the defendants, Steel Co. of Canada Ltd. and Dodge Construction Co. Ltd.

Judge Dubrule said the plaintiff, Benoit and Kersen Ltd., "is a corporation, it has no religion."

Mr. Kersen said he has not decided whether he will appeal the judgment.

The case began in August, 1972, when Benoit and Kersen, a family firm employing about 20 persons, entered a statement of claim for $44,569.59.

The statement contended that Benoit and Kersen had been awarded a contract by Dodge Construction as general contractor for a forging plant being built for Stelco at Gananoque, Ont. The contract covered the design and installation of plumbing, heating and ventilation systems.

However, a dispute over design changes resulted in Benoit and Kersen interrupting work on the project and the job being finished by another firm.

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation
Societe centrale d'hypotheques et de logement

ACCELERATED RENTAL HOUSING PROGRAM

To Provide Moderately-Priced Rental Housing In Urban Centers Experiencing Extremely Low Vacancy Levels

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation invites applications for loans under the National Housing Act for the construction, ownership and operation of approximately 100 units of rental housing in The Metropolitan Victoria Area.

Projects should provide housing accommodation for moderate-income families.

Land for any project must be owned or leased by the proponent or be under option to him. The proposed construction must conform to existing zoning regulations.

Loans up to 95 per cent of costs as determined by CMHC at 8 per cent per annum, amortized over 50 years, are available.

Borrowers must be prepared to enter into an operating agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which will specify the maximum rent chargeable in respect of each unit as well as the maximum tenant income. Calculation of the proposed rentals will provide for a reasonable return on the borrower's equity.

Two copies of loan applications shall be submitted together with two sets of preliminary plans and specifications. Any or all proposals may not necessarily be accepted.

Deposits are not required at the time of submission, but upon acceptance of a proposal a cheque for an amount calculated on $35.00 per housing unit in the project will be payable to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Sealed proposals in duplicate clearly marked "Proposals for Rental Housing Units" will be received until 2:00 p.m. on October 30, 1974.

Packages containing the complete information on the "Call for Proposals" and on "General Instructions" may be obtained from:

LONDON — Toni Holt of Playgirl Magazine said she offered Aristotle Onassis a chance to be a nude centrefold, but the Greek millionaire declined. "I wanted to picture Mr. Onassis naked sitting on top of thousands of dollar bills," she said. Miss Holt, who roams the world looking at naked men said her idea of a really magnetically handsome and sexy man is the ageing Onassis.

PHILOMATH, Ore. — Edith Smith says she feels remarkably well for having been dead nine months. Mrs. Smith, operator of a tavern here, recently received a notice from the Oregon board of revenue stating she had died Jan. 7, 1974. The state wanted to know if she had quit working. Mrs. Smith had a few questions of her own.

She wrote the department of revenue a letter asking: "Was my death accidental and can I collect double indemnity."

NEW YORK — Henry Kissinger wraps up his consultations on the Middle East today in preparation for his return next week to personal diplomacy in Egypt, Israel, Syria and Jordan. In addition to his visit to the Middle East Oct. 9-13, the state department announced Tuesday that Kissinger will fly to Moscow Oct. 23 for a four-day visit.

TORONTO — Australian Prime Minister Gough Whitlam is to tour Niagara Falls during a short visit to Canada this weekend. Whitlam, who is to hold talks with Prime Minister Trudeau in Ottawa, is also to visit Niagara-on-the-Lake Saturday.

FREDERICTON — Supporters of New Brunswick's Progressive Conservative government are celebrating victories in two byelections amid speculation a fall election may be in the offing. In York riding, David Bishop defeated Liberal Robert Strange, while in Campbellton, Fernand Dube defeated Liberal Maurice Harquail and New Democrat Harold Steeves. The victories give the Conservatives 32 members in the 58-seat legislature.

PHILADELPHIA — A Philadelphia man filed a $20,000 damage suit against a frozen pizza manufacturer Tuesday, charging that he injured his mouth, teeth and gums when he bit into a pizza containing a piece of wire. The complaint, brought by Richard Goldstein and his wife, Judi, claimed that Ellio's Pizza of Long Islanl City, was negligent in manufacturing the pizza.

HARNE, Tex. — "Considering the lapsed time the officers had been talking — about 20 minutes — and the fact that he had already killed two people, I elected to shoot the subject," Police Chief Roy Robertson said Tuesday.

Actually there was more to it than that.

On his way up the steps of the house, Robertson passed the body of Webb Cubert, hanging over a rail and dead from seven stab wounds. Cubert's wife Vivian was dead in her bed of 26 stab wounds.

Jose Sanchez, 25, was standing in a hallway, holding a big, bloody knife at the throat of the dead man's brother, Bill Cubert.

Three patrolmen were grouped around Sanchez and Cubert in the hall.

One of the patrolmen was Chief Robertson's 19-year-old son, Dan and the elder Robertson did not want to take a chance on a pistol shot.

"I borrowed a .22 magnum rifle from a neighbor," Chief Robertson said. It was all he had.

"I shot from the front porch, about 20 feet away, through the screen door. I was unable to really aim. It was dark on the porch. He was just inches from Bill Cubert. And he had an officer about a foot from him. My knees were a little wobbly."

The shot hit Sanchez in the right upper cheek. He dropped the knife as the bullet struck him and the police seized him.

Sanchez was operated on at the Scott and White Hospital in Temple, Tex., and is in critcal condition.

Robertson, 41, charged Sanchez with murdering the Cuberts, who were in their 60s.

Robertson said Sanchez was a Mexican, married to the Cuberts' daughter and father of a daughter by her.

They had been having domestic trouble and Sanchez had been seeking a reconciliation but she declined.

Robertson said he believed Sanchez broke into the house before dawn Tuesday to kill the Cuberts.

Mrs. Sanchez tried to intervene and was slashed on the finger. She was treated at a hospital and released.

It's Back to Movies In Recession

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — There haven't been any movies dealing with inflation but the signs of today's economy are apparent nonetheless.

They appear in the form of higher ticket and refreshment prices, and in more subtle ways such as the size of the crowds (which are larger) and the drink cups (which are smaller).

Joy Houck who supervises a chain of 47 movies houses says it's traditional that motion pictures attract larger audiences whenever the economy takes a downturn.

"The depression was Hollywood's Golden Era because movies were the cheapest form of entertainment. It seemed that when we had the recession around 1970 our business improved," Houck says.

Houck feels inflation also causes higher operating costs which are not offset by the increased attendance.

"It costs more to rent pictures. It's getting absurd with the major distrubutors. They want money so far in advance; they're asking for money three months, six months in advance on guarantees and bidding," Houck says. "There was a drought and everything happened to the popcorn. Popcorn costs went up 100 per cent in just a few months, and it's the same with all our concessions. Chocolate prices are sky high.

"So the first thing you do is start cutting the size. They used to be 14 ounce drinks and we cut it to 11 ounces, which is in effect cutting the price but you still get a drink for the same price. Popcorn, you cut the boxes down."

Houck says coconut oil for his popcorn machines increased in price from $22 to $47 for a 50-pound drum. But he draws the line at cutting quality along with quantity.

"We could go to a cheaper corn. We could stop using this coconut oil, which is the finest oil made. But we have people tell us they come to our pictures for our popcorn."

Doomed-Man Case: No Ottawa Action

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen said Tuesday he has not intervened in the case of a Canadian citizen under sentence of death in the U.S.S.R. because the case is still before the courts.

MacEachen told Claude Wagner in the Commons that the Soviet lawyer representing David Geldiaschvilli of Montreal wants to appeal the conviction of committing war crimes.

The Canadian embassy in Moscow was closely following the case, he added.

Geldiaschvilli was convicted of participation in the murder of more than 3,000 Jews at Stavropol during the Second World War, plus other mass killings in the Crimea, the Ukraine, White Russia and Poland.

He came to Canada in 1949, became a Canadian citizen in 1971, and was arrested in July, 1973, while on a visit to the Soviet Union.

MacEachen said the case is complicated by the fact that, while Geldiaschvilli is a Canadian citizen, under Soviet law he is regarded as a Soviet citizen because he was born there.

Wagner, Progressive Conservative external affairs critic, said Canadian passports are too easily available to persons suspected of war crimes.

He said the Canadian government had been told by the Soviet Union that Geldiaschvilli was suspected of war crimes.

The U.S.S.R. is reported to have sought his extradition in 1963.

SANTA WON'T ANSWER HIS MAIL THIS YEAR

HELSINKI (UPI) — The Finnish Post Office told the world's children today Santa Claus won't answer their mail to him this year.

For the past 10 years, whenever children wrote to Santa Claus at the "North Pole," "Joyland," "Toyland," "Reindeer Street," or any of his other numerous addresses, thousands of such letters found their way to Helsinki.

There Liisa Jantunen and her staff at the main post office answered each letter in the child's own language.

But this year the post office said it had a manpower shortage and could not give Mrs. Jantunen any helpers. She alone could not handle the thousands of letters expected.

Santa's mail already has begun arriving for this year.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

During the 1974 Summer National Championships, a player was contemplating a bid. The more he thought, the further he tilted back in his chair. Finally he crashed to the floor in a most undignified position. But did he try to regain his feet? Did he try to get out of that ungainly pose? No, indeed, his first move was to scoop us his 13 cards which had fallen face up on the floor, before his opponents could get to see them. And so it is demonstrated that self-preservation (winning, instead of losing) is the first law of nature.

The classic example of the self-destructiveness that can result when one shows an opponent his cards can be observed in today's deal. Sitting South was the late Charles Lockridge, one of the great players of the 1930s and 1940s.

Neither side vulnerable. East deals.

SOUTH

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	Pass	(!)1 ♠	Pass
3 ♦	Pass	(!)3 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	6 ♦	Dbl.	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♠.

The bidding by South and East has an aura of irrationality about it, and I will not attempt to analyze it. But, in fact, it did develop exactly as presented above.

After West had opened the jack of clubs, upon which East played the discouraging deuce, as Lockridge expressed it, "I was so impressed with my brilliant bid that I forgot to cover the jack with dummy's queen." West now went into a long huddle deciding what he should lead to trick two.

As Lockridge told the story, after about a minute had gone by, he didn't see any point in wasting everybody's time, so he exposed his cards and claimed the balance of the tricks. West, Sam Fry, Jr., of New York, had long possessed the attribute so essential to being a winning bridge player: he could count to 13. So it didn't take him long to recogize that East was void of hearts.

At trick two, West led a heart, which East ruffed for the setting trick. As to what West would have led if Lockridge had not exposed his hand will, of course, never be known. And if dummy's queen of clubs had been played on the opening lead, I would have had no story to tell.

Big Bank Haul Still a Poser

RENO (AP) — Bank officials are continuing an audit in efforts to learn precisely how much money was stolen in what the FBI calls the largest bank robbery in United States history.

Meanwhile, nine more agents have arrived to help the force of investigators looking for more than $1 million in cash and three unidentified masked robbers who entered the downtown branch of the First National Bank of Nevada on Friday evening.

The men made off with an estimated $1,044,000 from the bank, which was stocked with cash to service nearby casinos.

Unhappy Gilles Decides to Retire

NEW YORK (AP) — Goaltender Gilles Villemure, unable to persuade New York Rangers to renegotiate his National Hockey League contract is retiring, his lawyer said Tuesday. Bill Sinreich said Villemure, New York's backup to Ed Giacomin, will devote himself full-time to training and driving harness horses.

"The Cat (Emile Francis, the Rangers' general manager and coach) won't budge and the guy has to eat," Sinnreich said.

Villemure, who has played very little in the Rangers' pre-season games and twice in the past five days has walked out on the team just prior to exhibitions, contends Francis made a verbal agreement to re-open the four-year contract when it was signed two years ago.

Francis denies such an agreement.

BERGMAN RETURNS TO WINGS

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Minnesota North Stars of the National Hockey League Tuesday have traded defenceman Gary Bergman to Detroit Red Wings for future considerations.

Bergman, 34, came to Minnesota from Detroit last November in a trade for Ted Harris. A nine-year NHL veteran, he had three goals and 29 assists for the North Stars last year.

SUPER-PRIZE TO KAMLOOPS

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Julia Nelson has won $460,000 and her 72-year-old husband Bernard probably has trimmed his last putting green.

Julie, 66, winner of the Irish hospitals sweepstakes superprize draw, said in a telephone interview today her husband will be able to retire as assistant superintendent at a local golf club.

And the retired cook said she probably will buy a larger home.

The Nelsons have a son in Victoria, Kenneth, president of Nelson's Music Ltd.

Winning after buying sweepstakes tickets for 45 years was "such a shock I really don't know what to do with the money."

"I always felt someone had to win and that it might be me but I never thought I'd win."

Mrs. Nelson, who used the nom-de-plume Daisy May, was celebrating at 3 a.m.

The ticket, number JCE 89157, was first out of the drum at the draw on the Cambridgeshire Saturday at Newmarket.

The first ticket is the only one not tied to the horses in the race in which the sweep is based.

In the past the big prize has gone nine times to Canada, three times to the United States, twice to England and once to an Irish ticket-holder.

Over-Runs Everywhere —Barrett

Premier Barrett said today there will be over-expenditures in every government department this year but he is not aware of any unusual over-run in agriculture.

"Naturally there are over-expenditrures as there have been every year through warrants in all departments," said Barrett. "But there is nothing extraordinary in any department to my knowledge."

Langley Social Credit MLA Bob McClelland predicted Tuesday the agriculture department would over-spend its budget by $40 million this year.

"There was only $12 million allotted for the income supplement program in the agriculture department and that already has been over-spent by over $20 million," McClelland told a Vancouver South Social Credit Association meeting.

The charge comes in the wake of a disclosure the human resources department will over-run its $284 million budget by $103 million.

"There are a lot of stories flying back and forth," said Barrett. ". . . Some reporters are spreading them because it is their duty and others are picking it up from the wire and everything."

The premier said he did not plan to respond to these stories by opening the government's books for an interim financial statement on each department's budget to date.

"Public accounts will be available in the spring. There's no need to respond to stories that are going about."

Special warrants — cabinet orders which allow departments to spend money not already approved within the budget — have been used by every government, said Barrett, and there is nothing unusual about the NDP government use of them.

McClelland charged the NDP is on "the wildest spending spree the province has ever seen."

"Barrett's a disaster as finance minister and when the other bills come in for his pie-in-the-sky programs we're going to find ourselves in deep trouble," he said.

OIL PUTTING WORLD ON SKIDS

Turner Fears Recession

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada said today there may be a recession if steps are not taken soon to resolve the problem of oil debts by consuming countries.

His comments at a news conference after a speech to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) were more sombre than recent statements about economic prospects.

In his speech to the 126-member world organization, Turner advocated giving the IMF political power to discipline its members.

He told reporters that there is an awareness among other delegations that the balance-of-payments problems of oil-importing countries can be solved only by co-operation.

Earlier the finance ministers of Britain, France and West Germany voiced fears of an enormous crisis paralleling the 1930s. And they urged the U.S. to abandon its fight for lower oil prices as fruitless, and join instead in finding some means of financing the higher costs.

Estimates of the combined oil debt for this year of countries which must import oil run as high as $80 billion.

Turner said this problem "if not resolved properly within six months to a year, could provoke a recession."

He endorsed establishment of a fund which the IMF would operate to lend money to both rich and poor countries with oil debts. There have been several proposals to expand an existing fund set up by the IMF to provide loans at concessionary rates to under-developed countries. The expanded fund, under these proposals, would lend at commercial rates to the rich countries as well.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon told a press conference, meanwhile, that although there is no immediate need to act, "careful study" of so-called recycling schemes would be appropriate.

"Recycling" is a euphemism for persuading the oil-producing countries to lend out their surplus funds.

European officials claimed privately that Simon's statement is a beginning of a new U.S. approach that will "recognize the facts of life" — the main one being that the oil cartel countries will not lower oil prices.

Of major figures at today's meetings, Simon was by far the most optimistic on world economic prospects. "I do not believe the world is in intimate danger of a drift into cumulative recession — although we must be alert and ready to act quickly should the situation change unexpectedly," he said.

The most dismal appraisal of all came from the Italians, the industrial country most heavily impacted by the fourfold increase in the price of oil.

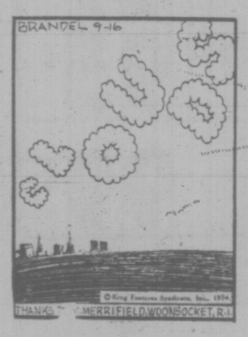
"Without collective action by all the governments concerned," warned Italian Minister of the Treasury Emilio Colombo, "there is a danger of a drift into beggar-my-neighbor policies of the sort that led to the trade wars of the 1930s."

Colombo said flatly that without an oil price reduction, the international financial system would suffer a breakdown. He noted that for the first time in a generation, governments may not be able to satisfy people's expectations for a continuing improvement in living standards, with the risk of serious effects on the social and economic stability of many countries.

WHILE SUMMER has a slightly-soggy last fling in Victoria, the icy fingers of winter are already closing tightly on the rest of Canada. Schoolchildren in Sudbury this morning (above) bundled up in the wake of a four-inch plus snowfall and on the Prairies the mercury dipped to record low temperatures last night in many communities including North Battleford, Swift Current and La Ronge.

Joint Team For Civic Bargaining?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff



Victoria area municipalities and school boards expect to form a single negotiating team Thursday to bargain with all their employees except school teachers, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

He said Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have already given approval in principle to the plan and the Thursday meeting will set up some mechanism to bring it about.

The single negotiating team would bargain contracts for all police, firemen, office staff and outside workers is the four municipalities.

Custodians and office staff of University of Victoria and schools in Greater Victoria, Sooke and Saanich would also be included. Teachers would continue to negotiate separately with school boards.

The only area reported to be cool on the proposal is the municipality of Saanich.

Mayor Ed Lum said Saanich has expressed an interest in the plan but it has not yet been approved by the full council.

He said he personally favors some sort of joint approach this year but on a modified basis to cover wages only and not fringe benefits.

Lum said he hoped a joint bargaining process would not disrupt what he called "our good negotiating relationship" with Saanich employees.

Saanich had the least to gain by joint bargaining but was in a mood to co-operate, he said.

Mayor Pollen agreed the

Border Probe Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada has asked U.S. officials to report on an incident last Sunday in which a Canadian was allegedly taken from the Canadian side of the border by the U.S. border patrol and made to pay a fine in the United States.

"God damn it, we are not going to be treated like a banana republic. It is embarrassing and totally unnecessary," Saskatchewan MP Les Benjamin said after he raised the matter in the Commons.

Benjamin said the incident occured as Ed Gross, a farmer from Glen Bain, Sask., and his passenger, Ira Heebner, landed in their private aircraft on a grass strip airport about 10 miles south of Estevan, Sask.

"A U.S. border patrol officer, in his cruiser, crossed the border to Canada, turned down a lane and came 100 to 150 feet into Canada and then the border patrol officer yelled 'who gave you permission to land on this strip'?" Benjamin told the Commons.

Benjamin said Gross was escorted to the U.S. customs depot and, threatened with confiscation of his aircraft, had to leave a $25 deposit on an alleged $1,000 fine.

TALKING BOMBS URGE CONVICT UPRISING

ROME (Reuter) — Sophisticated "talking bombs," which urged prisoners to rebel against their guards, exploded outside jails in Rome, Milan and Naples during the night, police said.

The devices, which caused no injuries, were wired to tape recorders and loudspeakers, they said.

Before one blast, loudspeakers urged prisoners to "rebel and seek freedom."

"A bomb will explode shortly," the voice said. The explosion then shattered a few windows in the jail.

Venezuelan Oil Tax Hike Nets $440M

CARACAS (AP) — The Venezuelan government is raising the tax it collects on exported oil, and a spokesman says the increase will add $440 million to its oil earnings this year.

Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentin Hernandez announced Tuesday that the tax on oil produced in Venezuela, mostly by American companies, is being increased 4.7 per cent, or 41 cents a barrel — from $8.65 to $9.06 — retroactive to last Jan. 1. Monday, it was announced the tax would rise about 3.5 per cent.

The companies include Shell, Gulf, Mobil, Texaco, Sun Oil and Exxon's Creole Petroleum.

Earlier Tuesday, Kuwait took a series of moves that will mean a net increase of 75 cents a barrel in the average cost of oil produced in the Persian Gulf sheikdom in the last quarter of this year by Gulf and British Petroleum, a Gulf spokesman announced in New York.

NEWS BRIEFS

First-Day Recall

DETROIT (AP) — One day after 1975 models officially went on sale, Chrysler Corp. said today its dealers are being notified of a potential accelerator-pedal problem with some of 55,862 early-production cars because of a bulge in the carpet or rubber mat. The cars affected are Plymouth Valiants and Dodge Darts.

Athens Protests

ATHENS (CP) — Greek students led by extremist Communist elements surged through Athens Tuesday night protesting the fate of Cyprus and denouncing United States policies for that embattled island republic in definance of a government ban.

More Work Stoppages

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost due to work stoppages in July continued the record pace being set this year with an estimated 1,092,570 man-days lost, the federal labor department said Tuesday. The total brings the amount of time lost so far this year to 6.3 million man-days.

Immigrant Clamps

CANBERRA (Reuter) — the Australian government announced today it has temporarily suspended its immigration program to ease the country's unemployment problem.

Siege Continues

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The siege of the Venezuelan consulate enters its sixth day with no sign of freedom for United States diplomat Barbara Hutchison and six other hostages and no indication that the Dominican government will meet the terrorists' demands.

A BUSY DAY ONE FOR RENTALSMAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rentalsman Barrie Clark had a busy first day in office Tuesday.

Clark said his office received 600 telephone calls and between 50 to 100 visitors. The 20 telephone lines were jammed and another 10 lines were ordered.

The calls were handled by 14 officers, two deputy rentalsmen and Clark who has wide power over landlord-tenant matters under the new Landlord and Tenant Act, which also became law Tuesday.

Most of the calls were seeking information, but at least 100 were handled "in a mediation sense," he said.

No orders were issued in the first day of operation, but a number of the cases were not entirely resolved.

"I would anticipate that some further investigations are going to be required," he added.

"There were no crisis situations where we put to use any of the strong powers. None would be used on a first call."

He didn't think the hectic pace would last long, he said.

Times News Services

An unpublished report written for a federal government advisory body states Canadian agricultural policy is a mismananaged "hodge-podge" of programs that costs the public more than $1 billion a year, according to the Toronto Daily Star.

In a copyright Ottawa story, the newspaper quotes the report as saying that consumers pay half that amount through artificially high food prices shoved up by farm marketing boards and the remainder through taxes that go to aid farmers.

The 114-page report was written by J. D. Forbes, professor of marketing at the University of British Columbia, for the Canadian Consumer Council, the paper says.

It adds that the report was submitted last May but the government has delayed publication. The report was "leaked" to the paper, it says.

A committee of the House of Commons will hold an inquiry into egg marketing in Canada, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

He made the announcement minutes after Liberal MPs rejected a Conservative motion to refer the egg controversy to the standing committee on health and welfare. (See also Page 14.)

Outside the Commons, Agriculture Minister Gene Whelan, who had stated earlier that he would recommend "some form" of public inquiry into egg marketing, indicated he would prefer an independent commissioner, under the Public Inquiries Act, to conduct the inquiry.

"I am not scared of an investigation," he assured the Commons.

Conservationists Slam Dam Plan

DUNCAN — The B.C. Wildlife Federation is "appalled" at the way the Chemainus Dam project has been handled by the provincial government, federation president Ed Mankelow said here Tuesday.

A four-member action group of the federation told a meeting of 120 citizens and conservationists that the provincial cabinet committee hearing did not include any ratepayer, conservation, federal fisheries or regional district representative.

The action group's position paper said the North Cowichan municipal presentation to the cabinet was "replete with misinformation most of it in their favor.

Mankelow, and the 40,000-member federation wants, the whole issue turned over to the Environment and Land Use Committee Secretariat for a thorough analysis.

Some provincial cabinet members may be ashamed of the decision to allow the dam on the Chemainus, Mankelow said.

"I have been told this wasn't a very popular decision in the cabinet," Mankelow said.

The meeting was called by Mankelow and three other members of an "action group."

The initial stage of the dam project, which would be built near the confluence of Solly creek, would flood an area of 45 acres and provide water for some 12,000 people at a cost of $2.7 million.

"I feel personally this was a political decision rather than a decision on merit," said Art Morton, another member of the action group which includes his brother, Ralph, and Walter Latter, past president of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club.

When asked what the ordinary citizen can do about the situation, Mankelow replied:

"I'm a great believer in letters" and added that the present provincial government has demonstrated they can be swayed by public opinion.

Return Tickets, Amnesty Sought by Indian Caravan

Times News Services

TORONTO — Indian protesters from across Canada, rebuffed in their attempts Monday to storm Parliament Hill, want the federal and provincial governments to share the costs of their trip back home. (What's behind the Indian militancy? See Page 50)

And representatives of Ontario Indians involved in the protest asked the provincial government Tuesday to protect them from any prosecution that might result from the Ottawa melee in which soldiers and police drove them from the House of Commons grounds.

Those were among requests made by the Ontario group as it met provincial Solicitor-General George Kerr asking for an independent investigation of the "unnecessary violence" by police.

Kerr would not say whether the group would be protected from prosecution.

He said in an interview later he would ask federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand for a full report on the Ottawa demonstration.

"I want it confirmed one way or another," he said.

On the other requests, he said the province does not want to give Ottawa the impression it was interferring in its jurisdiction and that he would seek an assessment from the provincial cabinet today.

The Indians reasoned that the governments should share the costs of telephone, food, accommodation and transportation back to their homes — that would mean Vancouver for more than 100 — of the 500 members of the caravan.

"The human rights of the Native People's Caravan participants were abrogated," said Peter Kelly, elected representative of the Chiefs of Treaty 3 area in Northwestern Ontario.

The expenses now are the responsibility of government because the Indians were simply exercising their rights to "air their views and discontent with the government," he said.

A precedent had been set, he said, when the province paid Indian telephone bills during their occupation of a park in Kenora, Ont., this summer.

Kelly said most of the caravan participants are unemployed and need financial help to get back home.

Militant young Indians, meanwhile, planned future action Tuesday in a warm, well-stocked Ottawa building while government leaders criticized them for their part in Monday's violent clash on Parliament Hill.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said the 200 Indian men, women and chil-

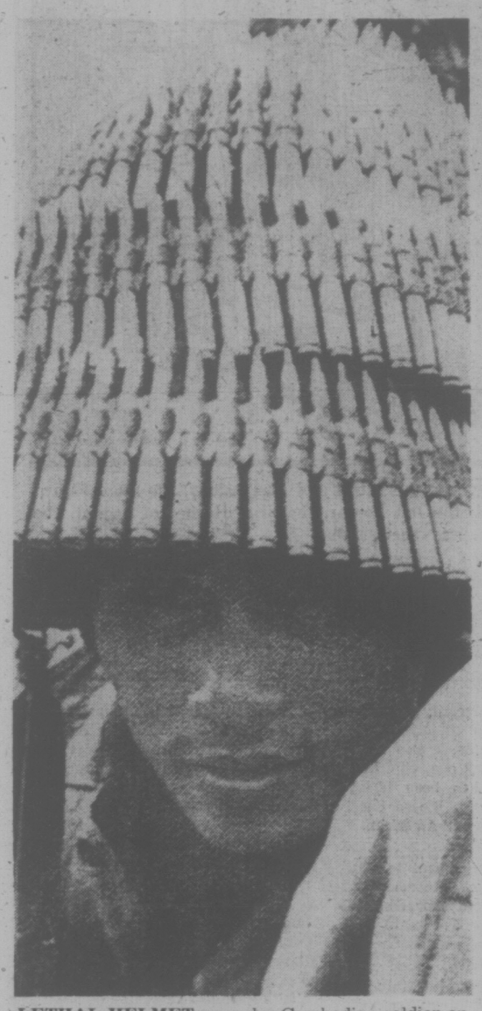
Cocke Shuffles Health Services



LETHAL HELMET worn by Cambodian soldier on the outskirts of Phnom Penh has layers of bullets strapped around it.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Reorganization of the provincial health department's structure was announced Tuesday by Health Minister Dennis Cocke.

The four former departments in the ministry — mental health, public health, B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and medical care administration — now are contained in one of two divisions of a single department.

The new divisions will separate medical and hospital services and community health programs.

Purpose of the shuffle "is that we felt that when the department had four separate structures, health care was delivered in an unco-ordinated way," he said.

He expects the new system will be in smooth operation in about a year but "there's got to be a spirit of co-operation (in the civil service) as well," he added.

Deputy ministers from the existing system will be retained in new roles.

When legislation is changed to allow a deputy health minister to be other than a medical doctor, Jim Mainguy will become senior deputy.

Mainguy, formerly assistant deputy in the BCHIS department, now is a consultant to the minister.

Cocke said the medical and hospital programs branch will be responsible for such services as medical care, hospital insurance, administration of government institutions like Riverview Mental Hospital, emergency health (ambulance) services and the new diagnostic and forensic psychiatry services.

The community health program division will cover community public health including tuberculosis and venereal disease control, community mental health and environmental services regarding health.

The minister also said private medical laboratories will be subjected to greater government control through the health department reorganization which will provide a mechanism to take "a closer scrutiny" of the operation of labs.

Laboratory services are a considerable expense item in health care "and it's up to the government, because it pays all the bills, to have a pretty difinitive voice," he said.

Cocke also announced formation of an 11-member Health Advisory Council to advise him on long-range development of health services.

The council will include consumer representatives, and members of the B.C. Medical Association.

Impasse on Grain

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Tuesday his government does not want to introduce legislation to end the western grain handlers dispute until all their chances of a settlement have been exhausted.

It was his understanding that negotiations were still going on and that all possibilities of a settlement were still being explored, he said.

Government House leader — Mitchell Sharp said however, the government might interrupt the eight day Throne Speech debate to bring in legislation to end the strike.

Sharp said it was not the government's intention to interrupt the debate, "but I would have to qualify that by saying that if the government does decide to bring in legislation to deal with the western grain handlers' strike, probably the debate would be interrupted for that purpose."

Labor Minister John Munro said several of the companies involved in the dispute have rejected his proposal for settlement on the remaining two outstanding issues.

Munro said he would have to wait to hear from all of the companies before deciding on the next step.

If the proposal is rejected, he said, the government might consider introducing legislation.

Just One Little Word . . .

A single word could have caused a disruption of the municipal election in Victoria, city council learned Tuesday.

The one word — deputy — was substituted for the word "acting" for deputy or acting mayor, Ald. Alf Hood. The change was made Sept. 12.

He signed the voters list as "deputy" mayor instead of his formal title of "acting" mayor.

And that, Hood told council at its caucus meeting, "could conceivably disrupt the whole vote if there was a challenge."

It was Ald. Mike Young, a lawyer, who first spotted the problem. Any document signed in the name of deputy mayor would be illegal, he said.

No reason was given Sept. 12 for the resolution changing acting mayor to deputy mayor but it was believed that Mayor Peter Pollen wanted someone else to be able to fill in as mayor while he was in town but busy.

Solicitor Jacob de Villeirs said the Municipal Act provides for an acting mayor to fill in for the mayor, but not a deputy mayor.

Council's Sept. 12 resolution was therefore not valid and should be ignored, he said.

But just to make sure council agreed informally that it will rescind its Sept. 12 deputy mayor resolution.

CoL Bonus Rejected

City council decided Tuesday it won't grant a special 14 cents an hour cost-of-living raise to outside workers.

Earlier, council turned down a request by both the inside and outside workers for a $100 a month cost-of-living raise.

Council, at its regular caucus meeting, was told that the 14 cents an hour request would cost $25,000 a month.

City Manager Jim Bramley told council two negotiating meetings have already been held with the outside workers to renew the current contract but they wanted an answer on the cost-of-living, which they wanted dated to July 1.

He said the union hasn't "really substantiated this request" but there had been interim cost-of-living increases in Port Alberni, some mid-island municipalities and Sooke school board.

Ald. Malcolm Anderson said council had already decided that city staff salaries have kept pace with the cost of living and "it's one of those years that are very tough for anyone."

Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) business agent Tom Smith said today the 300 outside workers were feeling the effects of the "economic climate right now. They felt there should be some adjustment now rather than wait for the contract in 1975."

council wold only make the

Smith said the attitude of council would only make the unions more determined to achieve a 1975 settlement that would "catch them up."

GOODMAN TRIES AGAIN

Goodman who ran unsuccessfully last year, says the armed forces, is again seeking an aldermanic seat in Saanich.

Goodhman who ran unsuccessfully last year, says the main plank in his platform is to end spot zoning and resist the expansion of medium and high density housing into single family neighborhoods.

Elected officials should reflect the views and wishes of the electorate and this, he believes, is not being done by the present aldermen.

On apartments and townhouses he said any new construction must achieve high standards of design and construction with good landscaping.

With this, he supports proposals for a Saanich design panel.

Goodman has been active in the community: on the Saanich advisory planning commission, on the executive of the Gordon Head and District Ratepayers' Association and on the board of management of Victoria General Hospital.

DAIRIES WIN 4-DAY WEEK

A four-day work week will be in effect for 225 workers employed by three Victoria dairies by Dec. 1 under a new contract with the Teamsters Union.

It is part of a new one-year contract which also includes wage increases averaging $36 a week, a fully-paid dental plan and reduction in weekly working hours to 36 from 40 for production workers and to 40 hours from 42½ hours for driver-salesmen.

The dairies involved are Silverwood, Palm and Island Farms.

Wilson said the companies have two months in which to introduce the four-day work week so problems can be ironed out. With proper planning, he said, milk deliveries could still be made five days a week.

Pr. Albert Gun Drama

BORDEN, Sask. (CP) — An RCMP search for two men and two women involved in the shooting of a Prince Albert police officer and the abducting of another officer ended Tuesday night after a brief gunbattle near a Borden grain elevator.

Police said the four, two of whom were escaped prisoners from the Washington State penitentiary at Walla Walla, surrendered to RCMP officers and the hostage was released unharmed. Two children were also found with the fugitives.

The drama began when a Prince Albert policeman, Const. James Kidney, made a routine check of a car bearing Washington licence plates at a downtown service station.

While one of the car's five adult occupants was inside the station, someone inside the car apparently shot and wounded const. Kidney in the arm and hand, severing his finger.

Detective Albert Logue arrived on the scene and was taken hostage at gunpoint.

The man who was in the service station wasn't able to make it back to the car before it left, and was apprehended.

The car was chased along Highways 11 and 5 and, at one point, nearly slammed into a stalled semi-trailer truck near the Borden bridge about 25 miles northwest of Saskatoon.

It then veered down a side road into the Borden campground where the four fled on foot.

Police from throughout central Saskatchewan converged on the area as dogs and helicopters were sent in. One helicopter was hit by a bullet from a magnum-force rifle carried by one of the four, but after a brief descent it went back into the search.

The four were finally cornered by dogs, and after a brief gun battle surrendered to police and released their hostage unharmed.

Police have not released the identification of the four, but the children were reported to be seven and 12 years old.

Border Customs Change

OTTAWA (CP) — The United States government is withdrawing immigration officers from 22 stations on the Canada-U.S. border but the stations will remain open and manned by customs officers, the U.S. embassy said Tuesday.

An official at the embassy said the immigration officers are being transferred from small border posts in the northwest U.S. normally open for 16 hours a day. The posts will be manned by customs officers either for the full 16-hour period or on a reduced eight-hour basis, he said.

A Canada immigration department official said the move will not have any effect on the operation of Canadian border stations.

$2M Bilk On Wall St.

NEW YORK (UPI) — State Attorney-General Louis Lefkowitz today announced indictment of 17 executives and employees of a bankrupt Wall Street commodities option firm on charges of bilking customers of more than $2 million. He linked the firm to organized crime.

Lefkowitz said in a statement the firm, Collins & Day Group, Inc., operated "in the nature of a 'ponzi' scheme in that the monies provided by later investors were used to make whatever payments were made to the preceding investors for monies due based on transactions."

He added, "this is a typical example of how organized crime takes over a company and milks it to its advantage."

The firm began business in November 1972 on a nationwide basis with an initial capital of $1,000 and went bankrupt in August 1973, he said.

The main commodity dealt with by the firm was silver bullion, Lefkowitz said.

Housing Situation Worsening

OTTAWA (CP) — Benefiting from the bulge in housing starts late last year, homebuyers had more houses to choose from in August than they did a year earlier.

But the sharp drop in housing construction in recent months indicates a growing shortage.

A Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. survey reveals housing completions in the first eight months of the year were 127,827, about three per cent higher than the corresponding figure last year. This includes a 5.4-per-cent jump in new single-family homes and a 3.1-per-cent increase for rental units.

With this healthy completion record, the number of unoccupied houses and duplexes was 3,017 at the end of August, up 17. 4 per cent from the same time last year, CMHC said.

But urban housing starts in August were 14,857, about 24-per-cent down rom the same month last year. For the first eight months, urban starts were 121,968, nine-per-cent down from the corresponding period in 1973.

Dictaphone Files Suit

RYE, N.Y. (CP) — Dictaphone Corp. has filed suit in United States federal court to enjoin a tender offer by Northern Electric Co. Ltd. of Montreal to gain control of Dictaphone, charging the Canadian firm with fraud in its purchases of Dictaphone stock.

The suit also charged Northern Electric with making serious errors in its tender offer made Sept. 24, and subsequently filed with the securities and exchange commission.

Last week, Dictaphone's board of directors labelled the Montreal company's $12-per-share offer "inadequate" and unanimously urged shareholders to reject it.

Dictaphone, which has major manufacturing facilities in Bridgeport, Conn., and Mountain View, Calif., is a manufacturer of dictating machines and automatic telephone answering systems and other products.

Northern Electric is the equipment maker in Canada and is 90 per cent owned by Bell Telephone of Canada.

CHICAGO (AP) — Record cold again penetrated sections of the Middle West, causing a sharp demand for farm commodity futures on the Board of Trade Wednesday.

Following a day of profit-taking, soybeans again closed with a limit advance of 30 cents a bushel. Soybean oil advanced the limit of 100 points and soybean meal, up the limit of $10 a ton early, closed with a gain of about $8. Wheat futures advanced the limit of 20 cents a bushel, and corn rose nearly nine cents. One option of oats closed the six-cent limit higher.

Demand was very heavy in the soybean complex on the opening, then eased. Trade was active and mixed in the complex until the final bell.

There was some weakness in 1975 corn contracts for a time, but it dissipated in a fast flurry of buying activity near the close. Cold weather also was a concern of corn and oats futures buyers.

Wheat futures ranged from four to 15 cents a bushel through most of the session, then pushed to the limit as shorts tried to liquidate positions.

At the close, soybeans were 25 to 30 cents a bushel higher, Nov. 9.06; Chicago wheat 16 to 20 higher, Dec. 4.97; Gulf hard red wheat not traded; corn 1¾ to 8¾ higher, Dec. 3.84½ and oats 2½ to 6 higher, Dec. 1.93.

Gulf Hikes Wholesale Gas Price

NEW YORK (AP) — Gulf Oil Co. reports that effective immediately the wholesale price of all grades of its gasoline sold in the United States has been increased 1.5 cents a gallon and No. 2 distillate fuel oil by 1.6 cents a gallon.

The price increases are expected to be passed along by retailers where possible. Gulf did not disclose its wholesale price, which differs in various areas of the country.

The company said the increases reflect higher imported crude oil and refined product costs and are in line with federal pricing guidelines.

town talk

Langford Fire Chief Al LeQuesne got his chief's hat back this month — seven years after he lost it during a rescue mission on Mount Finlayson.

Shortly after LeQuesne became chief in 1967, he and an RCMP member were climbing across a rugged part of the mountain. The chief slipped and dropped both rope and hat to an almost inaccessible part of the slope.

As firefighters fought the Mount Finlayson blaze earlier this month, Rob White found it and returned it to the chief.

"Just the band and the peak and the badge are left," said LeQuesne who is "really happy" to have it back.

"The hat had no special significance, but the badge had been passed from chief to chief since the department was formed in 1947," he said.

Both the badge and the worse-for-wear hat will remain in the fire hall as a reminder of rescue missions on the mountain.

With those sort of sentiments, is it any wonder the corporation is having financial woes?

When does a black crow become a noise polluter?

Nobody knows.

In an effort to settle a hassle between themselves and Cordova Bay residents who have complained to Saanich council about the noise pollution cause by their trucks, Trio Ready-Mix (1971) Ltd. had the provincial government's motor-vehicle testing laboratory carry out a noise level test along the road.

The decibel readings were between 78 and 83 for dump trucks and mixers, between 72 and 80 for cars and a black crow was registered at 54.

Is the crow reading acceptable?

"The government of Canada has established that acceptable levels for pickups and cars are up to 85 and trucks at 88," a company official told council, "they do not indicate an acceptable level for black crows."

And speaking of crows, only in Oak Bay could one hear them get orally stoned in such an impeccable manner.

When Oak Bay council held its first "town hall" meeting this week, a public forum where citizens could deliver beefs or bouquets, one of numerous topics touched on was crows.

Drummond L. Armstrong of 2133 Windsor Rd. rose to castigate the flocks of crows which plague him but he did so in such vivid and precise language it was a treat to hear.

The crows dislike the sour plums they sample on his property so they "hurl" them onto the sidewalk where he must clean them up so pedestrians won't slip and injure themselves, he said.

Besides, the birds' raucous calls wake him early in the morning.

"I'm a lover of birds but I no longer love crows," he said in one of those masterpieces of British understatement.

When a sympathetic Ald. Douglas Watts suggested he too knew the miseries of crows about the home, Armstrong replied:

"Well I can assure you, sir, the majority live at 2133 Windsor."

JEANNIE

Fashion merchandising it is for Jeannie Hopkins who is now in Boston attending the Chamberlain School of retailing.

It's a two-year course and Jeannie will be looking to a career in fashion merchandising. She's the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Hopkins, 2800 Beach Drive.

It was opening night for the Camosun College night school students at Reynolds Secondary.

Chalked in huge letters on the blackboard behind instructor Jim Gilbert was the name of the course: SALT WATER FISHING.

Gilbert said he wanted to make a brief announcemnt before getting down to the business of telling his eager students how they could snag the big ones. His announcement was that this was the course in salt water fishing.

Spotting a few raised eyebrows on the faces of the students, Gilbert said he realized it might well sound as if he was overdoing it. Then he explained:

"A couple of years ago I was giving this course and I guess I was a full half hour into it when someone in the class said: "Is this the course on small car maintenance?"

"Now I don't take any chances," said Gilbert. "I always spell it out."

It's easy for words to slip — into the wrong places.

Take the last regional board meeting, for example.

A school trustee addressing the meeting said she could see "some light at the end of the table" (tunnel).

And a board director, in a discussion about sewage, spoke of "being caught between two stools" (schools).

Light moments are few and far between in the lengthy Supreme Court trial of the Society of the Love of Jesus. When one develops the sparse public gallery takes full advantage, as it did last week.

Father Andrew Keber, history teacher and Latin scholar at Westminster Abbey, Mission City, holds the distinction of being named by the Vatican, with attendant powers, as Apostolic Visitor to the society. Once is rare, but it happened to Keber twice.

He was describing the appointment for his second visitation in March 1965, in connection with difficulties at St. Mary's Priory culminating with the suit by Mother Cecilia Mary Dodd and four followers.

Testimony had been involved as the day neared its close. Lawyers, officials and gallery alike were weary as defence counsel Cecil Branson asked Keber to confirm his awesome role:

"Did you come?"

"I came."

"You saw?"

"I saw."

There was a pregnant moment before Branson added:

"I won't ask the next one." But it was enough. The court dissolved with welcome relief, a perfect cue for Mr. Justice H. C. McKay to call the day's adjournment.

'Ghetto' Feared in North Tillicum

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

North Tillicum residents feel three planned low-cost housing projects wil lturn their neighborhood into a ghetto and are upset that they will have to pay for roads leading to the projects.

Their anger began to mount almost a month ago when residents were notified by Saanich they are expected to pay the major share of $118,710 for road paving in their area under a local improvement plan.

At a rate o 80 cents a foot for frontage each year for the next 10 years this was bad enough, particularly for retired people on fixed incomes and single-parent families.

The anger increased a week ago when the residents learned the provincial government-owned Dunhill Development Corporation intends to build a low-cost 305 housing unit next to them.

As Terry Nex of 3882 Loretta puts it:

"When that development goes in Whiteside, Loretta and Raymond will be the streets most affected but other streets in our area will be affected to a greater degree than most of them (the residents) realize."

Nex and others have mounted a campaign to defeat the local improvement plan.

At a strategy meeting Tuesday night they summed up the situation.

The petition will be lodged Friday. With still two days to go support has been overwhelming.

"Some of the streets are 100 per cent against it," Keith Dinsdale of 3881 Loretta reported. "We didn't create the housing problem but we are going to have to suffer from it."

He and others on the neighborhood committee reported disturbed residents have been phoning Helen Nex and J. C. Hilton asking how they can join the protest movement.

Nex and Bill Bouchard of 531 Whiteside said the possibility of being caught in a pincer movement that will see their neighborhood jammed in the middle of three multiple low-cost housing projects threatens to destroy the lifestyle of the quiet residential area and many of them would like to sell their houses and move out.

In addition to the Dunhill's Interurban-Marigold development, they explained, further north of them, less than half a mile away, 400 units are planned for the Roy Road development and to the south, is the Burnside Gardens site.

"We would like to sell our homes," Jean Bouchard said. "But who's going to buy property next to a ghetto?"

Nex said he had been told by a banker they could expect their properties to devalue as much as $10,000 once the Dunhill development went in.

Dunhill has agreed to pay the costs of roads within the 30.6-acre site but flatly refused to pay for upgrading of Whiteside and other access roads into the area.

Municipal planner Tom Loney has told council that Whiteside, at least, will have to be upgraded to handle the traffic load that the expected population of 1,100 on the site will greate.

Nex said a municipal official had told him the timing of the local improvement plan, which is for minor road paving work, excluding curbs and gutters that will be needed once the Dunhill project goes through, is bad.

"A lot of people think they are getting curbs and gutters," Jean Bouchard said. "But they're not. This means all the money spent on this project will be wasted and we'll have to start all over again."

The council has decided to hold a public hearing on the application by Dunhill in spite of criticism of the project by the municipality's Advisory Planning Commission.

"The APC has condemned the project because of its high density, "wall-to-wall parking" the traffic it will generate and the dull uniformity of the units' exteriors.

No Funds From B.C. For L.I.P.

The B.C. government will not "under any circumstances" consider supplemental funding for Local Initiatives Projects approved this year by Ottawa.

"There is no way we will pick up $8.5 million of short-term funding, initiated without serious consultation, without any consideration of overall priorités, and often developed without consideration of existing resources," Labor Minister Bill King and Human Resources Minster Norm Levi said in a joint statement Tuesday.

The ministers said they wished to make it known before the new LIP programs actually begin that B.C. "is not prepared to assume any financial obligations for projects once their federal funding expires in May of next year."

Last spring, Levi's department assumed continued funding of about 80 LIP programs that expired in May, at a cost of nearly $3 million.

Levi said the province picked up that tab in order to maintain essential services and save 600 jobs in municipalites.

But the projects are the responsibilty of the federal governfent, said Levi, and if LIP groups want more money when the funding runs out they will have to re-apply to the federal government.

King also criticized the federal employment program, saying that often "the pressing needs of communities are not met because community priorities are not considered in the centralized decision-making process that takes place in Ottawa."

CALLED to the bench in Victoria Tuesday, Douglas Campbell, 29, is believed to be the youngest judge in B.C. history. Campbell will preside in the family division of provincial court here. The Calgary native was called to the B.C. bar in 1971 and prictised law in Vancouver.

Man Nabbed For Trying New Rifle

A young man who had "an urge" to try out his new .22-calibre rifle was arrested by Colwood RCMP early this morning after he shot up a tree.

Police were called after residents near Glen Lake School heard the shooting at 3:15

An RCMP patrolman spotted the car about 15 minutes later coming out of a gravel pit near Parkdale Drive.

New Candidates Aim At City Hall Secrecy

A slate of candidates will be nominated next week by an ad hoc group of citizens to contest the Nov. 16 municipal election in Victoria and "end the secrecy at city hall."

Spokesman for the Association of Concerned Electors Joan Johnston said today it is not known how many candidates will be nominated by the group.

"If we feel we can support only two strong candidates we'll do that," if more, we'll support more."

She said council decisions seem to be mades "for vague reasons" and "aren't aired before the public at council meetings."

The group would like to spend money to inform electors on public hearings and "definitely advertise rezoning plans in language everyone can understand".

She made the comments following the first official meeting of the association Tuesday in Newcombe Auditorium.

About 40 supporters, "who want something different than control of the city by real estate developers," decided issues would include the improvement of public transit, closure of certain streets for the people and more emphasis on providing advantages to the cyclist.

The group decided to support the Capital Region Tenents' Association candidate Ann Tarasoff and set the nomination meeting for Tuesday at a time and place to be announced.

In a lengthy debate over issues, Wayne Harding told the meeting that amalgamation of Greater Victoria municipalities had been considered as an issue but was discarded because it would tie candidates to an overly-specific platform.

Also discussed were pollution, municipal action to provide low rent non-profit housing and long-term community zoning plans.

Unsuccessful former aldermanic candidate Joe Richards suggested association members should stop discussing policy and consider ways to get voters to the polls in "poorly" represented areas, such as James Bay, Victoria West, the city core, and Fernwood.

You'll Park Your Car And Get By Without It

Victorians will have to get used to leaving their cars behind, a public information meeting on Government street semi-mall was told today.

In the first of three daytime information meetings with a fourth scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in city council chambers, traffic engineer Dave Campbell said "we have to accept we will no longer be able to drive anywhere in downtown in our cars."

People, he said, will have to be encouraged to leave their cars in carparks.

He said there is a "deficiency" in a number of carparks city officials are looking at new sites. He said there will be a carpark with a capacity of 500 acrs built on Broughton Street and "there should be an announcement shortly."

Close to a quarter of a million vehicles enter and leave downtown each day, he said and this is going up by four or five per cent a year, but he is planning on traffic volumes only going up one per cent.

He said he is "confident" that transit services can "take up the slack."

A shuttle-bus service is being proposed for downtown "once you've parked your car."

The Government street semi-mall, described by Ald. Sam Bawlf as a "beautification" scheme and by Ald. Mike Young as a "sidewalk beautification program," would see five blocks between Humboldt and Yates converted to two lanes northbound only with trees and planters and benches placed on the widened sidewalk. Wharf Street would be "matched" with Government with southbound traffic only.

Left turns from Belleville to Government would be prohibited, Campbell indicated, with traffic proceding to Blanshard, which he expected to be re-opened in the Burdett Avenue area late this month or early this month. He also indicated several other downtown intersections will have prohibitions on left turns in rush-hours.

Thirty-five people showed up for the first of the public information meetings.

NEW ADDITION to downtown Victoria will look like this if approved at a public hearing Oct. 24. The $14 million Nordal Centre will cover the blocks bounded by Government, Courtney, Wharf, Broughton. Features include underground parking, two floors of shops and offices and condominium apartments. Demolition work has begun but work on the building must await city approval.

Oyster Supply Running Down

Oysters on the Gulf Islands "are taking a beating in more ways than one," and a growing scarcity of the bivalve should surprise no one, a B.C. Fish and Wildlife official said Tuesday.

Biologist Dave Smith listed four main reasons for the scarcity of oysters on many of the islands:

—More people every year are picking them.

—Pollution from subdivisions, marinas and industry have contaminated oyster beds.

—People pick more than legally allowed. (Under provincial regulations, a person may not pick more thas 24 oysters or a quart of shucked oysters. Clams are also limited to 24 per person.)

—Oyster breeding has been sporadic since 1958.

Fish and wildlife inspector Frank Gope said two persons were charged this year for picking oysters commercially without a permit.

"Many recreationalists were also warned by RCMP," he said. "These people didn't seem to be aware of the oyster quota."

Smith said clams have not been as hard hit as oysters, likely because people fear they might be contaminated by red tide and avoid them.

Rumble Strips Spaced

The new "rumble-strips" on the Pat Bay Highway that have been bumping and grinding motorists for the past few weeks, have also shaken up the department of highways.

The provincial department received so many calls from grumbling motorists, that a highways crew was put to work Tuesday "modifying" the strips.

The strips, low pavement ridges stretching for about 15 feet along the highway, were installed two weeks ago in the southbound lane of the highway, just north of Sayward Road intersection.

Their purpose, according to the highways department, was to slow cars down as they approached the dangerous Sayward intersection.

But according to the motorists who drove over them, the strips themselves were dangerous and many complained they threw their cars out of control.

The highways crew Tuesday chipped away some of the strips so now the bumps and grinds last only half as long.

SUPER-PRIZE TO KAMLOOPS

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Julia Nelson has won $460,000 and her 72-year-old husband Bernard probably has trimmed his last putting green.

Julie, 66, winner of the Irish hospitals sweepstakes superprize draw, said in a telephone interview today her husband will be able to retire as assistant superintendent at a local golf club.

And the retired cook said she probably will buy a larger home.

The Nelsons have a son in Victoria, Kenneth, president of Nelson's Music Ltd.

Winning after buying sweepstakes tickets for 45 years was "such a shock I really don't know what to do with the money."

"I always felt someone had to win and that it might be me but I never thought I'd win."

Mrs. Nelson, who used the nom-de-plume Daisy May, was celebrating at 3 a.m.

The ticket, number JCE 89157, was first out of the drum at the draw on the Cambridgeshire Saturday at Newmarket.

The first ticket is the only one not tied to the horses in the race in which the sweep is based.

In the past the big prize has gone nine times to Canada, three times to the United States, twice to England and once to an Irish ticket-holder.

Over-Runs Everywhere —Barrett

Premier Barrett said today there will be over-expenditures in every government department this year but he is not aware of any unusual over-run in agriculture.

"Naturally there are over-expenditrures as there have been every year through warrants in all departments," said Barrett. "But there is nothing extraordinary in any department to my knowledge."

Langley Social Credit MLA Bob McClelland predicted Tuesday the agriculture department would over-spend its budget by $40 million this year.

"There was only $12 million allotted for the income supplement program in the agriculture department and that already has been over-spent by over $20 million," McClelland told a Vancouver South Social Credit Association meeting.

The charge comes in the wake of a disclosure the human resources department will over-run its $284 million budget by $103 million.

"There are a lot of stories flying back and forth," said Barrett. "... Some reporters are spreading them because it is their duty and others are picking it up from the wire and everything."

The premier said he did not plan to respond to those stories by opening the government's books for an interim financial statement on each department's budget to date.

"Public accounts will be available in the spring. There's no need to respond to stories that are going about."

Special warrants — cabinet orders which allow departments to spend money not already approved within the budget — have been used by every government, said Barrett, and there is nothing unusual about the NDP government use of them.

McClelland charged the NDP is on "the wildest spending spree the province has ever seen."

"Barrett's a disaster as finance minister and when the other bills come in for his pie-in-the-sky programs we're going to find ourselves in deep trouble," he said.

OIL PUTTING WORLD ON SKIDS

Turner Fears Recession

Times News Services

WASHINGTON (CP) — Finance Minister John Turner of Canada said today there may be a recession if steps are not taken soon to resolve the problem of oil debts by consuming countries.

His comments at a news conference after a speech to the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) were more sombre than recent statements about economic prospects.

In his speech to the 126-member world organization, Turner advocated giving the IMF political power to discipline its members.

He told reporters that there is an awareness among other delegations that the balance-of-payments problems of oil-importing countries can be solved only by co-operation.

Earlier the finance ministers of Britain, France and West Germany voiced fears of an economic crisis paralleling the 1930s. And they urged the U.S. to abandon its fight for lower oil prices as fruitless, and join instead in finding some means of financing the higher costs.

Estimates of the combined oil debt for this year of countries which must import oil run as high as $80 billion.

Turner said this problem "if not resolved properly within six months to a year, could provoke a recession."

He endorsed establishment of a fund which the IMF would operate to lend money to both rich and poor countries with oil debts. There have been several proposals to expand an existing fund set up by the IMF to provide loans at concessionary rates to under-developed countries. The expanded fund, under these proposals, would lend at commercial rates to the rich countries as well.

U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon told a press conference, meanwhile, that although there is no immediate need to act, "careful study" of so-called recycling schemes would be appropriate.

"Recycling" is a euphemism for persuading the oil-producing countries to lend out their surplus funds.

European officials claimed privately that Simon's statement is a beginning of a new U.S. approach that will "recognize the facts of life" — the main one being that the oil cartel countries will not lower oil prices.

Of major figures at today's meetings, Simon was by far the most optimistic on world economic prospects. "I do not believe the world is in intimate danger of a drift into cumulative recession — although we must be alert and ready to act quickly should the situation change unexpectedly," he said.

The most dismal appraisal of all came from the Italians, the industrial country most heavily impacted by the four-fold increase in the price of oil.

"Without collective action by all the governments concerned," warned Italian Minister of the Treasury Emilio Colombo, "there is a danger of a drift into beggar-my-neighbor policies of the sort that led to the trade wars of the 1930s."

Colombo said flatly that without an oil price reduction, the international financial system would suffer a breakdown. He noted that for the first time in a generation, governments may not be able to satisfy people's expectations for a continuing improvement in living standards, with the risk of serious effects on the social and economic stability of many countries.

Joint Team For Civic Bargaining?

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Victoria area municipalities and school boards expect to form a single negotiating team Thursday to bargain with all their employees except school teachers, Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said today.

He said Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt have already given approval in principle to the plan and the Thursday meeting will set up some mechanism to bring it about.

The single negotiating team would bargain contracts for all police, firemen, office staff and outside workers in the four municipalities.

Custodians and office staff of University of Victoria and schools in Greater Victoria, Sooke and Saanich would also be included. Teachers would continue to negotiate separately with school boards.

The only area reported to be cool on the proposal is the municipality of Saanich.

Mayor Ed Lum said Saanich has expressed an interest in the plan but it has not yet been approved by the full council.

He said he personally favors some sort of joint approach this year but on a modified basis to cover wages only and not fringe benefits.

Lum said he hoped a joint bargaining process would not disrupt what he called "our good negotiating relationship" with Saanich employees.

Saanich had the least to gain by joint bargaining but was in a mood to co-operate, he said.

Mayor Pollen agreed the

Border Probe Asked

OTTAWA (UPI) — Canada has asked U.S. officials to report on an incident last Sunday in which a Canadian was allegedly taken from the Canadian side of the border by the U.S. border patrol and made to pay a fine in the United States.

"God damn it, we are not going to be treated like a banana republic. It is embarrassing and totally unnecessary," Saskatchewan MP Les Benjamin said after he raised the matter in the Commons.

Benjamin said the incident occured as Ed Gross, a farmer from Glen Bain, Sask., and his passenger, Ira Heebner, landed in their private aircraft on a grass strip airport about 10 miles south of Estevan, Sask.

"A U.S. border patrol officer, in his cruiser, crossed the border to Canada, turned down a lane and came 100 to 150 feet into Canada and then the border patrol officer yelled 'who gave you permission to land on this strip'?" Benjamin told the Commons.

Benjamin said Gross was escorted to the U.S. customs depot and, threatened with confiscation of his aircraft, had to leave a $25 deposit on an alleged $1,000 fine.

WHILE SUMMER has a slightly-soggy last fling in Victoria, the icy fingers of winter are already closing tightly on the rest of Canada. Schoolchildren in Sudbury this morning (above) bundled up in the wake of a four-inch plus snowfall and on the Prairies the mercury dipped to record low temperatures last night in many communities including North Battleford, Swift Current and La Ronge.

$1 Billion Mess Charged

Times News Services

An unpublished report written for a federal government advisory body states Canadian agricultural policy is a mismananaged "hodge-podge" of programs that costs the public more than $1 billion a year, according to the Toronto Daily Star.

In a copyright Ottawa story, the newspaper quotes the report as saying that consumers pay half that amount through artificially high food prices shoved up by farm marketing boards and the remainder through taxes that go to aid farmers.

The 114-page report was written by J. D. Forbes, professor of marketing at the University of British Columbia, for the Canadian Consumer Council, the paper says.

It adds that the report was submitted last May but the government has delayed publication. The report was "leaked" to the paper, it says.

A committee of the House of Commons will hold an inquiry into egg marketing in Canada, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau told the Commons Tuesday.

He made the announcement minutes after Liberal MPs rejected a Conservative motion to refer the egg controversy to the standing committee on health and welfare. (See also Page 14.)

Outside the Commons, Agriculture Minister Gene Whelan, who had stated earlier that he would recommend "some form" of public inquiry into egg marketing, indicated he would prefer an independent commissioner, under the Public Inquiries Act, to conduct the inquiry.

"I am not scared of an investigation," he assured the Commons.

TALKING BOMBS URGE CONVICT UPRISING

ROME (Reuter) — Sophisticated "talking bombs," which urged prisoners to rebel against their guards, exploded outside jails in Rome, Milan and Naples during the night, police said.

The devices, which caused no injuries, were wired to tape recorders and loudspeakers, they said.

Before one blast, loudspeakers urged prisoners to "rebel and seek freedom."

"A bomb will explode shortly," the voice said. The explosion then shattered a few windows in the jail.

Venezuelan Oil Tax Hike Nets $440M

CARACAS (AP) — The Venezuelan government is raising the tax it collects on exported oil, and a spokesman says the increase will add $440 million to its oil earnings this year.

Mines and Hydrocarbons Minister Valentin Hernandez announced Tuesday that the tax on oil produced in Venezuela, mostly by American companies, is being increased 4.7 per cent, or 41 cents a barrel — from $8.65 to $9.06 — retroactive to last Jan. 1. Monday, it was announced the tax would rise about 3.5 per cent.

The companies include Shell, Gulf, Mobil, Texaco, Sun Oil and Exxon's Creole Petroleum.

Earlier Tuesday, Kuwait took a series of moves that will mean a net increase of 75 cents a barrel in the average cost of oil produced in the Persian Gulf sheikdom in the last quarter of this year by Gulf and British Petroleum, a Gulf spokesman announced in New York.

Siege Continues

SANTO DOMINGO (AP) — The siege of the Venezuelan consulate enters its sixth day with no sign of freedom for United States diplomat Barbara Hutchison and six other hostages and no indication that the Dominican government will meet the terrorists' demands.

A BUSY DAY ONE FOR RENTALSMAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — Rentalsman Barrie Clark had a busy first day in office Tuesday.

Clark said his office received 600 telephone calls and between 50 to 100 visitors. The 20 telephone lines were jammed and another 10 lines were ordered.

The calls were handled by 14 officers, two deputy rentalsmen and Clark who has wide power over landlord-tenant matters under the new Landlord and Tenant Act, which also became law Tuesday.

Most of the calls were seeking information, but at least 100 were handled "in a mediation sense," he said.

No orders were issued in the first day of operation, but a number of the cases were not entirely resolved.

"I would anticipate that some further investigations are going to be required," he added.

"There were no crisis situations where we put to use any of the strong powers. None would be used on a first call."

He didn't think the hectic pace would last long, he said.

Conservationists Slam Dam Plan

DUNCAN — The B.C. Wildlife Federation is "appalled" at the way the Chemainus Dam project has been handled by the provincial government, federation president Ed Mankelow said here Tuesday.

A four-member action group of the federation told a meeting of 120 citizens and conservationists that the provincial cabinet committee hearing did not include any ratepayer, conservation, federal fisheries or regional district representative.

The action group's position paper said the North Cowichan municipal presentation to the cabinet was "replete with misinformation most of it in their favor.

Mankelow, and the 40,000-member federation wants the whole issue turned over to the Environment and Land Use Committee Secretariat for a thorough analysis.

Some provincial cabinet members may be ashamed of the decision to allow the dam on the Chemainus, Mankelow said.

"I have been told this wasn't a very popular decision in the cabinet," Mankelow said.

The meeting was called by Mankelow and three other members of an "action group."

The initial stage of the dam project, which would be built near the confluence of Solly Creek, would flood an area of 45 acres and provide water for some 12,000 people at a cost of $2.7 million.

"I feel personally this was a political decision rather than a decision on merit," said Art Morton, another member of the action group which includes his brother, Ralph, and Walter Lister, past president of the Cowichan Fish and Game Club.

When asked what the ordinary citizen can do about the situation, Mankelow replied:

"I'm a great believer in letters" and added that the present provincial government has demonstrated they can be swayed by public opinion.

Return Tickets, Amnesty Sought by Indian Caravan

Times News Services

TORONTO — Indian protesters from across Canada, rebuffed in their attempts Monday to storm Parliament Hill, want the federal and provincial governments to share the costs of their trip back home. (What's behind the Indian militancy? See Page 50)

And representatives of Ontario Indians involved in the protest asked the provincial government Tuesday to protect them from any prosecution that might result from the Ottawa melee in which soldiers and police drove them from the House of Commons grounds.

Those were among requests made by the Ontario group as it met provincial Solicitor-General George Kerr asking for an independent investigation of the "unnecessary violence" by police.

Kerr would not say whether the group would be protected from prosecution.

He said in an interview later he would ask federal Solicitor-General Warren Allmand for a full report on the Ottawa demonstration.

"I want it confirmed one way or another," he said.

On the other requests, he said the province does not want to give Ottawa the impression it was interferring in its jurisdiction and that he would seek an assessment from the provincial cabinet today.

The Indians reasoned that the governments should share the costs of telephone, food, accommodation and transportation back to their homes — that would mean Vancouver for more than 100 of the 500 members of the caravan.

"The human rights of the Native People's Caravan participants were abrogated," said Peter Kelly, elected representative of the Chiefs of Treaty 3 area in Northwestern Ontario.

The expenses now are the responsibility of government because the Indians were simply exercising their rights to "air their views and discontent" with the government," he said.

A precedent had been set, he said, when the province paid Indian telephone bills during their occupation of a park in Kenora, Ont., this summer.

Kelly said most of the caravan participants are unemployed and need financial help to get back home.

Militant young Indians, meanwhile, planned future action Tuesday in a warm, well-stocked Ottawa building while government leaders criticized them for their part in Monday's violent clash on Parliament Hill.

Prime Minister Trudeau and Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan said the 200 Indian men, women and chil-
